Lane Reveals Plan to Spend 200 Millions On Highways

Chesapeake Bay Bridge About Here, Governor Tells Underpass Throng

Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., said Maryland's 36-million-dollar Chesapeake Bay bridge "is about here," he announced yesterday. He contemplates a 200-million-dollar highway improvement program.

The Maryland Governor, speaking at the ceremony in celebration of Silver Spring's new Georgia ave. underpass, said also he expects highway contracts up to 50 million dollars will be let out by the State before the end of 1948.

Lane said the highway improvement program includes a bridge across the Chesapeake Bay.

"I am very much interested these days in bridges," he said. "Just as soon as we wrap up a few more little details, the State of Maryland is going to start building a bridge that has been talked about quite a little bit longer than the people of Silver Spring have been talking about this one (the underpass).

About 40 or 50 Years

"I think it was just about 40 or 50 years ago that the talk began about a Chesapeake Bay bridge. The talk is about over. The bridge is about here. In a matter of weeks, I expect to say it is here."

The bay crossing has been a subject of controversy in Maryland for a number of years. Some oppose a bridge and favor a tunnel crossing. However, Lane has persistently held out for the bridge.

It is expected that a 36-million-dollar bond issue for construction of the bridge will be floated this month and that contracts for building the span will be let before December.

It has been estimated that it will require two and a half years to build the bridge. The bridge linking Maryland's Eastern and Western Shores will be nearly 5 miles long the fourth longest bridge in the world.

Underpass "Fair Sample"

Lane told his Silver Spring audience that the community's new underpas is a "fair sample" of what his administration is doing to provide modern highways throughout Maryland under the 200-million-dallar improvement program now under way.

"The job of putting Maryland's highway system in the shape it should be to handle the traffic volume of today," said the Governor, "is a tremendous and difficult undertaking, when, at the same time, we must keep the roads we already have in good repair.

"In addition to the new highway projects which are under construction and ready for contract, the program of the State Roads Commission this year calls for the resurfacing of more than 200 miles of existing roads, and, I am glad to say, a great portion of this work already has been done."

Police Squad Seizes 19 in Raid on Hotel

Moving swiftly in 3 a. m. darkness, a special police squad of 50 men yesterday raided the Congress Hotel, 302 E st. nw., seizing 11 men and 8 women.

Fifteen of those arrested were released on personal bond to appear as material witnesses. The hotel is two short blocks from police headquarters.

Held in $1000 bond for jury trial October 29, charged with keeping a disorderly house and four counts of keeping and selling whisky illegally were Dwight E. Braden, 31, of 1417 Rhode Island ave. nw., and James A. Fleet, 45, of 1549 6th st. nw.

Two others, Herbert L. Dowling, 32, of 101 D st. nw., and Hanlon E. Davies, 35, manager of 714 Dale dr., Silver Spring, Md., were held in $500 bond apiece on the disorderly house charge.

Most of those seized as witnesses were in different stages of undress as police crashed into individual rooms where "parties" of varying tempos were in progress.

Georgia Negro Insists on Vote, Slain That Night

Mt. Vernon, Ga., Sept. 11 (AP).—A Negro father of six was shot and killed because he insisted on voting in Georgia's Democratic primary election, Sheriff R. M. McCrimmon said today.

The victim was identified as Isiah Nixon, 28, of Alston. Police held Johnnie Johnson, 22, logger, as an accessory, and are seeking his brother, M. A. Johnson, on a charge of murder.

Nixon was told, McCrimmon said, he had the right to vote but was advised not to do so. When he insisted, he was allowed to cast his ballot.

McCrimmon said the Johnsons went to Nixon's home that night and M. A. Johnson fired the fatal shots in front of Nixon's wife and children.

The primary was won overwhelmingly by Herman Talmadge, who campaigned for Governor on a platform of "white supremacy" and opposition to President Truman's civil rights program.

Driver Permit Penalties Climb 315 in Month

Suspension and revocation of District drivers' permits climbed to 899 last month, an increase of 315 over the 584 total registered in July, official figures showed yesterday.

Suspensions and revocations for accidents also swung upward, with 283 listed last month as against only 139 in July.

Permits and privileges were revoked or suspended in 518 cases growing out of speeding, the report revealed.

Two permits were suspended because of "unsound mind," while one privilege was revoked on manslaughter grounds.

Permits refer to District licensees and privileges to out-of-towners.

Silver Spring Celebrates

Silver Spring, which now ranks as Maryland's second largest city, became a main-line community again yesterday.

Its residents and neighbors, 70,000 strong, made the occasion a ringing one as the new $1,400,000 Georgia ave. underpass was opened.

Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., snipped a tape spread across the entrance to the gleaming white concrete underpass at 2 p. m. and a few minutes later his car was the first vehicle to pass through.

This ceremony was followed by a parade, a long one with a cortege of official cars, four bands and more than 60 floats. The parade wound through a mile of Silver Spring's business section and residential area to the new Montgomery Blair High School stadium.

At the stadium, there was a 90-minute program highlighted by an address by Governor Lane.

The Governor outlined the history of the construction of the new underpass and told his audience:

"I believe you'll all agree that what we have here now was worth waiting for, and worth all the trouble and inconveniences the achievement of it required."

The new underpass which Silver Spring celebrated so thoroughly yesterday goes under the Baltimore & Ohio tracks.

The B. & O.'s president, Roy B. White, said at the ceremonies that the railroad was pleased to have had a part in the project.

As part of the project, a new highway was built on Georgia ave. from the East-West hwy. to the Colesville rd.

The celebration also gave Silver Spring an opportunity to dedicate Montgomery Blair's new stadium. Yesterday was the first time the new stadium had been used for an official gathering.

Bradford Visits

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Pawling, N. Y., Sept. 11.—A strenuous campaign across the continent and up the West Coast, taking no indicated lead over President Truman for granted, was mapped today by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey with this variation:

Within limits of his physical endurance, the modified meet-the-people technique that beat Harold Stassen at his own game in Oregon will be attempted on a national scale.

His "no letdown" itinerary, with train pauses for rear-platform addresses, but few if any for an overnight rest, was disclosed as Governor Dewey relaxed at his Pawling farm after a busy 24 hours in New York.

Confers With Bradford

Gov. Robert F. Bradford of Massachusetts, old friend and a member of the executive committee of the Governors' Conference, drove as far as Pawling with him after a joint press conference in Dewey's New York apartment.

With Bradford, Dewey discussed plans to work with the Governors Conference, to wipe out so far as possible "wasteful" duplication of Federal-State functions and overlapping taxes "so burdensome to our people."

Dewey said Federal-State cooperation in this field will be one of the major tasks of his administration, if elected. He indicated this might be a job for Gov. Earl Warren in the expanded role planned for him as Vice President, but added:

"I haven's discussed it with Governor Warren. I would want his views."

Massachusetts Win Forecast

In these other developments:

1. Governor Bradford predicted a "sweeping victory" for Dewey in Massachusetts, which hasn't gone Republican in a national election since 1924. Bradford and Senator Leverett Saltonstall are up for reelection and Governor Dewey will speak in the State late in the campaign.

2. Dewey's western itinerary scheduled these major speeches beyond his previously announced September 20 Des Moines stop: Denver, Colo., September 21; Albuquerque, N. Mex., September 22; Phoenix, Ariz., September 23; Los Angeles, Calif., September 24; San Francisco, Calif., September 25; Portland, Oreg., Tacoma, Wash., and Seattle, Wash., on September 27. Rear-platform addresses will be liberally sprinkled in between. As previously indicated, Governor Dewey will follow close on Mr. Truman's heels in Des Moines, Denver, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

None recognizes more than Dewey managers the physical limitations on his recently developed "free style" of campaigning.

The shoulder-rubbing, handshaking approach Dewey first used successfully in the Far Western primary would crack any candidate's endurance if literally applied at every camapaign stop.

So the exhausting primary style

D. C. Draft Boards to Classify 24, 25-Year-Olds This Week

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

The District's 15 draft boards this week will shift into high gear with classification of the men who will answer the first Selective Service call in November.

Beginning Tuesday, and continuing through the week, the boards will meet to classify questionnaires returned by men in both the 25 and 24 year age brackets, according to Frank D. Norton, deputy District draft director.

Norton predicted that there are insufficient eligible 25-year-olds in Washington to fill the 55-man November quota. The boards, he said, would be forced to dip into the 24-year-old pool.

He said that of the 2500 25-year-old men who registered, only 198 fall into the single nonveteran class. "And a very high percentage of them," he said, "have been previously examined by wartime boards and rejected—some as many as three or four times.

Norton said most of the November call would be filled from the 730 24-year-old men in Washington who are single and nonveterans.

Draft boards expect to classify registrants at the rate of 50 to 75 in a two-hour meeting, Norton said. Once classified, registrants are notified by postcard of their status. Any registrant who objects to his classification may then appeal.

To handle questions of draft-eligible men, five telephones have been set up at local Selective Service headquarters, 1901 D st. nw., where all draft boards are located.

Boards 1, 2 and 3 may be reached on RE. 4496; boards 4, 5 and 6 on RE. 4774; boards 7, 8 and 9 on RE. 4794; boards 10, 11 and 12 on RE. 5127, and boards 13, 14 and 15 on RE. 5128. In addition, the transfer board may be called on ST. 6934.

Registration, which started August 30, will resume Monday. Men born in 1928 will sign up at centers throughout the city on Monday and Tuesday. Men born in 1929 will register Wednesday and Thursday.

Men born in 1930 before September 19 will register Friday and Saturday. Those not 18 by next Sunday are supposed to register within five days of their 18th birthday.

According to Norton, 37,000 District men have registered in the peacetime draft. He said the rate of registration indicated the total figure would exceed 50,000.

West May Halt Talks On Berlin Unless Reds Agree to Lift Blockade

Reds Charge Treaty Breach

U. S. Refuses to Send Top Man To Parley on Italian Colonies

By The Associated Press

The United States told Russia last night it is ready to send a representative—but not Secretary of State Marshall—to a four-power meeting Monday in Paris on the fate of the Italian colonies.

The Moscow Radio, meanwhile, was reported in London to have said the United States and Britain made a meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers on the Italian colony question impossible by refusing to send their top men.

In a tartly worded note, the United States rejected a Soviet contention that there could not be a full-fledged meeting of the Big Four Council of Foreign Ministers unless the Secretary of State attended.

This Government further rejected a Soviet charge that by declining to send the Secretary of State the United States violated the treaty of peace with Italy. The American note, published by the State Department, cited a section of the 1945 Potsdam agreement stating explicitly the foreign ministers of the Big Four powers could send "high-ranking" deputies to represent them at sessions of the Big Four Council.

The United States note was delivered to the Soviet Embassy. It presumably cleared the last obstacle to the meeting which Moscow asked. It wants the Council to consider one more time the disposition of the former Italian colonies before the issue is referred to the United Nations.

The wartime allies have been unable to agree whether to turn the colonies back to Italy, or to dispose of them in some other way. The Italian peace treaty provides that if no decesion were reached within one year from the date the treaty went into effect September

Plan White Paper

By R. H. Shackford

London, Sept. 11 (U.P.).—The United States, Britain and France have decided to halt all negotiations with Russia on the Berlin crisis unless the Soviet agrees to lift the Berlin blockade within a reasonable time, it was learned today.

The western powers, it was understood, will give the Soviet Union one last chance to quit stalling on Berlin and do something about it. If Russia refuses to act, the Big Three will issue a joint white paper blaming Russia for the Berlin situation, accuse Russia of violating the United Nations Charter by imposing the blockade, and refer the case to the U. N. General Assembly in Paris September 21.

Reliable informants said the Big Three have decided Russia does not want any Berlin settlement which would allow other powers to remain in the city. After nearly two months of negotiating, the western powers reportedly have reached the conclusion they are getting a "runaround" from the Kremlin.

Western envoys in Moscow, therefore, have been instructed to seek one more high-level meeting at the Kremlin, probably with Premier Josef Stalin on Monday. That meeting will be a showdown conference on Berlin.

The representatives of the United States, Britain and France will make it clear that there still is a chance for the Russians to agree to a settlement. But they will make it equally plain that this time Russia must act in lifting the blockade instead of engaging in more long negotiations.

(An authoritative source in Washington said the negotiations on Berlin would be ended within 48 hours and that the western powers will issue a white paper blaming Russia for the Berlin crisis.)

But the West really is in a weak

Jinnah, Pakistan Creator, Dies; Hyderabad Reported Invaded

Secunderabad Pictured as Goal Of Indian Troops

Karachi, Pakistan, Sept. 11 (AP).—The office of Hyderabad's agent general in Pakistan tonight quoted the Hyderabad radio as saying that Indian troops are reported to have entered Hyderabad territory.

The invasion was said to have occurred after Hyderabad's Nizam (ruler) rejected India's demand that Indian troops be stationed in the city of Secunderabad.

Indian units attacked from the Sholapur district of Bombay province and captured the village of Afzalpure on the Indian-Hyderabad border, the account said.

The agent general's office also announced that Hyderabad had been cut off from all telephonic and telegraphic communications.

Jawaharlal Nehru, Prime Minister of India, said yesterday Indian troops would be stationed at Secunderabad, in the heart of

Moslem Leader, 71, To Be Buried Today With Military Honors

Karachi, Pakistan (Sunday), Sept. 12.—Mohammed Ali Jinnah, governor general of Pakistan, died here last night at 10:25 p. m. (11:55 a. m. Saturday, EDT), of heart failure. The 71-year-old Moslem leader will be buried with full military honors in the Pakistan capital at 3 p. m. today.

(A dispatch from Karachi last night said Jinnah had arrived there unexpectedly yesterday from Quetta despite his physicians' orders. It was believed he had returned to Karachi in connection with the India-Hyderabad crisis.)

Jinnah, a lawyer by profession, was born on Christmas Day, 1876, the first child of a wealthy hide and skin merchant of Karachi named Jinnah Poonja. The word Jinnah means "lean man," and the son ultimately took it as his last name. It was a fitting name, for

Premier Takes Finance Portfolio

Queuille Forms His Cabinet, Faces Assembly Test Tuesday

By Walter Kerr

Paris, Sept. 11.—Dr. Henri Queuille, who was approved as premier of France by the National Assembly yesterday, formed his new government tonight and presented the ministers to President Vincent Auriol at Elysee Palace.

On Tuesday the ministers will return to the Assembly and ask for support of an economic and financial program which, it is hoped, will put an end to the political crisis that has disrupted this country since the middle of July.

Dr. Queuille's administration, in which he also will serve as minister of finance, is the third that has been formed since Robert Schuman was forced out of office more than seven weeks ago. Andre Marie, the Radical Socialist, lasted a month; Schuman himself came back for a week.

Now the old coalition of center parties has been reconstituted. Its life will depend upon the measures it takes to meet rising food prices and on the willingness of Socialist, Popular Republican and Radical Socialist leaders to forget political issues long enough to rebuild some degree of stability.

Dr. Queuille has a potentially strong team, but it is pretty much the same as the cabinets that preceded this one, just as its program will vary from their programs only to a slight degree.

Marie, who like the premier is a Radical Socialist, is the new vice premier and minister of justice. Schuman, a Popular Republican, stays on at the ministry of foreign affairs. The Socialist, Jules Moch, continues as minister of the interior, and the only surprise is the selection of another Socialist, former Premier Paul Ramadier, as minister of national defense.

Former Finance Minister Rene Meyer rejected this post. It puts

Rep. Vail Quotes Army Expert

Russians Got Atomic Data, Committee Told by Officer

By The Associated Press

Congressional spy investigators said yesterday that an Army expert on atomic energy is "certain" Russian agents stole some wartime atom bomb secrets.

Furthermore, Representative Vail (R., Ill.), said in a statement, this high officer was so concerned over "the intense activity of Russian espionage agents in their efforts to penetrate atomic research safeguards" that he personally reported on these activities to the late President Roosevelt and then to President Truman.

Vail did not name the officer but said he had testified under oath at closed-door hearings of the House Un-American Activities Committee in the past week. Obviously he meant Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, who directed the two-billion-dollar A-bomb project during the war.

Groves appeared before the committee Friday but merely hinted to reporters afterward that there might have been some leaks of atomic secrets.

Vail said the officer testified that Russian spies tried to get atomic secrets both "before and during his association with the project" and that he so informed the two Presidents.

"This statement," Vail said, "was a direct contradiction of Truman's contention that Communists were not involved in wartime espionage."

Mr. Truman told a news conference 10 days ago that during the war the Russians were our Allies and the Germans and Japanese were the real spies.

Vail said it would appear from facts obtained by the House Committee that "the President was either unaware of the true wartime espionage situation or is desperately endeavoring to shield

Church May Back Belief Virgin Mary Ascended in Flesh

Rome, Sept. 11 (U.P.).—Vatican City sources said today there is a strong possibility the first new dogma of the Roman Catholic Church in nearly a century will be proclaimed by Pope Pius during the holy year of 1950.

Well-informed sources said the Pope is "seriously contemplating" the proclamation of a dogma of the assumption of the Holy Virgin to heaven.

A dogma is a religious principle laid down by the church through the Pope. It is a truth which must be believed and such a proclamation is the most important act a Pope can carry out.

There is a pious belief now that the body of Mary, mother of Jesus, was taken wholly into heaven without disintegration, but, so far, it is not a dogma.

The last dogma proclaimed by the Roman Catholic Church was that of the Immaculate Conception by Pope Pius IX in the famed papal bull of December 8, 1854.

It was pointed out the assumption of the Virgin to heaven, has been accepted spontaneously by the faithful and high church officials who have pleaded for its announcement as dogma for more than a century.

More than 3000 petitions for a dogma have been sent here, supported by 113 cardinals, 18 patriarchs, 32,000 priests, 50,000 clergymen and 8,000,000 faithful.

Revercomb, the Devotee of Beef Stew, Jousts With Neely, of Bean Soup Fame

After six years, Capitol Hill connoisseurs of bean soup still blame Senator Chapman Revercomb for the loss of the tang in their favorite dish as prepared by the Senate restaurant.

True, the embattled Republican from West Virginia had no finger in the pot. All he did was to cook the goose of Matthew M. Neely, then seeking reelection as Democratic Senator from the Mountain State. It was Neely, a devotee of hambone savored bean soup, whose gustatory genius had guided the hands of that once-famed Senate porridge. Incidentally, Revercomb prefers beef stew.

SEN. CHAPMAN REVERCOMB
Embattled Republican

Revercomb and Neely are now once again jousting among the hills of West Virginia, both eager to re-don the senatorial togs, but alas, bean soup is not the issue. And as to Revercomb's stand on the Displaced Persons Act—denounced by both President Truman and Governor Dewey—why, that isn't really much of an issue either, according to those acquainted with the West Virginia brand of politics. They say that West Virginia's miners and farmers don't give a bean about displaced persons.

Personality Battle

If anything, insist the politically savvy, the issue is Revercomb vs. Neely, whatever their conflicting views on displaced persons, the Marshall Plan, and so forth. They cite the fact that West Virginia elected in Revercomb a vigorous anti-New Dealer, and yet a few years later elected as his associate in the Senate, Harley M. Kilgore, a vigorous pro-New Dealer.

Chapman Revercomb stems from a rare genus of Virginia, a family of stalwat Republicans. His father was for years the lone GOP member of the Virginia State Senate. The tribe is peculiar to the mountainous western end of the Old Dominion State, around Covington where the Senator was born. Here there were few slaves and few adherents to the cause of the Confederacy.

Revercomb went West—a hop, step, and jump over the State line into nearby Charleston, W. Va.—at the age of 27. By this time he'd been educated at Washington and Lee University, granted a law degree by the University of Virginia, and served with the A. E. F.

He's "Chappie" to Her

In Charleston, Revercomb practiced law; married his Virginia sweetheart, who still calls him "Chappie" and entered politics via the Young Republican League.

His first bid for Statewide office, the Republican nomination for Governor in 1936, was unsuccessful, but six years later Revercomb drubbed former Senator-Representative-Governor Neely in a surprise victory and went to Washington.

A 6-footer, solidly built, hair thin and graying, always dressed in dark double-brested suits, the West Virginian made a handsome addition to the Senate Club. Today, at 53, he is one of the more distinguished looking members of the upper chamber—as can be proved by scrutiny of the scores of autographed photos of colleagues which peer down from his office walls.

Prossessor of a deep voice, the Senator is a soft, smooth speaker, gracious and courteous to colleagues even in the heat of debate. Critics of the Senator assert that he overdoes the sauvity to the point of being unctious.

Stalks His Opponent

Both on the rostrum and in the Senate chamber, Revercomb paces back and forth as he speaks. Sometimes, in directing his speech at a Senate opponent, he will stalk around his antagonist's seat, never taking his eyes off the target. Now and then he'll display a characteristic nervous gesture; plunging his hands into his pants pockets and shifting his trousers a bit upward, left or right. When aroused, he'll raise his arms, hands rolled into fists, up above his head and bring them down—without a bang—to emphasize the point.

An aloof-seeming individual, Revercomb is, according to his friends and staff workers, a congenial person who calls you by your first name.

On speaking tours, the aristocratic appearing Senator tries to dodge banquets and prefers to stop at a roadside eatery for hamburgers and hot-dogs, which he smothers with mustard, relish, and what have you. At the end of such a trip, he heads for his home in Charleston, breaks for the kitchen, and whips up a steaming beef stew, described by aides who've feasted on it as "delicious."

Keeps Touch With Home

A father with strong attachment to his family, Senator Revercomb discourages his four children from coming to Washington—he lives at the Westchester—and encourages them to gather 'round the Charleston hearth, when they get away from school. (Bill's at Columbia, George is at Princeton, Anne is at Hollins, James is at Greenbrier Academy.)

Friends and foes agree that the West Virginian is an indefatigable driver—he heads six committees, subcommittees, and commissions on Capitol Hill—and has "the constitution of a horse" for work. The foes say all this activity is for reaction; the friends say all this activity is for the good of the country.

But even his boosters can't help being wistful about the bean soup.

Slav Protest Rejected by Hungarians

Budapest, Hungary, Sept. 11 (AP). Hungary rejected today the recent protest note from Yugoslavia, and said the note's real purpose was to hide the anti-Soviet policy of Marshal Tito and his government.

Yugoslavia charged on August 27 that attempts were being made in Hungary to incite a revolution against the Tito regime.

In a verbal answer delivered to the Yugoslav charge d'affaires here, the Hungarian government rejected the Yugoslav accusations as "unfriendly, untrue and malevolent" and added their aim was to "disguise the anti-Soviet policy of the present leaders of the Yugoslav Communist Party."

(A similar Yugoslav note to Romania also has been rejected by the Communist-led government in Bucharest. The notes were dispatched after Romania and Hungary upheld the Cominform action charging Marshal Tito with being anti-Soviet and deviating from the Marxist-Leninist line).

The Hungarian reply emphasized the "unchanged friendly attitude of this country toward the people of Yugoslavia" but said these feelings did not exclude the "necessary criticism of the policy of the Yugoslav Communist leadership."

The reply cited the recent action of the United States in releasing some 30 million dollars in monetary gold to Yugoslavia as proof the "leaders of Yugoslavia's Communists joined the imperialists."

(The gold had been sent to the United States in 1942 to keep it out of Axis hands. On Marshal Tito's side he agreed to hand over 17 million dollars within a six weeks period to pay for American property taken over by the Communist regime in Yugoslavia."

Marshall Not Going to Parley

15, 1947, the U. N. should get the dispute.

Lewis W. Douglas, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, is expected to represent Marshall at the Paris meeting. The State Department, however, had not received confirmation yesterday he could attend.

Just why Moscow insisted on calling the meeting continued to puzzle American diplomatic authorities. Their guesses ranged from the idea Moscow wanted to make new propaganda approaches to Italy, sought to delay Moscow talks on the Berlin crisis by sending Foreign Minister Molotov to Paris, or merely wanted to make sure Russia carried out the exact letter of the peace treaty stipulation.

The Moscow broadcast, quoting a Tass dispatch from London, said Britain "has followed the same path" as the United States in refusing to send its Foreign Minister to Paris for the proposed meeting.

It was reported yesterday in London that Hector McNeil, secretary of state under British Foreign Secretary Bevin, would arrive in Paris today to attend the meeting.

The Moscow radio previously announced that Russia had dispatched a note to the United States protesting the fact that Marshall would not attend the conference.

The Soviet note, however, also said the Soviet government was willing to meet with other representatives of the three western powers even if the conference is not considered a council of the Foreign Ministers. The note said Russia "will not object" to meeting without Marshall.

As the matter now stands, a meeting of the Big Four to discuss the question of Somaliland, Eritrea and Libya is tentatively scheduled for Monday in Paris.

Secret Airfield Equipment Stolen At Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Manitoba, Sept. 11 (AP).—The Winnipeg Free Press said today secret airfield equipment has been stolen from Stevenson Airport and Royal Canadian mounted police are probing the possibility a foreign power may be responsib.

The newspaper said Transport Minister Lionel Chevrier confirmed there had been a theft of important parts of the new instrument-landing equipment, and quoted him as saying: "The RCMP are still investigating."

"The Transport Minister said he understood the RCMP believed the thefts could have been made by 'some amateurs working on radio at home.' However, Mr. Chevrier admitted the stolen equipment would be of 'no use' to an amateur radio man."

U. N. Appeal on Blockade May Hinge on Parley With Stalin

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

Weeks ago the United States proposed taking the Berlin blockade to the United Nations, but the British and French were cool to the idea. Now the three allies are believed ready to go to the U. N.—if they have to.

Whether they have to will depend largely on the outcome of the meeting that the three ambassadors in Moscow were instructed on Friday to seek with Premier Josef Stalin.

Secretary Marshall and his chief assistants spent yesterday at the State Department, presumably drafting instructions to Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith on what to say.

In the morning the Secretary saw Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who had conferred on Friday with Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and John Foster Dulles, his foreign policy adviser.

Sees Vandenburg Two Hours

Vandenburg spent more than two hours with Marshall and with Undersecretary Robert A. Lovett and Counselor Charles E. Bohlen. Later the Secretary saw Sir Oliver Franks, the British Ambassador, who was able to bring him the consensus of opinion from the British Cabinet's special meeting on Friday.

Behind the western allies' decision to go to Stalin, and to the U. N. if necessary, is deep resentment and exasperation at the course the Russians have been pursuing.

Stalin talked to the western envoys last month as if he wanted a settlement, and suggested that "recent" technical difficulties in Berlin over the currency and over rail traffic should be settled by the four military governors.

Accordingly, the negotiations were shifted to Berlin, but Marshal Vassili Sokolovsky, the Soviet commander, interpreted the word "recent" so narrowly that the western commanders got nowhere at all.

Not content with stone-walling the four-power discussions, the Russians incited the Communists in Berlin to capture the City Hall with the clear intent, according to Secretary Marshall on Wednesday, of breaking up the negotiations altogether.

Reasons for Feeling

These are some of the reasons why the western allies feel they have been the victims of deceit and double-dealing worse than anything they have endured at the Russians' hands since the end of the war.

Again and again the westerners have been tempted to break off negotiations that so clearly were leading nowhere. But just as often they have remembered the importance of keeping the record straight and clear, for their own peoples and for the judgment of history.

This explains, in part, why the three governments went through so many weary discussions in Moscow and Berlin, why they tried to keep restraint in all their public utterances on the subject, and why they are now seeking still another meeting with Stalin.

It also explains the report from London — officially unconfirmed here, like almost every other report from abroad on the Berlin crisis—that the three western allies may soon issue a joint "white paper" to lay the record bare. A diplomatic "white paper" usually consists of the official record of negotiations that otherwise would be kept secret.

In the present case there is confidence here that the official record will justify what the western allies have tried to do, and will amount to an irrefutable indictment of Soviet bad faith.

Majority Felt Assured

Assuredly the record will be laid before the United Nations if, as now seems likely, the western powers bring their case against Russia to the Assembly.

It is true that the U. N. Assembly can only recommend action, and that its decisions cannot have the binding force of a Security Council vote. Nevertheless, all three western governments think Russia dreads being brought before the Assembly for a moral judgment in which the majority will most assuredly be against her.

In the meantime, the gigantic airlift to Berlin will continue. If the Berlin case goes to the Assembly, and if debate there drags on for months, the American and British Air Forces are confident of maintaining and even increasing their supply operation, which on Friday brought 5000 tons of food into the blockaded city.

With all its risks and hardships, the airlift has a double virtue in American and British eyes. It keeps more than two million people in the western sectors fed, and it dramatizes the blockade for the people of Germany and all the world.

So there is no thought here, or in London or Paris, of stopping the airlift if negotiations with the Russians should break down. On the contrary, every effort will be made to increase it to 7000 tons a day if possible, and to keep it up through the bad weather that will soon see in.

Yanks Warned To Expect Worst If War Comes

Grafenwoehr, Germany, Sept. 11 (AP).—Two American generals told officers of the United States First Infantry Division today to expect the worst if war breaks out in Europe, saying American soldiers lack the planes and guns that make up a real punch.

The speakers were Maj. Gen. Frank W. Milburn, division commander, and Brig. Gen. John McKee, former commander of the Eighty-seventh Infantry Division.

The opinions came out of a survey of the famed division's conduct in a three-day mock-war in which it got kicked around by an "aggressor" force.

The maneuver problem assumed a striking force of great power from the East, with the United States Infantry trying to delay the sweep towards the Rhine.

Smashing of Berlin 'Reaction' Vowed

(From Press Dispatches)

Berlin, Sept. 11.—As Berlin braced itself for a big Communist demonstration Sunday, a high Soviet official declared tonight that the Anglo-American "camp of reaction" in Berlin would be smashed by the Soviet Union.

West-sector German police were alerted for possible trouble during or after the big Red rally in the Soviet sector. The Soviet-licensed press was urging workers to "deliver a decisive blow against the newly awakened Fascist reaction in west Berlin."

Under the slogan "anybody who doesn't march Sunday is a Nazi," the Communists were reported to have ordered even children out for the rally.

Reflects Kremlin Policy

The speech attacking and threatening the Western powers in Berlin was made today by Col. Sergei Tulpanov, chief of the political division for German affairs of the Soviet military administration. It was the most aggressive speech ever made here by a responsible Russian official and is of significance because Tulpanov has always reflected Kremlin policy to the letter.

American officials frankly stated that the situation had become "highly dangerous," with Germans meeting under one power to demonstrate against another power.

The Sabbath demonstration is set for the Lustgarten (Garden of Pleasure), about a half-mile inside the Soviet sector of Berlin. The rally was called to protest Thursday's anti-Russian mass meeting which touched off street fighting.

After the most violent week in the 79-day-old Soviet blockade, Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States military governor, said:

"Mass demonstrations are not the way to solve the present Berlin situation."

The Americans planned to imitate the British and ban any demonstrations in the United States sector within "incident range" of the Russian boundary. Both British and Americans acknowledged that it was difficult to prohibit anti-Communist outbursts altogether in view of the Russian-backed drive to oust the elected city government.

Unconfirmed reports state that Sunday's demonstrators at the Soviet-sector rally may seek to march on the Allied control authority building in the United States sector to lodge a protest.

Ordered to Attend

It was reliably reported tonight that factories in the east sector have ordered their employes to attend the rally on the pain of "consequences." It is also reported that trains tonight reached Berlin from the Soviet zone bearing "spontaneous demonstrators."

Colonel Tulpanov, addressing a congress of the Victims of Fascism, declared that the Anglo-Americans have caused "an open battle to take place between the progressive elements of the German people and the followers of reaction."

"The camp of reaction, led by the Anglo-American monopolists," Tulpanov told a cheering audience at the State Opera House, "restores all the institutions of fascism and openly issues calls to war. . . . But the force of the Soviet Union has smashed the military, political and economic machinery of the Third Reich. It will smash those who are creating the Fourth Reich."

Boasts of Firm Allies

Tulpanov pointed out that "No other army in the world has such experience in fighting reaction as the Red army and no other power has such firm allies all over the world as has the Soviet Union."

The Soviet press, including the trade union "newspaper," "Die Tribuene," accused the Western powers of unleashing terror and murder as weapons against the workers.

Far more alarming than the accusation was the demand made in almost all the Russian-controlled press for "retaliation."

The Russians are seeking to blame Thursday's shooting incident on the Western Allies and west-sector policemen.

The Germans, long split along east-west lines, this week grew bolder as a result of the four-power snarl. For the first time they physically attacked Russian troops, showering them with rocks after Thursday's anti-Communist demonstration. Germans ripped the Red flag from atop Brandenburg gate. They stoned a Russian war memorial.

Advised to Pull It Down

Today the Christian-Democrat newspaper went one step further. It advised the Russians to pull down the massive monument which they proudly erected to the conquest of Berlin.

"The Soviet military administration in Berlin has made every conceived mistake," the newspaper said. "This monument is the worst. Never before in Europe has a victor erected a war monument in the capital of the conquered."

A British-licensed newspaper said the Russians had repatriated thousands of members of the Paulus-Seydlitz "free Germany" army, infiltrating them into the police forces throughout their zone. The report was given credence in Allied intelligence quarters.

The move would give immediate strong-arm support to communism in the zone. A more distant and more vital objective could be to set up the nucleus for a Communist army if the western Allies agreed with Russia to pull out occupation forces.

Formed After Stalingrad

"The Free Germany" Army was formed after Stalingrad and is composed of Germans who have been converted to communism.

[The United Press said the British-licensed newspaper Telegraf reported that 5000 heavily armed special police have been mobilized by Russian occupation officials to crush food riots in the Soviet zone.

[A Telegraf dispatch from Fuerstenwalde in the Russian zone said machine guns and grenade throwers have been issued to veterans of the "Seydlitz army."]

Davis, Ordered Out of France, Seeks U. N. Refuge

Paris, Sept. 11 (AP).—Garry Davis, a young American who renounced his citizenship at the U. S. Embassy here May 25, said tonight he had been ordered out of France.

He said he planned to take refuge tomorrow on United Nations soil in Paris, which is to be host to the U.N. General Assembly session opening Sept. 21.

Davis, 26, is the son of an American orchestra leader, Meyer Davis, and himself a wartime flier and former Broadway actor.

He said he renounced his citizenship and gave up his passport "to focus the attention of men upon the vital need for a world government to avert the coming war."

Today he said that "since I cannot legally leave this territory" he saw nothing to do but stay there until the Assembly made a "constructive move" toward a world government or failed to.

London Nearly Rebuilt

London, Sept. 11 (AP).—Health Minister Aneurin Bevan said today he expects every London house destroyed in the war to have been replaced by the end of this year. An estimated 100,000 dwellings in the London civil defense area were destroyed and about 1,650,000 damaged by German bombs.

Socialists Ask United Europe

Duesseldorf, Germany, Sept. 11 (AP).—Socialists from 11 European countries pledged today to work for a united Europe dedicated to opposing dictatorship in any form.

The action was announced at an open air meeting attended by almost 100,000 persons which set in motion a four-day convention of the German Social Democratic Party.

Charges that the German Social Democrats were directing a spy ring in the Soviet zone of Germany were vigorously denied.

Franz Neumann, Social Democrat delegate from Berlin, accused German "quislings" in the Soviet zone of recklessly carrying out Russian orders.

Neumann said only 10 per cent of the Berlin voters would go on record against the Western principles of democracy in an election.

"But behind these 10 per cent stand the bayonets of the Soviet occupation power," he said.

Greetings were extended by delegates from Britain, France, Sweden, Italy, the Netherlands, Denmark, Austria, Belgium, Switzerland and Luxembourg.

Schacht Has German Plan

Hamburg, Germany, Sept. 11 (U.P.).—Dr. Hjalmar Horace Greeley Schacht, financial wizard of the Nazis' rise to power, today said he wants to spend six months in a good library working out the details of his secret theory for restoration of German economy.

Schacht, who is credited with inventing the German brand of economic warfare, became a free man 10 days ago.

Schacht, 71, has been offering financial advice to the Allies, and although they have listened to what he had to say, Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military governor in Germany, said none of his suggestions were being taken.

Schacht said he has had no job offers from German financiers or economists since he got out of jail. He added that publishers in Sweden have been bidding for rights to his memoirs.

Slavs Set Up Defense Claim

Athens, Sept. 11 (AP).—Observers of the United Nations Commission on the Balkans (UNSCOB) reported today Yugoslav soldiers told them they were attempting to drive Greek forces from Yugoslav soil in Wednesday's bloody border clash.

The UNSCOB observers investigated the clash when the Greek government protested that Yugoslav soldiers "invaded" Greek territory and were slain by Greek forces. The observers said they found 20 bodies of soldiers in Yugoslav uniforms, several hundred yards inside Greek territory.

The UNSCOB group questioned three captured Yugoslav soldiers who told them 471 Yugoslav troops had been ordered to drive Greeks out of Yugoslavia.

The UNSCOB report said: "They were driven off by Greek defensive fire, leaving behind the dead."

Berlin Crisis Proper Matter For U. N., Hatch, Conally Say

Rome, Sept. 11 (AP).—Two leading members of the United States Senate's Foreign Relations Committee said today the Berlin crisis should be placed squarely before the United Nations if direct negotiations fail.

"Settlement of the Berlin situation is certainly in line with the objectives and purposes of the U. N.," said Senator Carl A. Hatch (D., N. Mex.) "It is a threat to world peace and as such should be taken to the U. N. if all other efforts at solution break down."

Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), former chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and former U. N. delegate, suggested "reunion now of the Big Four foreign ministers might precede reference of the Berlin crisis to the U. N."

"Failing there," he added, "the entire mess should be aired before the U. N. General Assembly." The Assembly convenes September 21 in Paris.

The two are members of the 14-man American delegation to the Interparliamentary Union Conference here.

Showdown Near on Berlin

position. Physically its position in Berlin can be made almost untenable if the Russians so choose. The most the western powers can do is to threaten to hale Russia before the United Nations, and it will not be a very effective threat if the Russians really don't want a settlement.

The Western powers fear the worst. Virtually all hope of settlement appears to have been abandoned. But the West is committed publicly to every possible diplomatic avenue in search of a settlement.

The Big Three may set a time limit on the showdown meeting in Moscow. The feeling is that they will ask the Russians for a definite "yes or no" answer within a reasonable time on whether the blockade will be lifted.

United States Ambassador Lewis Douglas, French Ambassador Rene Massigli and Sir William Strang, German expert of the British foreign office, met at the foreign office last night. They were understood to have covered the entire field of possibilities in the Berlin situation.

The big four military governors of Germany have suspended their efforts to reach an agreement on lifting the blockade. It was learned that their talks bogged down on three issues:

1. Trade. Russia insisted that the Soviet zone economic commission should manage all Berlin's trade.

2. Transport. The Soviets agreed to a proposal that all railway corridors to Berlin be placed under four-power control, but refused a Western suggestion that they be double-tracked.

3. Currency. Russia demanded that the Western mark and the Soviet mark be kept at the same value so that they can be exchanged on a one-for-one basis.

Energetic, capable young man with a sound background in public relations, publicity, fund-raising and campaign organization, presently employed, seeks new position.

Ferguson Hits Calm On Inner Perils

Houghton, Mich., Sept. 11 (AP).—Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) said today "there is a lack of appreciation of the peril to our institutions from within by those in control of our destiny."

Ferguson, in an address at the dedication of Houghton County international airport, said Canada has done a better job than this country in guarding against Communist infiltration.

The Senator is chairman of a subcommittee of the Senate Executive Expenditures Committee which has been inquiring into the Government's loyalty program. He has repeatedly criticized President Truman and the Justice Department for refusing to give the committee information on the program which he says it requires.

World Faces Conflict

"The world today faces a conflict in ideologies between the Soviet Union, her satellites and those scattered throughout the world, even within our own borders, who believe in her ideologies, and this country and those who believe as we do," Ferguson said.

"We have an ally in Canada to the north in the protection of our institutions. She has demonstrated beyond doubt that she is alert and has taken steps to prosecute those who would spy upon her and destroy her institutions.

"I cannot say the same about America today."

Thinks Congress Is Awake

He said he thinks Congress is "awake" to the danger.

Ferguson said Congress also is fully aware of the need for air power, and has provided an air force ready "to defend the United States in any foreseeable emergency." But he added:

"Airplanes, ships and guns alone will not save America. It takes more than that. It takes inspired citizens, ever alert to the defense of our institutions."

In Canada Row

Rail Clerks' AFL Union Is Suspended

Ottawa, Ontario, Sept. 11 (AP).—The executive of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada (AFL) suspended the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks today in a row over the Communist issue.

The big International union was suspended for failing to repudiate recent actions of its Canadian vice president, Frank Hall, who engineered a merger last week of the Seafarers International Union (AFL) and the Canadian Lake Seamen's Union.

The merger was aimed at knocking out the Canadian Seamen's Union (CSU), an affiliate of the congress. The CSU has been accused of being dominated by Communists, but the congress has had a policy of supporting a CSU fight for recognition by several lake shipping companies.

Hall's action was indorsed by officers of 23 congress unions last week. Then the congress president, Percy Bengough, called the executive. The executive ruled that Hall had been in "direct and flagrant violation" of the congress' constitution in bringing about the merger.

The executive action was a rebuke to the 23 officers supporting Hall and a move to head off an uprising over communism at the Congress' convention in British Columbia next month. Nenther Hall nor any other delegate of the railway steamship brotherhood will be able to attend the convention unless it overrules the executive's finding.

the Socialists in charge of two key ministries.

The only new minister considered really sympathetic to Gen. Charles de Gaulle is Claudius Petit, an Independent Socialist, who was named minister of reconstruction.

All of the 15 ministers are members of the coalition except Petit and Robert Bertolaud, a rightist deputy of the Republican Party of Liberty, who is in charge of veterans' affairs. The first cabinet meeting will be held Sunday afternoon.

That the whole administration may expect to run into early trouble was indicated this evening when the non-Communist labor federation, Workers' Strength, renewed its campaign for higher wages, despite Dr. Queuille's announcement he preferred a policy of cutting prices.

While Dr. Queuille was filling his cabinet, Gen. Charles de Gaulle was continuing his campaign tour in southeast France, calling for dissolution of the assembly and new national elections.

ERP Nations To Work Out Currency Swap

Paris, Sept. 11 (AP).—Having agreed on division of American air funds, western European nations today turned their attention to exchange of currencies to back up their American-financed recovery program (ERP).

Robert Marjolin, secretary general of the European Economic Cooperation Organization (OEEC), in announcing the OEEC's accord on allocations for the 1948-49 program, said currency exchange was the next hurdle in Europe's attempt to coordinate its reconstruction.

The 16 countries and three military regimes participating in the ERP must now, he said, establish the mechanism for trading currency so as to promote the freer and greater flow of goods and services among themselves. This must be done before the complete program can be finally submitted to the American Administration.

Figures on the division of the $4,875,000,000 American aid fund as announced by Marpolin differed in only a few points from those released by OEEC officials early today.

Britain Is Chief Donor, Recipient in ERP Plan

London, Sept. 11 (NYHT).—Britain emerged today from the exhaustive and difficult Paris negotiations over division of American aid in the dual role of chief recipient and contributor of the European Recovery Program.

On the one hand, the original British request for $1,271,000,000 from the American aid pool has been approved by the Paris office of European Economic Cooperation almost intact—$1,263,000,000 to be exact. On the other hand the British have increased considerably their own contribution to intra-European trade, agreeing to grant credits to Europe amounting to a net figure of 282 million dollors.

This will be by far the largest contribution to European recovery outside that of the United States, although Belgium, in proportion to its size and economic strength, is a heavy contributor with $207,500,000 in credits. The British, however, will be unblocking another 100 billion dollars in serling balances in London as a further contribution to intra-European trade, so that the gross British contribution is nearer 400 million dollars.

Russians Got Atomic Data, Officer Says

his Administration through such a generalization from justified public censure."

Vail quoted the high Army officer as telling the committee that "Japanese espionage was either nonexistent or unworthy of mention during the wartime period while German espionage was of negligible and relatively unimportant proportions . . .

"According to the testimony of the officer he was certain that in some degree Russian efforts to penetrate atomic research safeguards were successful. To what degree he could not venture an opinion."

The Un-American Activities Committee intends to pry more deeply this week into the question of atomic espionage as a prelude to resumption of open hearings. The public hearings have been scheduled for Wednesday.

As to what secrets on atomic development the Russians might actually have got, the committee had little to say. All that the members have been willing thus far to offer is that they have testimony to the effect that some atomic scientists leaked information to the Russians and that some shipments of uranium compound and metal were made to Russia during the war.

Groves said he did not now recall any uranium shipments to the Soviets.

Vail was asked whether there was any reason to believe the Russians were aware of the atom bomb project from the beginning.

"Well," he answered, "you can take the statement of this high-ranking officer that espionage activities were in progress prior to his becoming affiliated with this project."

Vail said the atom bomb work began before the Manhattan Atomic Project was organized to carry through with the development of the bomb. He said there was an interval of several months between the start of the work and creation of the Manhattan Project headed by Groves.

King-Size Blimp Ordered by Navy

The Navy Department yesterday announced award of a contract to design the largest blimp ever planned. The work has been given to the Goodyear Aircraft Corporation.

The new semi-rigid will have nearly twice the capacity of the smaller of the two types used during World War II for shore patrol. It will be capable of long-range patrols over open ocean areas. Its range will be well over 2500 miles without refueling, and it will be refuelable in the air.

It will be the first of a series designated as the "N" type. The envelope will be 324 feet long and 71 feet wide, with a capacity of 825,000 cubic feet. Type "K" in use during the war had capacity of 456,000 cubic feet, while the larger "M" type was rated at 725,000 cubic feet. Cruising speed in both was 50 knots, which presumably will be about that of the new type.

Creation of the new blimp type is another sign of the importance attached by the Navy to antisubmarine warfare. The blimp is particularly adapted to search and detection of submarines. It is at the moment the only instrument which shows promise of being able to deal with the new long-range high-speed, deep-diving submarines. It is no secret that the Russians have more than 250 submarines, some of which are of these advanced types.

The function of the blimp is to detect the submarine, keep on its track and radio its position to surface forces and aircraft. Its capacity for hovering enables it to investigate every suspicious shadow in the water. Ordinary airplanes now are too fast to do that. In addition, the blimp is an admirable platform for new and highly sensitive radar equipment.

This new heavy equipment and the desirability of pushing patrols farther out into the ocean created the need for the larger type. The number of crewmen is 14, the same as in the "M" type.

Blimp achievements in the last war were conclusive demonstration of their usefulness in anti-submarine work. Not a single United States ship convoyed by blimps was lost through submarine action. Only one American blimp was lost through enemy action. This was on the night of July 18, 1943, when K-74 detected and engaged an enemy sub on the surface in the Caribbean. She was brought down by the sub's gun when her bomb bay failed to release while over the U-boat.

At the beginning of the war the Navy had only six blimps large enough for service at sea, and there were 5000 miles of sea frontier on two oceans to be patrolled.

Consequently the submarines moved right in along the coast, lay off great harbors and in 1942 sank 454 merchant ships. By 1944, however, the number of airships operating in Atlantic areas had risen to 68 and the number of ships sunk dropped to 8. The submarines had been driven back out to sea.

In all, United States blimps escorted 89,000 ships' voyages during the last year, extending their activities even to the Mediterranean.

Wright Plane Returning on Anniversary

BACK ON THE BEAM—The Wright brothers plane—pictured December 17, 1903, at Kitty Hawk, N. C., in the first flight of a heavier-than-air machine—will be formally placed on display at the Smithsonian Institution December 17, the forty-fifth anniversary of the flight. In this famous picture, Orville Wright was at the controls. Wilbur ran beside the plane. The brothers would not go up together, knowing that both would be lost if a fatal accident occurred. The plane is to be returned from the English Science Museum at South Kensington

Wrights' Kittyhawk Plane Comes to Rest Here Dec. 17

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

The pioneering Wright brothers' original Kittyhawk plane is expected to be formally placed on display at the Smithsonian Institution December 17.

Plans for return of the plane, now at the science museum, South Kensington, London, will be announced within the next few days, perhaps jointly by the late Orville Wright's heirs and executors, the science museum and the Smithsonian.

December 17 is the forty-fifth anniversary of the first flight of a self-powered machine carrying a man—Orville Wright.

It is also the day when the Collyer trophy, awarded for achievement the value of which has been demonstrated by use during the preceding year, is made at the White House; the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences holds its annual meeting, and the Aero Club of Washington its annual dinner.

The plane has been at the British museum since 1928, Orville Wright sending it there because of a longstanding dispute with the Smithsonian, which he believed had detracted from the credit due him and his brother Wilbur. Return of the plane, perhaps by the Queen Mary, will mark the ending of the old quarrel.

The plane, which will be the brightest gem in the Smithsonian's collection of aircraft, for the present will hang in an honored spot alongside Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis," which first soloed the Atlantic.

Eventually it will be the star exhibit in the proposed National Air Museum, toward which Congress has already appropriated some funds. The proposed museum will accommodate 200 planes, among them the Wrights' military plane of 1909 and the B-29 Enola Gay, which dropped the first atom bomb on Hiroshima.

The Wright brothers' interest in planes began in childhood when their father brought home a toy with a propeller wound up by rubber bands and wings of bamboo and tissue paper.

It fascinated the boys, who were of mechanical and inventive minds, and they experimented in building others.

Years later, while operating a bicycle shop, they followed with interest the gliding experiments of Otto Lilienthal, and after his death in a glider accident in 1896 they wrote to the Smithsonian Institution asking what literature on flying was available.

They began studying and experimenting in the physics of flying, and in 1903 made their historic flight against a 27-mile wind on the beach at Kitty Hawk—just nine days after Samuel Pierpont Langley made a highly publicized but unsuccessful attempt with his "aerodrome," which crashed into the Potomac on its attempted takeoff.

Smithsonian Secretary

Langley, who had veen elected secretary of the Smithsonian in 1887, died in 1906. Wilbur Wright died in 1912.

The dispute between Orville Wright and the Smithsonian broke into the open in 1918, but there had been cause for bitterness before that.

In 1914 the Smithsonian contracted with Glenn Curtiss to test the Langley machine, which had been placed with the Smithsonian 10 years before by the War Department for further tests. Unfortunately, Curtiss was engaged in litigation with Orville Wright over plane patents at the time, and Wright considered the move unfriendly.

Purpose of the experiments were partly to test certain aspects of the design of the Langley plane and partly to rescue Langley's reputation from ridicule, if the tests were successful.

The Smithsonian following the tests said the original attempts to fly the machine had failed because of a defect in the launching apparatus, but the new tests were successful.

Langley Given Palm

In 1918, the Langley machine was placed on display in the United States National Museum with a label that described it as "the first man-carrying aeroplane in the history of the world capable of sustained free flight." This was the final straw for Orville Wright, who, in addition to his other feelings in the matter, thought it an injustice to his dead brother.

In vain, the Smithsonian pointed out that in 1910 it had given gold medals to the Wright brothers, had honored them with displays and in their publications. Orville Wright was not appeased.

In 1928, the Smithsonian issued a pamphlet giving an account of its relations with the Wright brothers and considerably modifying the statements made years before. It also changed the label on the Langley exhibit. In 1942 it issued another pamphlet in which it was acknowledged that in the 1914 experiments some changes had been made in the Langley plane. Full credit was given the Wright brothers.

Showed Change of Heart

Following Orville Wright's death January 30 it was learned that in his will, drawn up in 1937, he had directed the Kitty Hawk plane remain in London unless he subsequently requested otherwise, and that in 1943 he had advised the London museum that he wished the plane to be returned after the war.

In a later, unsigned will he also provided for the return of the plane to the United States.

Thus it would appear that the numerous attempts to conciliate Orville Wright by the Smithsonian, its acknowledgment of the Wrights' historical priority in its pamphlet of 1942—as well as the attempts at mediation by private parties—had softened his heart.

When the Kitty Hawk plane, which has been copied by the British DeHavilland company for the Science Museum, comes home it will mark the end of an old and unfortunate dispute.

Hurricane Brews East of Miami; Ships Warned

Miami, Fla., Sept. 11 (AP).—An Atlantic storm, about 1100 miles east of Miami, has grown into a full-fledged hurricane with 115-mile-an-hour winds in the center.

In an advisory issued at 5:45 p. m. (EST), the Weather Bureau said the "severe storm" had been accurately located by reconnaissance planes at about 530 miles northeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico, and moving northwestward at 18 to 20 miles an hour.

Aircraft probing the heart of the storm found winds up to 115 miles an hour in the center and heavy squalls and gale winds (up to 65 miles an hour) for some 200 miles north and east of the center.

It was expected the hurricane would continue its forward movement on the northwest path for at least 12 to 18 hours.

"Caution is advised all shipping in the path of this severe storm," the advisory warned.

St. Laurent Takes Canadian Premier Duties Monday

Ottawa, Sept. 11 (AP).—Louis Stephen St. Laurent in effect will begin his career as Canada's Prime Minister Monday.

St. Laurent is acting Prime Minister with the departure of William Lyon Mackenzie King for Paris and the United Nations meeting. King, who has been Prime Minister 21 years, is returning in November, when he will formally turn his job over to St. Laurent.

King stepped down last month from the leadership of the National Liberal Party, which he held for 29 years. On his recommendation, the party chose St. Laurent, the External Affairs Minister, as his successor.

Lester Bowles Pearson, 51, will succeed St. Laurent as Secretary of State for External Affairs. Pearson left the post of Ambassador in Washington two years ago to become Undersecretary in the External Affairs Ministry.

Pearson will seek a House of Commons seat in a by-election October 25 in the Ontario district of Algoma East. The present liberal member from that district has been appointed to the Senate.

Draft Boards To Start Work

quarters was completed last week with the appointment of Lieut. Col. Walter S. Welsh of the Army Judge Advocate General Department, to serve as legal counsel and chief of the manpower division. As such, he will work closely with Norton and District Draft Director William E. Leahy in the general operation of selective service here.

Colonel Welsh's appointment was made possible through the action of Leahy in waiving his pay. Leahy, who headed the draft here during the war and also waived his pay then, said that admission of Colonel Welsh to the staff in the same post he held in World War II will greatly facilitate the District draft operation.

Through the end of fiscal 1949, District Selective Service will operate on a budget of slightly less than $75,000.

Export Agency Lacked Funds, Sawyer Says

By The Associated Press

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer yesterday blamed congressional neglect of his department in 1946 and 1947 for export control irregularities now under fire on Capitol Hill.

A Senate investigating committee has been looking into reports of forged export papers and other documents being used by some shippers to get scarce goods out of this country.

Sawyer, labeling the committee's inquiry "another show" for possible election year purposes, said:

"In 1946 and 1947 Congress slashed the export control appropriation to a starvation level, so that it was physically impossible either to employ the people or buy the equipment needed to make controls fully tight and effective.

"The Office of International Trade for two years and more existed on a beggar's rations and occupied a death cell.

"All of the irregularities complained of occurred in those years. Every one is the direct or indirect product of congressional neglect."

Sawyer's reference to the OIT having occupied a "death cell" was apparently based on the fact that at one time Congress extended the trade office's life for 15 days while debating whether to discontinue its functions.

Sawyer said the impressions given the public by the current Senate hearings "are so misleading and false that some statement of fact as distinguished from innuendo is called for."

In connection with one irregularity about which he learned within the department he said a former employe of the Office of International Trade had admitted favoritism in granting two export licenses.

Sawyer said this employe was promptly suspended when the department found out about the situation, although he said the committee knew of it and failed to inform the department.

Meanwhile the Commerce Department announced that its export regulations will be tightened up effective Thursday.

U. S. Blocks Shipment Of Czech Baggage

By the United Press

The United States has blocked shipment to Czechoslovakia of five packing cases of "diplomatic baggage" entrusted by the Czech Embassy to a "courier" holding the rank of brigadier general, it was learned yesterday.

The proposed shipment was stopped at a New York pier August 31 by customs officers. The Czech Embassy protested to the State Department, but the cases still have not been cleared for transfer to Prague.

Reliable informants, who declined to be identified, said the shipment included machinery and electrical goods which presumably would require Government license for export.

Reserve Given 'M-Day' Role

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Army announced yesterday that it had adopted plans to give the Organized Reserves "an important role" in its M-day mobile striking force.

Many Reserve officers, it was said, are receiving mobilization assignments in Organized Reserve units in which they will serve in the event of an emergency.

Officials said that President Truman—himself a Reserve officer—had directed the Army to speed up plans to give Reservists a definite M-day role.

Failure of the Army to take such action before has led to much dissatisfaction among the officer veterans of World War II. The problem has been complicated by insistence of the National Guard that its service retain the major portion of M-day billets.

Inquiry at the Pentagon revealed that plans for utilization of the Reservists are by no means complete and that the whole matter is to be threshed out at a National Guard-Reserve conference next month.

"In general," said the Army announcement, "mobilization assignments will be given Reservists in units supporting combat divisions of the M-day force. In other instances, assignments will be made to training units especially organized to train officers according to their military specialties.

"Where assignments of this nature are prohibited by geographical residence of the individual officer, assignments may be made to authorized governmental agencies necessary for national defense, or to posts, camps and stations near their homes."

UAL Requests Surcharge End

United Air Lines announced yesterday that it has asked the Civil Aeronautics Board for permission to remove its extra fare charge for high speed flights on DC-6 transports.

Unless the CAB objects, a spokesman said, the reduction will become effective Tuesday. Normally 30 days' notice is required.

One flight which would be affected leaves the Washingtaon National Airport daily and one arrives. The DC-6's, 300-mile-an-hour ships, operate between here and San Francisco.

American Airlines recently asked the CAB to approve a "first of the week family fare plan" on its routes, making it possible for wives and children 21 years old or less to fly at half fare on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The latest United request would remove the 10 per cent "premium" which passengers have been paying for the DC-6 rides.

U. S. Asked to Leave Korea

Seoul, Korea, Sept. 11 (AP).—The Russian-sponsored North Korean government today demanded that American troops get out of South Korea.

It said the Russian occupation forces in the north had announced last may they were ready to leave any time the Americans would do so.

The demand was contained in a broadcast from the North Korean radio, quoting a letter that it said the North Korean regime was sending to the United States.

Both the north Korean government and the American-sponsored republic in the South profess to represent the entire country. More than two thirds of the population is in the south.

South Koreans have asked the Americans to remain, withdrawing gradually as the small South Korean army grows.

The actual withdrawal program may be determined by action of the United Nations General Assembly in Paris later this month.

The north Koreans announced today that they, too, would seek U. N. recognition as the sole Korean government.

Indian Leader Reported Dead

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
ALI JINNAH
Governor General was 71

Pakistan's Founder Dies

Jinnah was a hollow-cheeked man more than 6 feet tall.

He was educated at Karachi and in England and became a practicing lawyer in 1896. He was highly successful. In 1916, he was elected president of the All-India Moslem League, with 100 million members, and eventually led it in fulfilling his dream of creation of the Moslem state of Pakistan.

Early in his career he sought Hindu-Moslem unity, but came to despair of this, believing that his people would become subordinate to the Indian Hindus who were almost three times as numerous.

Jinnah's followers called him "Qaid-i-Azam," which means great leader.

He became wealthy and established two palatial homes. His wife died several years ago. He broke with his daughter, who adopted Christianity after marrying a Parsi. In recent years he had lived alone with his sister.

Jinnah opposed the late Hindu leader Mohandas K. Gandhi's non-cooperation movement against the British government. He finally broke completely with the All-India Congress in 1921, declaring that Gandhi's non-cooperation movement would intensify India's religious division.

He returned to England and practiced law there for several years.

In 1928, he returned to India and plunged into politics. He continued to lead the Moslem League throughout the years and in 1940 began an active campaign for Pakistan.

Jinnah wore stylish Western clothes but lived simply. He spoke effectively and was an able organizer and administrator.

His opponents often accused him of siding with the British in Indian affairs. Gandhi charged that he "looks to British power to safeguard Moslem rights," but Jinnah replied that the Moslems depend on their own "inherent strength."

Jinnah had ambitious plans for his new country. They called for the fastest possible industrial development and exploitation of natural resources, especially oil and coal, with the aid of Western powers.

Soon after Pakistan, Jinnah ordered strict repressive measures to prevent any rioting in Karachi such as had occurred in New Delhi, capital of India, following the partition of the subcontinent. As a result, he had some success in halting the flight of Sikh and Hindu residents of Pakistan who were needed for their manpower and handicraft.

Invasion Reported

Hyderabad, regardless of what happens.

"We do not expect an easy march to Secunderabad," Nehru said.

The Nizam of the big, south-central princely state is a Moslem and has refused to accede his land to the predominantly Hindu dominion of India. The people of Hyderabad are mainly Hindus. The whole state is surrounded by Indian territory.

(Official sources in Madras, India, said today the Nizam had cabled India's governor-general that the entry of Indian troops into Secunderabad "will be resisted." The Nizam also informed India he had ordered the mobilization of his forces to meet any eventuality, these sources said.)

The Moslem exodus from India to Pakistan, which recently stopped, had begun again.

The steamship Kampala arrived in Karachi today with 1500 Moslems aboard. Other vessels are plying between Karachi and Bombay. Americans among them, arrived in Madras yesterday and others were expected today or tomorrow. The evacuation of Britons and Americans was ordered with the steady deterioration of relations between India and Nizam.

Shipowners Refuse To Deal With CIO

San Francisco, Sept. 11 (AP).—West Coast shipowners today refused to deal with striking CIO longshoremen on handling Army cargo piling up in Pacific Coast ports.

The Waterfront Employers Association and shipowners made their decision after Secretary of the Army Royall yesterday referred a union-Army agreement to West Coast stevedoring firms to resume work on Army cargo on the basis existing before the strike.

The employers announced they were standing fast on their refusal to deal with Harry Bridges' CIO longshore union until union leadership signed non-Communist affidavits under the Taft-Hartley Act.

Waterfront Statement

"This industry," a joint waterfront statement said, "has made a decision with respect to Army cargoes.

"It will not continue to handle them if it requires dealing with Communist Party-line labor leaders, self-sworn to the destruction of the American merchant marine."

"This decision is made on these grounds:

"1. It would not be in the best interests of the Army mission to resume the handling of its cargoes if it required again saddling the operation with harrassment and sabotage of Communist Party-line labor leadership.

"2. From our experience and knowledge of transport we are satisfied that our decision will not materially hamper or delay the Army program.

Industry Will Aid Army

"The industry will make arrangements with the Army to supply gear, equipment and administrative personnel to handle its cargoes."

Immediately, the longshore union replied that its position continued to be one of readiness to negotiate an "interim" agreement for duration of the strike with any firm having a contract with the Army.

It charged that the employers' offer to supply cargo-handling gear to the Army was made for "strike breaking purposes, and characterized the shipowners attitude as one of 'to hell with the Army.'

"It is now up to the Army to decide whether it will require performance of contract between itself and the steamship companies, or develop other means to move cargo," the statement added.

Only a few hours before the employers' statement was issued, Bridges had sent a telegram to President Truman accusing the shipowners of "stalling" on the Army matter, and of trying to divert Army cargo to East Coast ports.

The shipowners, in their statement, accused Bridges of "14 years of sabotage."

"Because of his 14 years of sabotage to this industry," the statement said, "and his last act in calling the strike without a strike issue, we have at long last resolved that we can't do business with communism."

In New York, meanwhile, new agreements between striking truckers and 226 individual trucking concerns were expected to send 2000 of some 9400 idle truckers back to work.

However, little or no progress was reported in other labor disputes across the Nation.

The CIO oil refinery workers strike against six major oil producers in California entered its second week today with no settlement in sight. A gasoline rationing plan was announced and California began importing the motor fuel from Oklahoma.

Rival telephone unions planning new wage talks with the Bell System hinted that a nationwide "demonstration" may be called to enforce their pay demands.

World Output Catching Up With Demand

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Production is beginning to catch up with consumers' demands all over the world.

But don't expect to drop into the nearest store and walk out with just the item you've been wanting. And don't be lulled into thinking lower prices are right around the corner.

Within the week the National Association of Purchasing Agents reported bituminous coal easier to obtain. And the Department of Commerce has just reported "the acute shortage of lumber in this country is over."

At the same time, farm and forest products, textiles and some heavy chemicals and building materials began edging into a buyers' market after a long heyday during which the seller had it all his own way. Competition in many lines began building up.

Prices are still at high levels, but despite that the consumer, while turning a little more choosy in making his purchases, still is spending his dollars pretty freely.

The real shortages are in the metals fields.

That includes steel, an industry that is basic to almost every other. And it appears it may be some time before supply and demand get close in that sector.

Continuing reports of increases in the dollar rate of retail sales indicates that buying is holding up in some lines.

The National Industrial Conference Board reports retail sales reached an annual rate of 127 billion dollars during the first six months of this year. At least part of that figure, however, represents higher costs of living.

In 1929, the prewar peak, only about $48,500,000,000 moved across retail counters.

Auto Installments to Change

By The Associated Press

These new Federal Reserve Board rules for buying automobiles on the installment plan will go into effect September 20:

A down payment of one third of the cash price must be made on pre-1938 models, used or new 1949 models, or other new cars. For 1938-1948-model cars the down payment must be either one third the cash price or one third the "average retail value."

If the balance after the down payment is over $1000, 18 months will be allowed for full payment. The period will be 15 months if the balance is less than $1000.

"Average retail value" is determined by checking official price guides the Reserve Board listed along with its announcement of the new installment regulations the board specified that States east of the Mississippi River use the American Auto Appraisal market analysis report.

All areas may use the Bluebook (executive edition), Redbook used-car market report, National Automobile Dealers Association official used-car guide; effective October 1, the Official Automobile Guide (price edition) and Official Automobile Price Guide (price edition).

Democrats to Fight Louisiana Action

By The Associated Press

The Democratic National Committee called on Louisiana voters yesterday to overturn the "flagrantly dishonest and fraudulent" barring of President Truman's name from the State's ballot.

In a hotly worded statement threatening possible court action, William J. Primm, jr., assistant to National Chairman J. Howard McGrath, challenged action of the State's Democratic Committee in substituting the States' Rights ticket for the Truman-Barkley combination.

Primm said this "high-handed and arbitrary act" had "deprived the people of Louisiana of a free ballot," adding:

"This action cannot be tolerated and will not be tolerated by the people of Louisiana."

"Fraud on Own People"

Primm noted that States Rights Party supporters had qualified under Louisiana law as a separate party, choosing 10 electors for Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi, their nominees.

He said the State Democratic Committee by its action in approving this slate had "committed a fraud on their own people."

"The Dixiecrats have every right to form a new party," he declared, "but the tactics they are employing in taking over the Democratic Party machinery in certain States and thereby depriving the people of those States of a free ballot is intolerable. Such methods are flagrantly dishonest and fraudulent."

Primm promised that "every legal means at the command of the National Committee" will be used to get Mr. Truman back on the ballot in Louisiana.

Asks Resignations

He topped this threat of court action with another call for Democratic Committee officials who are supporting the States' Rights ticket to resign their party posts. Primm said this would apply to William H. Talbot of New Orleans, Democratic national committeeman, and a member of the Louisiana State party's executive committee.

Asked what would happen if Talbot and others refused to quit, Primm pointed to a section of the national party's by-laws. This gives the National Committee the right to expel members who don't support the regular Democratic nominees.

Merrit H. Gibson, States Rights national campaign director, said in a statement that the Louisiana action puts 45 Southern electoral votes "in the bag" for the Thurmond-Wright ticket.

The States Righters meanwhile came up with a new wrinkle in Georgia. They predicted the State Democratic Committee there will name 12 unpledged electors, whose names will appear under Mr. Truman's on the ballot.

But the catch would be that the electors would vote for Mr. Truman only if his defeat otherwise was assured. If Thurmond needed their vote, it would be the understanding he could have it.

This plan would carry out the anti-Truman fight but would let the electors off the hook as "bolters" if their votes weren't needed to defeat the President.

New Illinois Threat

There news elsewhere was good—and bad—for Mr. Truman.

The New York State CIO Political Action Committee added itself to the lists of organizations formally supporting the Truman-Barkley ticket.

But in Illinois, Henry Wallace's Progressive Party carried to the State Supreme Court its fight for a place on the ballot. The State Certifying Board had turned down the party's petition.

Democrats have been fighting to keep the Progressives off the ballot in critical Illinois. If the Wallace group gets on most political observers think the balance would be tipped steeply for the Republicans, who already are claiming they will sweep the State.

Mr. Truman meanwhile pointed up some of his Western tour speeches in a weekend rest on the presidential yacht Williamsburg. He starts out Friday for Dexter, Iowa, to open his tour with a farm talk there.

Virginia Young Democrats Shift Meeting Dates to Call Off Thurmond Speech

Richmond, Va., Sept. 11 (AP).—The executive committee of the Young Democratic Clubs of Virginia turned thumbs down today on an already accepted invitation of States' Rights Presidential Candidate J. Strom Thurmond to address its State convention here October 8.

The committee's action was taken by the expedient of postponing the October 8 and 9 convention to dates to be selected later by a subcommittee. The vote was 8 to 6.

Miss Genevieve Boguess, honorary secretary of the Young Democrats, said later, however, that the South Carolina Governor would address a banquet here as planned under "some other sponsorship." Miss Boguess, chairman of the committee on arrangements for the convention, said all plans for the banquet meeting had been made and would not be called off.

The Young Democrats' president, Thomas Odom of Suffolk, extended the invitation to Thurmond after a committee meeting last month at which the group voted 12 to 2 to support the presidential slate of the regular Virginia Democratic Party.

Odom, who said repeatedly that the invitation was extended by him as an individual under his presidential prerogative, told the committee, at today's stormy four-hour session:

"I was hoping I wouldn't have to say this. But the convention dates have been set and I have invited Governor Thurmond to speak. If this motion (to postpone) wins I intend to see that the convention is held and that Thurmond speaks and those Young Democrats can come who want to."

Later when the atmosphere had cooled somewhat, Odom said that "for the sake of harmony in the organization I yield to the majority of the executive committee and will name a committee on arrangements for the later convention."

Action on the motion to delay the convention came on the motion of Vice President Stuart A. Eacho of Richmond. He granted that the invitation to a convention speaker was within the president's authority, but added that it was no more proper for Thurmond to speak than it would be for Governor Dewey of Henry Wallace.

Eacho also directed some of his fire at Cloyd Martin of Radford, secretary of the Young Democrats, who is serving also as secretary of the States Rights Party in Virginia.

Maine Casts Vote Monday

Portland, Me., Sept. 11 (AP).—Maine's first-in-the-Nation election campaign came to a virtual close tonight with both parties hoping Monday's balloting will produce trends pointing to success in November's national election.

Republicans, confident of electing Representative Margaret C. Smith the State's first woman Senator, appealed for a better-than-usual majority. Democrats, who have not won a major political office in Maine since 1934, voiced optimism.

The campaign, less vigorous than in late years, brought up few national issues

Democrats concentrated their final drive in industrial southwestern Maine. Dr. Adrian H. Scolten, Democratic senatorial candidate, asked in a Portland speech if the laboring man knew "that Mrs. Smith voted against him and for the Taft-Hartley Act?"

New York Employes Have Liberal Leave

(Editor's Note: This is the fifth of a series. To find out what kind of a boss Thomas E. Dewey would be to 2,200,000 Federal workers, Jerry Kluttz interviewed New York State employes, their organization leaders and civil service officials, at Albany.

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Next to being fired, the Federal worker fears the loss of hard-won employment benefits by a change in Administration.

There is considerable speculation now, for example, over possible restrictions on annual and sick leave. Two congressional committees are studying the matter.

However, if elected President, Thomas E. Dewey couldn't get too excited over the liberality of the Federal leave system. Here's why—his New State employes spend less time on the job than do Federal workers. This is a brief comparison of the leave systems:

New York gives its employe 20 days of annual and up to 12 days of sick leave compared with 26 annual and up to 15 days sick leave for the classified Federal worker. But the New Yorker works a 5-day, 37½-hour week compared with a 5-day, 40-hour week for the Federal worker.

Summed up, the average classified Federal worker will put in at least 50 hours more annually than the New Yorker. It could befi of course, that Dewey would want to reduce both the work week and leave, similar to the New York practices.

TOP PAY: On this score New York is far ahead of the Federal Government. Under Dewey's leadership, five salary grades for high-ranking employes and officials were set up which are: $12,500; $15,000, $16,500; $17,500 and $20,000. In addition, the officials are given an annual expense account of $2400 each.

The nominee already has revealed he would move to raise the salaries of Federal officials from their present impossible levels. But here again he'd tangle with the hardshells in Congress like Senator Byrd (D., Va.) who has the peculiar idea that it's economy to drive out able people from the Government by paying them salaries they can't live on.

RANK-AND-FILE PAY: Dewey set up a permanent salary board in 1946 to make the first comprehensive survey of the wages paid New York State employes. It's shocking, but no real study has ever been made of all Federal worker salaries.

Anyway, the New York wage board reformed the State pay structure. It was responsible for the abolition of the many services and grades and the simplification of the classification job structure into a single salary plan. Also, its work led to a sizable pay raise for most all State workers a few months ago, considerably more of an increase than was voted Federal people.

Before Dewey would attack the troublesome Federal salary problem on a broad scale, Civil Service people here predict he would appoint a board to make study and to recommend changes to him.

TRAVEL ALLOWANCE: Several weeks ago Dewey ordered a satisfactory $9.50 daily allowance for State employes who are ordered to travel on official business. The Governor's aides could hardly believe me when I told them that the pinch-penny Congress put a $6 daily limit on travel—and it applied to both cabinet members and the lowest paid employes. They all agreed that Dewey, if elected, would try to get Congress to be a bit more reasonable on this problem.

OVERTIME: Most classified Federal workers get a better break on overtime pay. In New York, overtime isn't paid until the employe works at least 40 hours in a single week, and then the rate is merely straight time. But it's a good bet that tens of thousands of hours of unpaid overtime are worked in the Federal Government. In the State Government there is very little "voluntary" overtime in comparison.

UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION: Under Dewey's leadership, the State workers were brought in under the Federal-State system of unemployment compensation. In other words, an employe who loses his State job would get the unemployment benefits as a private employe.

AWARD BOARD: Dewey set up a merit award board to reward State employes for meritorious suggestions and for outstanding work. Some Federal agencies have similar recognition plans. Even though they have the authority, others have simply refused to put the plan into effect.

PERSONNEL COUNCIL: The Governor set up a personnel council in New York similar to that operated in Washington for Federal agencies. The council here, however, has the authority to settle employe grievances when they can't be disposed of in their agencies. It meets each month to discuss common personnel problems. Dewey would be sure to support the Federal Personnel Council, a small outfit that has taken a beating from Congress.

VETERANS are treated quite differently in New York than they are by Uncle Sam. In the first place, preference for State jobs will expire in 1950 unless it's continued in some form through a constitutional amendment that must be approved by the voters.

A veteran also must get at least a passing mark on a Civil Service exam before he'll be considered for a job. No points are arbitrarily added to his grade. A disabled veteran who passes goes to the top of the list and the able veteran is certified next for a job, and the nonveteran last in order of their grades. In other words, veterans who pass the exam are given absolute preference. The same applies to promotion exams once they are in the service.

In making lay-offs, the reverse order is true, the nonveteran, able veteran, and disabled veteran are bumped in that order. Several bills have been drawn to amend the State preference law and there are indications a battle on it will be made in the Federal service before many months.

BUDGET: It has broad powers over salaries and promotions in New York State. All allocations, reclassifications, and promotions must have the approval of the budget which holds a veto over the Civil Service Commission.

RETIREMENT: If Dewey is elected, Federal worker groups would be wise to work for some of the retirement benefits available to New York State employes such as:

Death benefits which are equal in most cases to half of a year's salary; accidental disability retirement on a pension up to three quarters of one's salary at any time after he takes a job; retirement at 60 regardless of years of service; a plan which permits employes to borrow money from the State at a low interest rate on their retirement accounts, and a "self-audit" plan whereby each employe is sent an annual record of his retirement account.

SUMMARY: From the record it's easy to see that New York's State employes under Dewey are treated about as well—and better in some respects—than Uncle Sam's workers. With this background, it really would be a big surprise if Dewey as President would try to take away benefits from Federal workers.

(The final column in the Dewey series will appear tomorrow.)

'Messed Up,' Farm Editor Tells Dewey

Houston, Tex., Sept. 11 (AP).—Farm Editor Leon Hale of the Houston Post today declined Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's invitation to come to Pawling, N. Y., to discuss farm problems.

Answering what he said was the longest telegram he had ever received—and the first from a Republican—Hale wrote Dewey:

"Sorry, I can't make the meeting up at your place. There's a county sheep-dipping scheduled out at Tomball on the 18th and I couldn't miss that. Then on the 19th I've got to interview the old lady who raises red hogs up at Dime Box in Lee County.

"I don't have to come to Pawling to tell you how the farmers down here feel about the Government's agricultural program. Most of them I've heard talk figure it's about as messed up as it can get.

"So don't worry too much about making the farmers mad if you're elected. They don't figure a Republican President could make it rain any more than a Democrat.

"You might think about trying to do something about these bull calves. All the dairy cows down here have taken to having bull calves, and if the Government doesn't do something about it, where is the milk coming from four or five years from now? Have you had this trouble on your place?"

American Held in Mexico

'Meet the People' Technique Planned in Dewey Campaign

will be tempered for the long-distance national run. As one spokesman put it, Dewey's campaign will be geared for a marathon rather than a 100-yard dash.

He will do a lot of mixing and make many more rear-platform speeches than he did in 1944 within limits of his stamina and physical well-being.

Some in the Governor's advisory circle who traveled with the late Wendell Willkie eight years ago, recalled the over-strenuous start of that 1940 campaign. Willkie thrust aside microphones and tried to make his voice carry to the crowd. He woke up next morning without a voice.

Would Sell Personality

Actually, as the cards stack up now, the Dewey people see no need for any strenuous effort whatever on the Governor's part to win this election. They have long regarded it as a campaign to assure him a Republican majority in the Senate rather than the usual White House race.

But they are guarding against any mistakes of overconfidence. As one put it: "The most difficult campaigns to win are those you have already won."

The accent on "meet the people" has a dual purpose in Dewey's case.

First, the Governor tried it and was good at it in his Nebraska campaign, and later clinched the No. 1 spot in Oregon by running there like a handshaking alderman.

Second, the Dewey people are out to prove to the country he's a mighty likable fellow when you get to meet him.

They believe the voters are pretty well sold on his skill as an administrator but are wondering a little about the No. 2 point.

Vice versa, they say the voters may well doubt Mr. Truman's skill as President but generally think he's a "nice guy."

They are out to show their man is not only an ace administrator but a "nice guy" as well—that the "cold Dewey" is a slanderous legend.

Certainly it seems a more diplomatic Dewey who will meet the people this time, but those around him say the human side was there right along and the campaign will further bring it out.

They say the main difference in the 1944 candidate and the Dewey of today is this: he is four years older, and that much more mature, experienced and relaxed.

As one aptly phrased it: "He's no longer trying to shoot down all of the glass balls at once with his .22."

He still plugs relentlessly at unsolved problems, but he does it in stride. Today's conference with Governor Bradford was an illustration of this. He first started to work for elimination of Federal-State overlappings at a conference with Republican Governors after his nomination in 1944. Today he was still at it.

He told reporters he called Governor Bradford to his apartment for a thorough discussion of "frictions," irritations and wasteful conflicts.

In the Federal-State field, he said both agreed they could be solved by closer cooperation between the national administration and the Governors.

Among the knottiest Federal-State problems his "next" administration and the Governors hope to iron out, he said, are:

1. Overlapping taxes — which field should be left to the State and which to the Federal Government.

2. Social security—constant conflicts between the Washington social security set-up and the 48 State offices.

3. United States Employment Service—although turned over to the States it is Federally financed. Dewey thinks it's "sort of a hybrid arrangement and can be made to function better."

Whistle Stopping

San Francisco Patriots Are About to Invade Us

By Orval Hopkins

OPERATING on the solid, if somewhat used, theory that when you get to be 100, it's time to blow louder than ever on your own horn, a delegation from San Francisco is blowing into our town on Thursday.

The group will be headed by the city's mayor, Elmer E. Robinson, and it is confidently predicted that everybody will be at least chin-deep in warm handshakes, hearty whacks on the back, and booming hellos. The idea of the landing is to whoop up the Portola Festival and Pageant, a month-long racket which is starting in San Francisco on October 2. American Airlines is bringing the delegation in on Thursday in time for lunch at the Sheraton and I, as a native son of California, and a long-time supporter of Frank O'Doul's Seals, have been invited. (My connection with the working press has nothing to do with the case, needless to say.) The Seals—I mean these people from San Francisco—are bringing their own chef with them (probably don't trust our bunch—you got to be canny to survive in California).

COOPERATING to extend the season, Wildwood (N. J.) officials have taken to calling this month the "30 golden days of September." They're poets, that's what—all these publicity people. . . . The National Federation of American Shipping, which believes in telegraphing its punches, has taken a firm stand in opposition to increased toll charges on the Panama Canal. . . . In the parks today: Tour of Washington Civil War Defenses, starting at 1416 F st. nw. at 9 a.m. Bring your lunch. "Indian Hunt" in vicinity of University of Maryland starts at 3 p.m. Meet at Fisheries Building on the campus or catch a bus at 1416 F at 2:15. Horse-drawn canal barge trip leaves at 2 p.m. from Foundry Branch dock at Canal rd., Foxhall rd. and M st. nw. and returns from Lock 5, Brookmont, at 4:30. Lock 5 is near stop 24 on the Glen Echo carline. . . . The Keystone Automobile Club is all burned up because a city ordinance in New Orleans requires all out-of-state motorists to log in with the cops if they're to be in the town more than 24 hours. New Orleans says the system "helps trace stolen cars," etc. . . . and Keystone says there is "absolutely no merit" in that explanation. Keystone has my vote, if that's any comfort to 'em.

A NEW RESORT called Tower Isle is scheduled to open in December on the north shore of Jamaica, B.W.I. The site is 50 miles north of Kingston. . . . Northwest Airlines will begin a world-transportation-on-credit plan on October 1. You just place $425 gently on the barrelhead and claim your card. . . . Though you may not have heard, the winter tourist season at St. Petersburg, Fla., officially opened September 1. The change was marked only by the date on the calendar, according to the St. Pete News Service, and we therefore earnestly salute St. Petersburg. . . . The West Virginia feeder calf and cattle sales start at Jackson's Mill on September 23 and 24. Other sales this month will be held the 27th at Lamberton and the 29th at Spencer and Ronceverte.

Polo Player to Wed Miner's Daughter

STEPHANA SAJA
Another "Cinderella"

Daytona Beach, Fla., Sept. 11 (AP).—Tall, blonde Stephana Saja, 23, daughter of a Pennsylvania coal miner, will marry Francis Hitchcock, wealthy polo player, here next week.

It will be Florida's second rich man-poor girl marriage this year involving a coal miner's daughter.

Fabulously wealthy Winthrop Rockfeller wed the former Barbara (Bobo) Sears of Noblestown, Pa., coal mining community, a few months ago.

Stephana, of Ruthenian-Russian descent, and Hitchcock could not be reached for comment today. Friends indicated the ceremony would take place here next Wednesday or Thursday.

Hitchcock has been enrolled as a law student at Stetson University in nearby Deland, his private plane is berthed at the airport here.

First announcement of the betrothal came today from Stephana's mother, Mrs. Mary Saja Turk, 58, of Windber, Pa., a coal mining village. She still lives in the neat, small house where Stephana was born January 9, 1925. Her first husband died a few years ago and she married Steve Turk, 60-year-old miner, last year.

Stephana went to New York to become a secretary in a Wall Street brokage firm after her graduation from Windber High School in 1943, Mrs. Turk said.

Hitchcock, a brother of the late Tommy Hitchcock, internationally famous poli player, was divorced from the former Mary Atwell in 1934. He later married Mary Grammer, a model.

Father Anastasius Bandy, pastor of the Greek orthodox church at Jacksonville, reported that Hitchcock asked him to perform the wedding ceremony. Bandy said he was forced to decline because Stephana changed her membership in the Greek orthodox church to membership in the Roman Catholic church 10 years ago. Hitchcock is a Roman Catholic.

woman made a dive for an open window as raiders entered. She had one leg over the sill as, kicking and screaming, she was dragged back.

In the meantime, the second floor was the scene of similar action. As police hammered on doors demanding entrance and breaking in when their demands were not immediately met, another nude woman burst out of a room, tore herself away from a bluecoat, and scampered barefoot down the corridor, shouting as she ran—right into the waiting arms of another raider stationed at the turn.

The foray had been organized with minute care by Sixth Precinct detectives operating out of No. 1 Precinct, in cooperation with Night Inspector Oscar J. Letterman and Lieut. David McCutcheon, acting captain of No. 1.

Undercover Man Lived There

An undercover man had been living at the hotel for two weeks collecting evidence and working on floor plans.

When the raid was called, each man was given a floor plan and assigned to cover a specific area of the hotel while a cordon was thrown around the outside of the building.

The raiders were armed with two warrants—one charging operation of a disorderly house and the other, a commissioner's warrant charging liquor law violations.

Two known prostitutes were among those arrested as witnesses, police said, and two other known prostitutes have been living at the hotel.

A 17-year-old girl occupying a room with a marine was among those taken into custody and released.

All appeared yesterday before Municipal Judge Aubrey B. Fennell, who set bond and the date for jury trial for the four charged.

Among evidence picked up in the the raid was a prostitute's financial journal showing $80 earned in a week with $37 spent for "beer, whisky and tips" and $23 for "rent."

Included were notations reading, in part: "Sunday, $31; spent, $9; Wednesday, $40; spent $24; Monday, $46; spent $8 . . ."

2d Blast Feared

8000 Taken Off Volcanic Isle by U. S.

Manila, Sept. 11 (AP).—One United States Army transport removing 8000 refugees from the volcano-ravished island of Camiguin tonight and another was en route to help rescue additional thousands.

Mount Hibokhibok, which has been erupting since September 1, continued to fume, but Philippines government experts said its gases no longer were deadly.

A landside had filled one of the volcano's craters reducing the eruption but increasing the potential danger. Fear was expressed that a terrific eruption might occur if pressure increased beneath the plug. The transport General William Weigel radioed it was removing 8000 persons from Sagay to Mindanao.

The transport General C. Morton sailed from Manila to aid the work.

Athens, Greece, Sept. 11 (U.P.).—Athens was shaken today by a three minute earthquake which set chandeliers to swaying but caused no known casualties and no serious damage.

Siamese Twin Girls To Remain Joined

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 11 (AP).—Dr. Thomas M. Spaulding said today that Siamese twin girls born to a Holt, Mich., couple would be joined together as long as they lived.

The babies were reported in poor condition in Edward Sparrow Hospital here, where they were born September 5.

"The babies are joined at the pelvis and lower abdomen. They have a separate upper abdomen, chest, head and arms," Dr. Spaulding said.

The rare birth occurred to Mrs. Robert Rick, wife of a Lansing truck driver. The young wife was reported in good condition.

Red Blood Cells Must Be Kept Up If You Want To Feel Alive

Thousands Now Regaining Old Time Pep, Vigor and Drive By Releasing Vibrant Energy To Every Muscle, Fibre, Cell

Overwork, undue worry, and lack of certain foods often reduces the red-blood strength—and starved, weak, puny blood just hasn't the power to keep up your energy and drive.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that S.S.S. Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the S.S.S. Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, S.S.S. Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on S.S.S. Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. S.S.S. Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Alexandria First

City fathers of Alexandria are having themselves quite a time over the matter of time. It all began last spring when the ordinance promulgating daylight saving was being drafted. Whether through a determined effort to make Alexandria different or through a casual slip of the municipal pen, the law was passed to return the city to standard time on September 6. The more laggard communities of the country, including Washington, observe the later date of September 26.

Although it is many a municipality's dream to be first in the Nation, this achievement seems not to be an unmixed blessing in Alexandria. For while the bulk of Alexandria residents probably have only an academic concern in it, municipal employes understandably have been in something of a dither. Should they obey their clocks or the law? For bus lines it has been even more confusing. It is now possible, for example, for a bus leaving Washington for Alexandria to arrive before it starts. Happily the question has been resolved—for city workers at least—by a ruling from the city manager setting clocks back an hour but instructing employes to come to work an hour earlier during the interim.

At least one effect of this little interlude should be to bring about a more sympathetic understanding on the part of Alexandrians of what railroad ticket agents go through each spring and fall. But there is a more philosophical implication in the affair, alluded to by one of our contemporaries. It suggests that the ordinance may be construed to mean that Alexandria has abolished time altogether. If so, the city has something. There's never enough of it to go around these days anyhow.

Vice President

Much interest is being manifested in Governor Dewey's promise that, if he is elected in November, he will make his running mate, Governor Warren, a full partner in his administration. Efforts in this direction have so often failed in the past that Mr. Dewey will face a real challenge. He is certain to be reminded that John Adams resolved to make his running mate a real partner and that Jefferson, the Vice President, balked the plan by declaring his office to be "constitutionally confined to legislative functions." Nor will the experience of the two Roosevelts be forgotten. Theodore Roosevelt had favored a formal Cabinet post for the Vice President before he went to the White House but quietly ignored the idea when he found himself at odds with Vice President Fairbanks. Franklin D. Roosevelt set a new precedent by giving his second Vice President, Henry Wallace, definite executive assignments and was later embarrassed by the necessity of removing Mr. Wallace from the chairmanship of the Board of Economic Warfare because of a feud between him and the Secretary of Commerce, Jesse Jones.

Harding, too, had promised to make his running mate an "assistant President," but he went no further than to invite Vice President Coolidge to sit with the Cabinet. That practice, to be sure, has become a valuable precedent, but something more is needed if the Vice President's talents are to be properly used and if he is to be prepared to take over the reins in case of emergency. If Mr. Dewey has a chance to tackle the problem as President-elect, he will have a great advantage over many predecessors in the White House because of the close working relationship between himself and Governor Warren. No lasting improvement in the position of the Vice President can be made, however, unless it rests on something more than agreeable personal relations.

We have previously suggested that the Vice President ought to be definitely reoriented into the executive branch instead of being left as a sort of fifth wheel in the Senate. Obviously the founding fathers made the V. P. the presiding officer in the Senate because they could find nothing else for him to do. That situation has now radically changed. Today an assistant president is urgently needed to relieve the backbreaking burden on the President, and that assistant ought to be the man who will have to step into the President's shoes in case of a vacancy. Such a close working relationship has often been impossible in the past because of the practice of choosing the Vice President, for political reasons, from a different branch of the party than the head of the ticket. With the Vice President absorbed into the executive branch as an integral part of it, however, the parties would be under great pressure to select two men who could work together. In addition to giving the Vice President a higher salary and an executive assignment, therefore, he ought to be relieved of his present job as gavel pounder in the Senate, by constitutional amendment if necessary.

Cheating The Voter

Thousands of citizens who read their newspapers yesterday morning must have asked themselves whether they were living in America or the curious Land of Oz. In our supposedly free and democratic contest for the selection of a national leader the name of the President of the United States had been stricken from the ballot in Louisiana by a political committee. The people of that State will have no opportunity to give the President a vote of confidence unless they write his name on the ballot. In other words, they are denied a free choice among the candidates. The effect is so utterly at variance with customary assumptions about the American system of government that it may shock the people into some serious thinking about the obsolete and unreliable method by which the President is chosen.

It is futile to condemn the Dixiecrats who have directed this maneuver and similar coups in other Southern States. They are merely taking advantage of the tools of confusion and obstruction which an obsolete system places in their hands. Louisiana is one of several States which still cling to the fiction that the President is chosen by a group of electors named by the States. It does not require that the names of the presidential and vice presidential candidates appear on the ballots, although the Democratic State Central Committee seems to have decreed in this instance that the States' Rights candidates shall be listed. It permits the splitting of votes among individual electors, instead of requiring votes to be cast for or against an entire slate, thus buttressing the assumption that the electors are to exercise their discretion in the choice of a President and Vice President. Finally, the electors themselves are nominated, not by vote of the people, but in State political conventions. This adds up to dictation by a select group of politicians as to where Louisiana's lot shall be cast in a presidential election.

The really alarming fact is that the right of Louisiana and other States to thwart the will of the people in choosing a President is deeply imbedded in the Constitution. The transition from government of the elite for the people to government by and for the people has never been recognized in the law. So we have 48 different schemes in 48 different States for determining how each will make its influence felt in a presidential election. The door to finagling is not merely ajar; it is wide open. The amazing thing is that a system so fraught with hazards and uncertainties has not previously been utterly discredited.

By forcing the issue at last the Dixiecrats may in the end render a national service. The country needs a new electoral system under which the people may vote directly for the flesh-and-blood candidates of all legitimate parties and not for dummies who may or may not reflect the popular will. And the electoral votes of each State should be divided among the candidates in the same proportion as the popular vote in that State is divided. How long must the country wait for a statesman to take hold of this issue and make a name for himself in addition to safeguarding our electoral system?

Race In The Army

There is not necessarily an inconsistency between the two seemingly conflicting reports on race relations in the armed forces which have appeared during the past week. The first, by James C. Evans, Negro civilian aide to the Secretary of the Army, praises the Army for its efforts to coordinate manpower of the respective races and notes specific instances of improved conditions for Negroes. The second report is on a broader basis, covering all the armed forces. It is signed by 16 Negro leaders who attended a conference called last spring by Secretary Forrestal, and it is intended for consideration by the President's Committee on Equality of Treatment and Opportunity in the Armed Services. This study is more critical and defines particular areas in which the services can act now to better race relations.

Mr. Evans does not ignore the inequalities which still exist in the Army. He mentions, for example, that while Negroes constitute 11.15 per cent of the enlisted strength, they make up only 1.32 per cent of the officer strength. At the same time, he also observes that there has been a sharp advance in Negro ROTC enrollment, that nine Negroes are now at West Point and that Negro officers are being assigned to staff duty in the Pentagon. Moreover, he cites the fact that new Negro draftees will be called by birth dates without racial quotas. It is a good thing, now and then, to have such a review of positive accomplishments to offset the complaints of those who feel that little or no progress is being made.

However, the only way progress is made is through prodding. Lest the Army become complacent on its record, the points made by the 16 Negro leaders also deserve weighing. The Army comes in for considerably heavier criticism than do the Navy and Air Force, each of which is praised for serious efforts to improve the use of Negro personnel. The Army's policy, on the other hand, is described as a "grudging adjustment" to outmoded plans calling for the use of Negroes "under the most limited conditions imaginable." Much of the difficulty, the report implies, may be attributed to the resistance of military leadership against change. Such resistance is of course costly when the country is pressed to make the most efficient utilization of its military manpower.

This is not the report of a group of extremists. It looks to the eventual abandonment of segregation in the armed forces, but it recognizes frankly that basic attitudes cannot be changed by "miraculous overnight conversion of the public." Consequently, the seven concrete steps it recommends gain merit. For the Army it suggests a restudy of the Gillem report on utilization of manpower, the establishment of completely integrated "laboratory" units, the encouragement of nonsegregation in the National Guard and the abandonment of racial quotas. For the Navy it calls for elimination of the separate stewards' branch, the commissioning of more Negro officers and improved recruiting techniques for Negroes. Certainly these are reasonable points which commend themselves not only to defense chiefs but also to all Americans concerned with resolving racial difficulties in the armed forces in the most efficient and practical manner.

News Diversity

The diversity of news sources available to the American people affords their best assurance of reliable and accurate information. This is the gist of an exemplary response which the Department of State has made to a U. N. General Assembly resolution inviting governments "to study such measures as might with advantage be taken on the national plane to combat, within the limits of constitutional procedures, the diffusion of false or distorted reports likely to injure friendly relations between states." The problem is undeniably a real one. Here as well as abroad there are publications which poison the minds of their readers—sometimes in ways which the Russians are so fond of calling war-mongering and which do, in fact, operate to foster international ill will. But there is certainly no remedy for this evil in the Russian formula of governmental control of the press.

The Department of State was merely repeating a fundamental American belief when it advised the General Assembly that "the use of governmental power to combat false or distorted reporting likely to injure friendly relations between states through censorship or suppression would constitute a dangerous infringement on freedom of information . . ." So far as this country is concerned, it would fall, of course, entirely outside "the limits of constitutional procedures." And, although it seems impossible to make the Russians or their satellites understand this, such a course could not serve to bring about the desired, or pretended, effect. For a press reduced, like that in Russia, for example, to the mere mouthing of official propaganda would indulge in just as much war-mongering, again like the Russian press, for example, as might seem advantageous to the foreign policy of the government controlling it.

In the United States there are some 1700 daily newspapers, served by three major press associations as well as by their own reportorial staffs, almost 10,000 weekly papers, not to speak of numerous magazines of opinion, about 2200 radio stations and miscellaneous channels of communication such as brochures, handbills and public meeting places. In a fiercely competitive system, these diverse media constitute at once a check upon one another and a check, indispensable to the maintenance of freedom, upon the Government itself. The doctrine has never been better expressed, perhaps, than in words which Thomas Jefferson wrote in 1823 to the Marquis de Lafayette: ". . . the only security of all is in a free press. The force of public opinion cannot be resisted, when permitted freely to be expressed. The agitation it produces must be submitted to. It is necessary to keep the waters pure."

Camiguin

It is a commentary on the times in which we live that the front pages of most newspapers accorded no more than subordinate position, or no position at all, to the news that the lives of 20,000 Filipinos marooned on the tiny island of Camiguin are imperiled by deadly gases from a volcano. Mount Hibokhibok, considered extinct since it erupted 77 years ago, began erupting again on September 1. Some 36,000 persons were removed from the island in the six days thereafter by naval patrol boats working frantically in primitive port facilities; but when the flow of lava and shower of ashes diminished Tuesday, evacuation ceased. Then a new and desperate call for help disclosed a fresh outburst and rescue operations were renewed, but many are still in danger.

The dramatic story was generally deemed less important than the rioting and street clashes in Berlin. There is much to justify this editorial evaluation. The fate of millions may be involved in the Berlin conflict. But this in itself is acknowledgment that in these perilous days the peril of mere thousands is relatively negligible. When all men stand upon the brink of catastrophe, they can scarcely afford concern for a few. And tragedies that would once have stirred their imaginations and moved them to the succor of their fellow-men are no more than incidents in the vast tragedy threatening to engulf the world.

Perhaps the greatest tragedy of all is this progressive desensitizing of mankind. Perhaps what we take to be reaction is in truth a cause. Have men grown callous because they are in jeopardy or is it closer to the mark to say that they are in jeopardy because they have grown callous? Only a generation or two ago men everywhere could be aroused by injustice to a single man; in every land there were thousands who understood that the case of Captain Dreyfus touched their own freedom. But today even a committee of the United States Congress can soberly assert that injustice to a few is justified in the name of security for the many. Is liberty really more secure when an individual can seem unimportant, when the lives of mere thousands can seem remote and of trivial concern?

Wallace In Carolina

Please correct the inaccuracy appearing in the September 5 issue of your paper under Wallace's picture, reading as follows:

"Henry Wallace's hair was smeared when an egg hit him while he was speaking in front of the Greensboro, N. C., courthouse last week. The Progressive candidate went right on addressing the unruly crowd."

I was only a few feet from Wallace when the egg struck him as he was walking toward the courthouse—several minutes before he spoke. One peach fell near him without striking him as he reached his automobile after he spoke. These were the only two missiles thrown. Per se, the statement in your article "He was talking that way in Greensboro, N. C., and being bombarded with eggs and tomatoes" is also inaccurate.

Your article asks: "One riddle remains to be cleared up. How was it that North Carolina, with its reputation of being the most enlightened and progressive State in the South, acted so differently from Mississippi?" I'll tell you why:

1. Though we like Negroes and sincerely enjoy seeing them get ahead, we loathe Wallace because we feel he misrepresents us on this score;

2. A section with great native corporations like Burlington Mills, Cone Mills, Cannon, Reynolds, Duke—all "home-grown" and all enriching the South—is again misrepresented by Wallace with his prattle about "foreign capitalists owning corporations in the South."

3. We know that when Wallace was Secretary of Agriculture he apparently was not remotely interested in the welfare of Negroes at a time he could have done them the most good. This glaring inconsistency has been set out in the Negro press.

4. The Bible warns against a type of pseudo-piety. We Southerners feel that Wallace's hysterical Negro-piety is of this type;

5. Above all, we loathe Henry Wallace for what we feel to be his rank insincerity, politically speaking. He's represented three—four if you count communism—separate political parties. He might be called a Repub-Dem-Prog-Com—a logical sequence!

Verbal Eggs

For the past week there has been a lot of trumpeting going on, in denunciation of the people who threw eggs at Henry Wallace. Apparently everyone of any responsibility wants to jump on the bandwagon and decry this "threat to American free speech." As a Wallace supporter, I've got to laugh.

Those people have a right, if not constitutionally as Americans, at least as human beings, to express their honest disapproval in a direct, vigorous manner, and in the best way they know how to. They are, however, being made the whipping boys for the entire national conscience, which affects to be shocked and disgusted, thus shifting from its own shoulders all the blame for the dirty deals Wallace has suffered.

The self-righteous editors of America's newspapers, by their repudiation of the egg-throwers, try to paint themselves as fair-minded, sometimes liberal, gentlemen. Perhaps they are; but a tomato or an egg is not nearly as deadly, nor as dirty a weapon, as is the accusation of "Communist." And there is a constant barrage of these verbal "rotten eggs" being thrown by most of the people who are so vociferously abhorrent of their less refined allies in North Carolina.

The Lie

To quote President Truman:

"A lie out of the whole cloth," "a plain lie."

Well, "there's the society lie—and the business lie—and the lie that you have to double. The lie that you lie when you don't know why the truth seems too much trouble!"

(Hear, hear, defendants under investigation on un-American activities!)

Rudyard Kipling felt that all pleasure "Is as chalk to cheddar cheese (cheddar is old port, no doubt).

When it comes to a well made lie.

To a quite unwreckable Lie!
To a most impeccable Lie!
To a watertight, fireproof, angle iron, sunk hinge, time lock, steel-faced Lie.
But a pair and a brougham Lie,
Not a private hansom Lie,
Not a little place at tooting, but a country house with shooting,
And a ringe-fence-deer-park Lie!"

Spiritual Illness

Immense though the Communist peril certainly is, our very greatest cause for concern is the low ebb of our deeper life—our spiritual life—which has made the Communist peril possible. Against a healthy body, all germs are powerless; and against a society whose spiritual life is healthy, no perils can find a chance.

We can rest assured that God will be as kind to us as we deserve; and that when we deserve genuine peace and security, God will not withhold it one moment. Real peace rests upon the hearts of men; and when those hearts are sound, having the courage to do the right, as they see it, nothing will be more secure than the peace which all men crave.

If, therefore, our Nation, so wealthy and so strong, has yet blundered in world affairs like a child, should we not expect to find that the reason lies in our widespread lack of deep, religious life? Without seeking diligently for that which is right, no people can show greatness in over-all vision, nor can any people find the wisdom so necessary for survival.

Now that our unequaled national wealth, and our atomic power, have gone to our heads, giving us an utterly false feeling of security, what we need most is a new humility—a humility as great as our wealth and power—a humility which will make it possible, once more, for God to guide us.

The Profession Of Espionage

L'affaire espionage might take on a less obnoxious aspect if it were more generally realized that spying is not a peculiarly Russian phenomenon. Nor is it, in this era of scientific detection, the casual occupation of adventurers. That conception, convenient to some circles, survives from a bygone age when it attracted chiefly the sleazy, the frivolous, and, occasionally, betrayed the last infirmity of a noble mind cracking under adversity. "He had had front teeth," runs the testimony about a recent informer, "and was financially embarrassed."

Latter-day authorities, declares the Encyclopedia of Social Science, accord espionage the status and dignity of an instrument of national policy. As such it is integrated with every modern military establishment. Like the technology of armament, its efficiency is so dependent upon the prevailing state of the arts that, paradoxically, the degree of its perfection may be said to be the measure of a nation's progress.

Espionage has been aptly defined as "a strategy of stratagems." Its value in the conduct of domestic and foreign affairs is attested by a formidable, growing body of literature, and by the fact that university chairs and laboratories have been founded to develop adepts in this discipline.

Employing every refinement of the age, military intelligence, as the congressional hearings disclose, enlists the talents of physicists, fiscal experts, cultural specialists, and literary folk alike. Nor is their record of usefulness in this field a novelty of yesterday. They boast a tradition at once ancient and colorful; having been well noted before and since Suetonius and Ammanius Marcellinus drew their memorable canvasses of Roman intrigue and mayhem, sacrifice and glory, many long years ago.

It would be interesting to speculate upon the inner psychological processes of the luminaries, historical and contemporary, who dedicated their extraordinary skills to the hazards, moral and physical, of espionage. The roster is both curious and astonishing. The selfless among them contributed notably to the puissance of their native lands; others earned an unenviable immortality. In either sphere, they provide a fascinating footnote to the passions of genius, and to the versatility of the notoriously depraved.

It is difficult to reconcile so decorous and detached an anatomist of the human comedy as W. Somerset Maugham with his quondam role as a secret agent of Whitehall. Yet, the evidence as he submits it in his autobiographical, The Summing Up, is convincing, if not quite inspiring. Here he recounts, with all the cloying suavity of his style, his fling at being a British agent in central Europe and revolution-torn Russia. From the delicacy of its recital, the details, indicative and presumptive, and the gingerly lubricity of its rationalization, it is plain that the episodes are not among the author's most cherished remembrances of things past.

Belatedly, we venture to offer Maugham the dubious consolation of a more glorious precedent. The distinguished story teller will discover in the memorabilia of Sir Isaac Newton correspondence with a young friend who solicited the great scientist's advice on how he might best employ his time on a projected tour of the Continent. Sir Isaac counseled him to study the fortifications, the gunnery devices, the firepower and maneuverability of the naval vessels, etc., of the countries he would be visiting.

What makes the present spy affair so disturbing is the ineptitude of its practitioners. The masters of this strategy strive to contain it within a disarming guile. They have a genius for avoiding the limelight, for conducting the business with a minimum of public excitement. In the hands of the clumsy it can, as it has in the present instance, jeopardize what is euphemistically known as "the comity of nations."

Truman's Ineptness

By Mark Sullivan

Congress Alienated

IN THE first week of the campaign we have had a major opening speech by President Truman, a major reply on behalf of the Republicans by former Governor Stassen. Mr. Stassen really met and answered the President's speech; important issues in the campaign were joined head-on.

One issue, raised especially by Mr. Truman's rather raucous emphasis on it, is the Taft-Hartley labor law. Included in that and above that is the largest issue of the campaign, a condition which, local or latent, is in the minds of an immense number of voters. This is the ineptness of Mr. Truman as President. One glaring phase of his ineptness is the failure to get along with Congress, or even with his own party within that body. As Mr. Stassen compactly put it: "He failed when he had a Democratic Congress to work with; he failed when he had a Republican Congress to work with." (Mr. Truman had a Democratic Congress from his taking office in April, 1945, until January, 1947.

When Mr. Truman this week fiercely denounced the Taft-Hartley Act he was denouncing a law which, as Mr. Stassen put it, "was passed over his veto by a two thirds majority of the members of Congress and by a majority vote of the members of his own party in Congress." In effect, Mr. Truman this week was saying and asking the public to believe and elect him in the belief that "two thirds of Congress was wrong, and I was and am right; a majority of my own party in Congress was wrong, and I was and am right."

WHEN Mr. Truman became President he had a party majority of 15 in the Senate, 51 in the House. For many reasons this Democratic majority was peculiarly willing to cooperate with Mr. Truman. They had sat with him in Congress and liked him. They welcomed him as a change from President Roosevelt, toward whom the Democratic Party had become restive and refused to pass measures he had proposed, even war measures.

Democrats of the type that control Congress were responsible for Mr. Truman becoming President. Less than a year before, in the national convention of 1944, they had brought about his nomination for Vice President. In this they rejected Henry A. Wallace, then Vice President and fighting for renomination, whom Roosevelt had forced upon the party four years preceding.

Toward a Congress controlled by this type of Democrats Mr. Truman practiced in personal relations, geniality and fraternity. But as President he sent to Congress more than a score of measures which the Democratic majority in that body regarded as a proposed continuation and extension of the Roosevelt New Deal. Almost without exception, Congress rejected the measures or ignored them. This offense to the Democrats in Congress was increased by Mr. Truman's keeping Mr. Wallace in the Cabinet post to which Mr. Roosevelt had appointed him after he had been rejected for the vice presidential nomination.

ALL THIS took place while Mr. Truman had a Democratic Congress. And it is the result of this ineptness as President and as party leader that confronts Mr. Truman today. Mr. Wallace, whom Mr. Truman was obliged to dismiss from his Cabinet after some year and a half, has led the extreme left-wing New Dealers into a new party of which he is the presidential candidate and which is expected to poll some five million votes. Whatever the number, every vote for Mr. Wallace will be a vote subtracted from Mr. Truman—it is difficult to imagine that any Wallace voter would otherwise have voted for Mr. Dewey. And when now Mr. Truman tries, as former Governor Stassen says "to set class against class," he makes votes for Mr. Wallace rather than for himself. In that sort of competition Mr. Wallace can outdemogogue him.

Meanwhile the conservative wing of the party is not loyal to Mr. Truman. A group of them have a candidate of their own, Governor Thurmond of the States' Rights Party. And of the Democrats who remain Democrats, practically all the important leaders tried strenuously to prevent Mr. Truman's nomination. Publicly and conspicuously and repeatedly they declared he could not be elected.

In the net, there is no body of Democrats, important either in number or power, which has consistently wanted Mr. Truman to be their party's candidate for President. So far as they support him against their wish, they do so with no spirit of either loyalty or zeal or hope.

Byrnes' Speech

The Washington Post (September 7 issue) did a nice job on handling the Byrnes speech to the American Bar Association. I have not read the complete speech but the partial text carried by The Post (and the printing of it is an important part of the service you rendered) seems sufficiently complete to judge the news story. I think the news story is an accurate representation of both the content and the spirit of the speech. Thanks.

Matter of Fact

Dewey Might Have Hitch-Hikers

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

SENATE seats, as everyone knows, are the sole objects of Republican alarm and Democratic hope. Presently, Republican Senatorships in Wyoming, West Virginia, Minnesota, Kentucky, Oklahoma, and even Illinois are all reported in danger from the Democrats. If only four of these Senatorships change hands, the Democrats will organize the Senate. The latest presidential preference polls afford a basis for gauging whether Governor Dewey's cup of triumph will be embittered by this drop of purest poison.

The polls show Dewey with just about 54 per cent of the vote, while the unhappy President Truman is credited with just under 41 per cent. Owing to the rebellion in the South, these Nation-wide figures are said to be fairly representative of the picture in the key Northern States. And in the last congressional election, when the Republicans gained 48 seats in the House, they had an almost exactly similar landslide superiority of 13 per cent above the Mason and Dixon Line.

From this, one can reasonably deduce that the makeup of the House should not be altered greatly by Dewey's election, although here and there seats will change hands.

The influences favoring changes in the House are the strength of the Wallaceites in big cities like New York, and the visible national distaste for the doings of the recent Congress. The first will favor the Republicans; the second, the Democrats. On balance, it seems probable that each party will gain on the swings what it loses on the roundabouts, or vice versa.

1928 Disproved Legend

THE SENATE seats, however, are a different story. Senatorial contests engage the attention of the voters in a way that congressional fights do not. Because the voters are interested, the chance that they will split their tickets is greatly enhanced. And the tradition that American voters never vote split tickets is sheer nonsense.

In 1928 (when political issues surely meant far less to the man in the street than they do today) 128,000 New York State voters briskly split their tickets to give the Governorship to Franklin D. Roosevelt and the State's electoral vote to Herbert Hoover.

At the same time, it speaks volumes for the political sentiment in the country that the political experts should consider the Senate seats listed above as even vaguely doubtful, in the face of the strength Dewey apparently has in the country.

With the exception of normally Democratic Kentucky, every single one of the disputed Senate seats has been occupied by an extreme member of the isolationist, reactionary Republican wing. From the pompous Chapman Revercomb of West Virginia, to the flashy Curly Brooks of Illinois, including the eccentric Joe Ball of Minnesota, their records have all been the same.

No one has the slightest doubt that Dewey will carry Illinois, for example. But now that the Wallaceites have been ruled off the State ticket, there really seems to be a remote possibility that a peasant-rising by Col. Robert R. McCormick's Illinois serfs will give the Senatorship to Paul Douglas instead of Brooks. The trend is being tacitly admitted by Dewey himself, who is carefully establishing a clear distinction between the Dewey brand and the Brooks-Revercomb-Ball brand of republicanism.

High-Powered Coat-Tails

THE ADVISERS Dewey has gathered to help him belong without exception to what the Republican right-wing's deepest thinker, Senator John W. Bricker, has described as the "coastal, radical group." When it was necessary for someone to answer President Truman on the Taft-Hartley Act, it was not Senator Robert A. Taft that Dewey called to the rostrum. Instead, Harold E. Stassen, who is on record as opposing several of the act's key clauses, was propelled to the center of the stage. And this emphasis on the more progressive Republicans is going to be maintained by the Dewey high command throughout the campaign.

The anomaly is that although Dewey himself apparently thinks the voters do not want the Brookses, Balls and Revercombs, his own margin of strength should be enough to carry these men—or at least most of them—into the Senate. American voters split their tickets much more often than people suppose. But the percentage of ticket-splitters is almost never as high as the 7 per cent that would be needed for Democratic Senate candidates to overcome a Dewey lead of 13 per cent.

In New York in 1928, for instance, the ticket-splitters were only about 3 per cent of the total. In short, these extreme right-wing Republicans are likely to ride to victory on Dewey's coat-tails.

If Dewey is anything like the sort of man he pretends to be, a struggle between him and the Republican right wing is inevitable. It is almost inconceivable, to start with, that he and Senator Taft can avoid bitter disagreement on foreign policy, unless Dewey is a Taft in disguise. But it is also true that if a large number of Republican right-wingers are Dewey coat-tail riders, they and their friends will tend to rise above principle in order to hang on to such useful coat-tails.

Human Fireproofing

By Alton L. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Reporter

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 11.—The vitamin that acts like a protective fireman may turn out to be a Jack of many trades in human health. This fireman is vitamin E. It's the most abundant vitamin in human bodies, but exactly what it does has long been unknown. New clews now turning up indicate that it plays a big role.

Vitamin E proteets fats and certain vitamins from being oxidized or burned up when they are being digested in the body.

The human body is saturated with oxygen, and the E may act like a fire-sprinkler system, keeping oxidation under control, says Dr. Kenneth C. D. Sickman, a vitamin authority at Distillation Products, Inc. It may thus have a preservative effect on some body processes, helping them operate at the right speed and preventing premature aging.

The vitamin also keeps vegetable oils from turning rancid. Other experiments show that animals fed on the vitamin have fat and lean meat that stays fresh longer after they are slaughtered.

Angina Anodyne

A GROUP of Canadian physicians, Drs. Vogelsang, Evan Shute and Wilfrid Shute, report that vitamin E may be helpful in many cases of heart trouble and ailments of blood vessels. They have been studying the vitamin since one of them noticed that the E seemed to bring relief from pain in a man suffering from angina pectoris.

About 80 per cent of their patients, they said in the Medical Record, showed improvement after being given large doses of vitamin E. The improvement might come from some effect by the vitamin in better utilization of oxygen in the tissues, or better circulation in the capillaries, they said.

Vitamin E once was thought to be the antisterility vitamin, but there is no positive evidence that it combats sterility in human beings. One research study reported less likelihood of repeated abortions in women when they took extra vitamin E.

In animals, the vitamin has shown marked effects on reproduction. Female rats don't reproduce if they're deprived of the vitamin. The E seems to help in preventing stillbirth in cattle, and in preventing a disease in which lambs are born with stiff legs. Hens lay fewer eggs if they are deprived of vitamin E.

Rats, it was found, survive longer at low pressure, simulating high altitude, if they have big doses of the vitamin. The more E they have the longer they fight off unconsciousness and death. Studies now are planned to learn whether E can help airmen at high altitudes.

Not a Specific

OTHER researchers have reported good results in treating leg ulcers, certain pains and muscle disorders and a skin disease with vitamin E.

So far the medical men haven't found much that the vitamin does specifically, as vitamin D does against rickets, or vitamin C against scurvy. But the findings have spurred interest and widened research.

It may be that most of the effects reported are from the conditioning influence of E. This could explain benefits in treating heart and vascular troubles. The vitamin may bring improvement, tone up the body and help normal repair processes.

Specific troubles may appear when human beings have too little vitamin E. A deficiency may take years to develop, and it's hard to overcome. When big doses of E are given, much of it is excreted, and rebuilding a normal level in the body takes time.

The best sources of vitamin E in foods, Dr. Hickman said, are in vegetables, particularly in the skin, roots and seeds. Carrots are a good source. So are apples, if you eat the skins. Whole wheat bread is a good source; white bread is low in the vitamin.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Stassen Expects a Cabinet Post

By Drew Pearson

AFTER statuesque Harold Stassen conferred with Governor Dewey on campaign strategy, he came down to Washington to talk over future plans with close friends. Among other things, he confided that Dewey wanted him to play a most active part in the campaign.

Stassen asked his friends' advice as to what he should do.

"Go ahead and do a good job for him," advised one friend, "but stake out your claims first. Tell Dewey what you expect in return."

Stassen replied that his ambition was to be Secretary of State or Secretary of National Defense. His work as a delegate to the United Nations Conference at San Francisco, plus his foreign travels, had given him a good background of foreign affairs, he felt, while his naval experience in the Pacific gave him a background for national defense.

Stassen also revealed that his agreement with the University of Pennsylvania, of which he is now president, had an escape clause whereby he could take a leave of absence to serve the Government.

The able former Governor of Minnesota seemed to think his friend's advice was good. Since he is now one of Dewey's most active campaigners, it is a safe bet he has staked out his cabinet claim with Dewey in advance.

Brass and Ermine

PLAINSPOKEN Brig. Gen. "Buck" Lanham was recently delegated to substitute for Chief of Staff Omar Bradley at an ultra-formal dinner in honor of Romania's exiled King Michael and Queen Mother Helen.

Lanham, one of the best men General Bradley has appointed on his staff, has been teaching democracy in the Army. He also believes in democracy when it comes to royalty.

Introduced to the Queen, he blurted: "How do you do, Queen? Glad to make your acquaintance."

The table of honor was set upon a dais, and Queen Helen murmured a polite protest as she mounted to her seat. Lanham shot back good-naturedly:

"That shouldn't bother you, Queen. You're the only one of us who is used to sitting on a throne."

Army Humanizes Training

CONTRARY to general impression, the Army has abandoned all plans to give 18-year-olds separate military training and separate assignments.

At first, Army chiefs considered shielding their youngest recruits from the influences of the Regular Army, but Chief of Staff Omar Bradley finally rejected the idea. Instead, the 18-year-olds will be sprinkled throughout the Army according to where they are most needed—with one exception. They cannot be shipped overseas.

On the other hand, General Bradley has plans for "humanizing" the harsh Army training program. He has ordered that new techniques learned at Fort Knox, where the Army set up a showcase training unit, shall be applied throughout the service. To this end, all new training commands, drill sergeants, etc., will be called in for a series of three-day seminars where new training methods will be stressed. Three of these seminars have already been held at Fort Knox.

Meanwhile, the training program has been cut from 12 to 8 weeks to accommodate the rush of new men. Potential leaders will be picked from them during this indoctrination, to be given an additional five-week course right at the training center.

Note—The Army expected a flood of 18-year-old recruits, seeking to enlist for one year and thus avoid the 21-month draft. Accordingly, a rigid quota was set, admitting only 10,000 one-year enlistments each month. But the 18-year-olds have surprised the Army by trickling into recruiting offices at only half that rate.

Coal Gluts Market

IT'S been just three months since John L. Lewis's threatened coal strike sent fear of a coal famine up the backbone of industry. But today coal is a glut on the market, and some coal men are talking about the importance of having the Government stockpile coal in case of future emergencies.

Just before Lewis was thumbing his nose at the operators, big coal consumers were buying at almost any price. They wanted reserves on hand in case of a strike. Result: They overbought. Meanwhile the export market has vanished. The German coal mines have begun to produce.

So right now some coal men wouldn't mind a strike—to use up reserves on hand.

Berlin Merry-Go-Round

THE AIRLIFT into Berlin is costing one million dollars a day—almost four times the official figure . . . Even if the airlift is doubled it will fail by January 1, when the coal shortage becomes desperate . . . If coal is cut off, riots are certain . . . The electricity dimout which limits lighting to five hours every evening means increased food spoilage, no ice cubes, no radio and late suppers to Berliners who can't start cooking dinner until after the lights come on at 6 p. m. As a result, one of the most useless items in Berlin today is a deep freeze . . . The Red Army Victory Monument, which covers about half a block in the American zone, has sunk 18 inches in the last six months—due to faulty engineering . . . The Russians won't even let Ambassador Bedell Smith keep his official plane in Moscow any more. Smith keeps it parked at Tempelhof Airport in Berlin . . . The Berlin airlift works on such a split-second schedule that, when General Clay was scheduled to take off at 6 a. m. and Ambassador Robert Murphy was one minute late, Clay's plane lost its place in line, had to wait one hour to take off . . . Though all American newsmen are barred from the Soviet zone, six Russian correspondents were speedily given permission to pass the blockade to cover the explosion at the I. G. Farben chemical plant at Ludwigshafen.

Tube Might Even Aid Learning

Electron Magic Still in Infancy

By John L. Springer
Associated Press Newsfeatures Writer

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11.—That little Napoleon of science and industry, the electronic tube, is marching on to bigger conquests.

Basis of a five-billion-dollar industry, some of its spectacular new uses will be exhibited and reported here next week at the National Instrument Conference at Convention Hall.

The conference will observe the electron as a key worker in the development of the "bat" missile, in electron microscopes which probe into minute segments of matter never seen before, in infrared instruments which see in the dark, relieve sinus trouble and germinate seeds, in radioactive tracer instruments studying how plants grow and cancer cells develop, and in crime detection devices which are making scientists of policemen.

Although the little electron tube is making its influence felt in hundreds of major ways, scientists say the "electronic age" barely has begun. George M. Muschamp, vice president in charge of engineering of the Brown Instrument Co. here, makers of electronic devices, says the whole thing is like a sorcerer's assembly line from which unsuspected wonders emerge in a continuous stream.

Brain Clocking

SCIENTISTS point, for example, to the work by Norbert Wiener of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology on research which may revolutionize the art of learning. Still in the theoretical—and big word—stage, it involves "cybernetics"—the capacity of the individual to assimilate and apply information.

Since one person learns new things faster than another, if electronic machines could measure the brain's various capacities they could determine the most desirable speed at which information can be absorbed by individual brains. Wiener believes this possible.

If so, the future student might sit listening to a lesson on a phonograph record, geared to run just as fast as his brain. Crude tests show that a student whose ability to absorb information runs at the same speed as that of the teacher, can learn at phenomenal speeds.

Another possibility, scientists say, may extend the might of the electron tube far out of this world. Detection devices have been improved to the point where they measure such slight electrical power that scientists are on the way to measuring light from other planets and determining, from colors that show, if life as we know it exists elsewhere in the universe.

Basis of Radio

THE election tube goes back to a night in Chicago in 1903, when young Lee DeForest used a tiny amount of energy to draw out a greater stream of electrons from matter and to control its flow. This power to amplify waves otherwise outside the human range made possible radio, television and a host of other modern wonders.

Many things done by electronic devices in industry are not glamorous, but their economic importance is great. For instance, since 1890, 40 per cent of all the iron and steel America produced was lost through rust and corrosion. National losses for pipelines alone, says Muschamp, hit two billion dollars annually.

Then an electronic "pulse polarizer" was made. It records the slightest effects of an electro chemical process which causes corrosion, and makes it possible to stop this corrosion by imposing an electric current opposite to that causing the deterioration.

During the war, an airborne magnetometer, containing an electron tube, located enemy submarines under water. At war's end, oil companies rushed into action with the device, exploring for oil deposits under the sea and in inaccessible territories.

Devices installed in barns may sound alarms to warn of smoldering fires, enabling farmers to reach the scene before much damage is done. A new device can prevent food poisoning by telling farmers and distributors instantly whether deadly insecticides and fungicides are present on fruits and vegetables.

'Smells' Hot Box

A FEW years ago the fast Congressional Limited was pounding along north of Philadelphia, road maintenance men noticed a hot box. They raced to warn the engineer but just then the train jumped the tracks.

There was a pile-up of deaths and injuries by the score. A simple electronic product which "smells" temperature changes now gives the engineer ample warning.

Many Culled, Few are Chosen

69 Ex-GIs Cram for Striped Trousers Jobs

By Jerry Boin
Post Reporter

SIXTY-NINE former GIs now finishing a special summer course at George Washington University are anxious to add something to United States diplomacy—namely, themselves.

Next Friday they will wind up GW's 12-week foreign service review course. Then, after a brief respite, they will face a four-day siege of foreign service exams, starting September 27.

Why do veterans with war-weary travel memories seek the far horizons again? About half of this group say they want to help shape and carry out foreign policy. Other reasons include the prestige of the foreign service, and a simple desire for work abroad. One fellow gave as his motivation that he hates war.

GW Graduate Edward E. Masters, 24, "just didn't like the way United States foreign affairs were being run" while he was in the Army. "I know one foreign service officer can't do much, but every little bit helps," he pointed out. A native of Ashland, Ohio, and a married man like some 20 other classmates, Masters also looks to the service for prestige and security. (He will start at $3300 a year, with the chance to advance to $13,500.)

Some Peaceful Solution

A GRADUATE of Western High School in 1941, 24-year-old Alf Bergesen is an Annapolis man who resigned his naval commission last year to try for the foreign service. He made the switch because of "the personal sense of futility" he felt in the Navy.

"The basic function of the Navy in time of peace is to prepare for war," he said. And since "mighty little will be left of us in the event of war . . . we should make every effort to find solutions other than war for the problems confronting us."

Gene Merrill, 29, graduate of UCLA, had his prewar ambitions for the foreign service whetted by Navy duty in the Pacific. He sees the service as a means to grasp "a better picture of civilization as a whole." He believes that a lasting peace must be based "on a one-world concept of humanity."

Following through on this "one-world concept" is Leslie Kleiforth, 25, who has seen the world as the son of a foreign service officer. From 12 years of living in Berlin, Vienna, Brussels and Winnipeg, among other places, he observes, "Though people differ in race, religion and customs, I have found that they are all basically the same."

The foreign service, he feels, will feed his interest in people and government. Though born in the District, he says he "can't call any place home." He is a graduate of the University of Minnesota.

40 Hours 'Homework'

THE foreign service review course is by definition one continuous cram session, trying to condense a sizable part of a college course into 12 weeks. English, anthropology, geography, international law, history, economics, statistics and contemporary affairs make up the awesome academic diet. The 20-hour schedule of lectures each week requires up to 40 hours of outside study, according to Dr. Peyton Kerr, director of the course and former professor of economics at G. W. U.

A glimpse at foreign service exams of past years confirms the need of such rigorous mental conditioning. Questions on geography may demand the location of little heard of dots on the globe like Aral, Balaton, Eyre, Koko Nor, Peipus and Urumiah.

History queries may ask for the year of the Peace of Basel, ninth Thermidor or the execution of Maximilian. An economics essay question may be "Was American slavery profitable?" or "Was the first Russian five-year plan a failure?"

Do Somalis speak the Bantu languages? Are the majority of Christians in Iceland Calvinists? These are possible queries under the races-religious section. English vocabulary tests may include words like laodicean, hagiographic, postiche, preconize, tergiversation, xebec and velleity.

Also, a very comprehensive test is given on a modern foreign language. One extra chance is offered for passing this one.

After the written exams are surmounted, another high hurdle awaits the aspirant in the form of an oral test. In this the interviewer judges severely on personality, bearing and power of expression.

If they do make the grade—and, last year, 41 out of 64 review course students passed the written exam—a post as third secretary in an embassy or ministry, or vice consul in a consulate awaits them.

Anti-Gambling Jury Resumes Hearings With 3-Hr. Session

Empaneled May 17 To Probe 'Million Dollar Racket'

Washington's antigambling grand jury has resumed sessions after a summer vacation recess.

The grand jury held a three-hour session, meeting Thursday for the first time since the recess began. It was reported in one quarter that the jurors took further testimony from a well known numbers operator who had previously testified before the body.

The grand jury was empanelled on May 17 to deal with what United States Attorney George Morris Fay called a 100-million-dollar gaming racket. It has heard testimony from police officials of all ranks and many known numbers operators.

One outgrowth of the grand jury thus far has been the indictment of Henry M. Leake, 39, 104 R st. ne., and Charles Henry Nelson, 39, of 1803 H st. ne., in connection with shooting each other during a dispute at the Brass Rail Restaurant at 7th and S sts. nw.

The indictment was brought by the regular grand jury on April 19, but much of the evidence was gathered with the cooperation of the special grand jury.

Court personnel speculated as to the next steps that the grand jury would take. Its meetings have been closely guarded secrets and reporters have rarely learned of them until sessions were called. Some of the sessions have not been known to newspapermen until they were concluded.

2 Streetcar Riders Hit By Taxicabs

Two persons were struck and severely injured by taxicabs last night as they walked to or from streetcar loading platforms.

Mrs. Leische Poppe, the 28-year-old wife of Lieut. Janus Poppe of The Netherlands navy, suffered head injuries and a fractured leg when, police said, she stepped from a loading platform at Georgia ave. and Van Buren st. nw.

Mrs. Poppe's husband, 1012 Floral ave., Takoma Park, Md., is attached to the combined chiefs of staff here. Police said the cab striking her was operated by William B. Price, 39, of 339 13th st. se.

She was taken to Emergency Hospital.

At Gallinger Hospital, Donald F. McMann, 33, of 1008 Potomac ave. se., was reported suffering from a possible skull fracture. He was struck by a taxi as he stepped from a curb, going to a loading platform, at 3d and H sts. ne. Police listed the cab driver as John L. Bethea, 41, of 1364 10th st. nw.

Earlier five persons were injured in a three-car collision on Baltimore blvd. at the Greenbelt rd. in Berwyn, Md.

According to Prince Georges County Police, a southbound automobile operated by Albert Kraich, 21, Vincentown, N. J., pulled out of the line of traffic to avoid striking a car which had stopped in front of him.

His car collided with cars operated by Joel David Colton, 21, of Baltimore, and Sehorn Lee, 39, of Newark, N. J. All three drivers were charged with reckless driving and released on bond for hearings September 16 in Hyattsville Police Court.

Injured were Kraich, Colton, Emanuel Ann Stowe, 5; Rita Lee, 33, and Mary Wade, 41, the last three being passengers in the Lee car and all from Newark. All were treated at Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, for cuts and bruises and released.

3 New Cases Lift Area Polio Total to 133

Three new cases of polio were diagnosed at Childrens Hospital yesterday raising this season's Greater Washington total to 133.

The new cases were a 5-year-old girl from the 4500 block of Blue Plain dr. sw., who entered the hospital Wednesday; a 4-year-old boy from the 1600 block of V st. nw., who was admitted Thursday, and an 11-year-old girl from the 4800 block of Chevy Chase blvd., Chevy Chase, Md., who entered Friday.

The new reports brought the District case total to 73, as compared to 6 for this date last year, and the nearby Maryland and Virginia total to 60, as compared to 14 for the counties this time last year. Three fatalities have been recorded thus far this year.

In Virginia, three new cases were reported, bringing the Statewide total to 316. The new ones were in Pulaski County and in the city of Norfolk.

Democrat Picnic Postponed Week

The Democratic rally and picnic, sponsored by the Democratic State Central Committee of Montgomery County, scheduled for September 18, has been postponed until September 25.

The affair will be held at Meadowbrook, East-West hwy. at Beach dr. at 6 p. m.

Arlington Acts

Rosslyn Gas Co. Inquiry To Be Asked

The Arlington County Board yesterday agreed to ask the Virginia State Corporation Commission for an investigation of the Rosslyn Gas Co. and the rates charged.

The action was taken at the regular meeting in the county courthouse, on the recommendation of the Arlington Public Utilities Commission.

If the State Corporation Commission finds that the income of the gas company exceeds a "reasonable return"—generally set at about 6 per cent—the board will request a formal SCC rate hearing and possibly a new schedule of rates.

In making the PUC's report, Albert A. Carretta, member, pointed out that the Rooslyn Gas Co. is a subsidiary of the Washington Gas Light Co.

He charged that Rosslyn gas costs "seem out of line" with costs in other parts of the country and said that the parent concern "milks" the Rosslyn company with excessive charges.

Carretta said the national average gas rate is 6.8 cents per 100 cubic feet of gas. In Arlington, he said, the rate is 16.8 cents.

Incinerator Contract To Be Let on Friday

The Arlington County board agreed yesterday to meet again at 8 p. m. Friday to award a contract for construction of an incinerator plant.

Four firms have bid on the project, with the lowest offer submitted by the Morse-Boulger Destructor Co. of New York City, $628,843.

The incinerator will be located on South Glebe road near Number 1 highway. The board is considering a bond issue of $745,000 for incinerator construction and associated costs.

New Defense Lawyer Enters 'Sally's' Trial

James J. Laughlin, Washington attorney, yesterday filed papers in United States District Court to defend Miss Mildred Elizabeth Gillars, 47, alleged to be Axis Sally, who was indicted Friday on 10 counts of treason.

Laughlin's papers contained a hand-written statement that he was filing his papers "according to the wishes" of Miss Gillars.

On August 30, Mildred Gillars notified John M. Holzworth, another local attorney, who had stepped in to defend her, that she wished to emphatically repudiate "all and everything you have done, or allegedly attempted to do in my behalf."

Her action followed withdrawal of Attorney Richard W. Tomkins, and withdrawal of his petitions to aid her, when he notified Judge Richmond B. Keech, of the court, he was first retained by Holzworth.

Camalier Named Area Shrine Head

Renah F. Camalier, 4240 Nebraska ave. nw., attorney and former counsel of the Senate District Committee, was named president of the Mid-Atlantic area Shriners yesterday at the close of a three-day annual meeting in Virginia Beach, Va.

The Mid-Atlantic and Southeastern Shriners Associations, meeting jointly at Virginia Beach, also voted for separate meetings next year in closing business sessions. The Mid-Atlantic Association chose Washington as its next meeting place.

Other officers elected by the Mid-Atlantic group are: Walter Jeffries, Atlantic City, N. J., first vice president; L. K. Stielman, Hagerstown, Md., third vice president; Ralph Wolfe, investment broker, living at 4925 Upton st. nw., secretary-treasurer.

Job of Spring-Cleaning, Slightly Delayed, Is Rushed Inside and Outside the Capitol

OILS BATHED IN OIL—Housecleaning—delayed by the summer's special session—is under way now at the Capitol. Nothing is overlooked. Even the paintings get a bath—and in linseed oil. John H. Leary, foreman, observes as S. Perry cleans "Embarkation of the Pilgrims"

By Judith Spivak
Post Reporter

Spring cleaning at the Capitol—temporarily delayed by the extra session this summer—is well under way now, and painters, plumbers, roofers, electricians, carpenters and charwomen are roaming the nearly deserted building, sprucing it up for the day Congress comes back to work.

Outside the Capitol, the dome—made of nearly nine million pounds of cast iron—and the sandstone central section of the building are getting their once-every-four-years paint job. Covering this area of 57,890 square yards takes 2500 gallons of a special blend of gray paint, mixed to match the exact shade of the building's antique marble wings.

About 60 workers, accustomed to dizzy heights and picked for their strong stomachs, are employed on the 3-month job, begun August 31. Total cost of the outside painting is $46,000 this year. Prewar price of the same job back in 1939 was a mere $30,000.

Keeps One Man Busy

Inside the Capitol, the annual housecleaning and redecoration is in the hands of Arthur E. "Gus" Cook, supervising engineer in the office of the architect at the Capitol, and one of the busiest men on the Hill these days.

It's up to him to see that the 432 rooms and 14 acres of floor space in the building, not to mention 554 doorways, 679 windows and nearly 17,000 square feet of skylights are repaired and painted wherever necessary.

He also has to worry about the lighting, plumbing, heating and airconditioning systems in the building, all of which are completely overhauled each year along with 12 elevators. A staff of about 20 permanent skilled workers, plus as many more temporary assistants with complete workshops at their disposal in the West Terrace of the Capitol, take care of this.

80 Statues to Clean

Included in the Capitol's annual bath are 80 statues, 47 chandeliers and approximately 100 paintings, as well as the walls, ceilings and corridors of the central section of the building. Cleaning in the Senate wing is up to the sergeant at arms office, and in the House wing is taken care of by the doorkeeper's office.

Capitol rooms are painted about every four years, a few each year, and it's no easy job, since most Capitol chambers are heavily decorated with intricate designs which must be carefully duplicated.

Job Has Grown Easier

Heaviest wear and tear by far is on the House and Senate cloakrooms which must be painted yearly. Next come the House Foreign Affairs room, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee room, and the House and Senate Appropriations rooms—all in almost constant use during the session.

Cook still shudders, though, when he remembers the struggle his staff had removing the lipstick some visitor put on the lips and cheeks of Jack Garner's statue some years ago.

One of his toughest chores used to be cleaning out fireplaces and removing the smoky scars they left on the walls. Now only about 18 are still left in the building and these are seldom used.

Remodeling Plans

Plans for rebuilding the Senate chamber, including construction of a structural steel and reinforced concrete roof to replace the present one of flat glass and cast iron, are still in the paperwork stage.

Contract for the work is expected to be negotiated sometime this month by the Capitol architect's office, and actual work on the project will probably start next summer.

Other features of the scheduled remodeling of the Senate chamber are new and higher sound-proofed walls of wood with marble trim, a new indirect lighting system, fireproof reconstruction of the galleries, and new noiseless gallery seats.

Congress has appropriated almost $1,500,000 for rebuilding of the Senate Chamber, plus a similar remodeling of the House chamber. About $585,000 of the sum was voted in 1940 and another $861,000, in 1945.

Although plans for both the House and Senate jobs have been approved, Congress has given the go-ahead signal on the Senate project only.

Capitol Architect David Lynn, now on vacation, predicted in 1946 that the $1,446,000 authorized would have to be "substantially increased," to cover cost of both projects.

About $80,000 of the appropriation has already been spent on construction, for safety's sake, of temporary steel beams to support roofs in both chambers.

Theater Plans Given Setback On Bookings

Plans for a modern legitimate playhouse on Wisconsin ave. at Newark st. nw. have suffered a setback by refusal of the president of the National Theater's operating company to promise a franchise.

This was disclosed yesterday by Arthur C. Katims, spokesman for Theodore Granik and Garfield I. Kass, prospective builders. He said Marcus Heiman, who also serves as president of the United Booking Office, Inc., in addition to holding the national post here, has rejected pleas for a franchise.

Without some assurance that Broadway shows will be booked into the new theater, builders cannot move ahead because the risk would be too great, Katims said.

Katims characterized Heiman's attitude as "very suspicious" and intimated that the refusal to okay a franchise is linked with Heiman's connection with the National Theater here. He hinted that Heiman may plan to reopen the National at some future date if residents—starved for live theater fare—force Actors Equity to abandon its stand against serving the theater.

Attempts to reach Heiman in New York for his comments were fruitless. His Washington attorney, Robert E. Kline, said he could not speak with authority on the matter.

Katims said Heiman has repeatedly refused to answer all letters addressed to him about the franchise, referring the entire matter to his attorney. He said Kline reported for Heiman that no "commitment" on bookings would be considered until the theater is up.

The new theater originally was planned to cost $600,000 but Katims announced that interest is so great that as much as a million dollars may go into it.

Washington has had no legitimate theater since the National shut down July 31 rather than alter its ban against admitting Negroes in the audience, a change sought by Actors Equity.

Granik, who is a prominent attorney and Kass, president of the Kass Realty Co. here, have indicated among other policy statements that the new theater will not practice segregation.

Cautions for Mother, Too

Baby-Sitting Career Manual Frowns on Dates, Icebox Raids

With baby-sitting fast becoming a "career," the "romance" should leave the business.

At least that is the view of Helen Irene Smith, University of Maryland home management specialist, who has written a pamphlet for the benefit of 4-H girls aged 14 to 17 and any other Marylanders who would like a copy.

"No boy friends," warns Miss Smith. "This is a job, not a date. A girl friend who is congenial, quiet and cooperative may visit sitter if agreeable to sitter and to parent."

"Baby sitting can be a career to the girl who loves children, who has patience, understanding, is level-headed, dependable and willing to learn," the pamphlet says.

Questions to Be Asked

The prospective sitting careerist is asked to ask herself these questions:

"What is my relationship to the parents? What is my relationship to the child? What skills do I need to have and where can I find more help to become a good baby sitter?"

Some other don'ts of baby-sitting are:

Don't break an engagement unless you are ill.

Don't be a sitter if you have a cold or have been exposed to a contagious disease.

Don't talk to the child about kidnappers, policemen and bogeymen.

Some do's:

Arrive early enough to become acquainted with the child and the home situation.

Know how and what to feed the child.

Know fundamental facts of child care. (A list of suggested reading is attached.)

Cautions for Mother

A list of cautions for the mother employing the sitter is also included.

Mothers are supposed to return at the appointed time. They should not ask the sitter to do dishes, rinse out garments, etc. They are to make sure that the sitter is properly escorted home after the job is over.

On the subject of wages, the booklet has this to tell the propective sitter:

"Each local area has its own prevailing wage. Find out rates in your area. Sometimes the rate varies with additional responsibilities, such as doing dishes. The rate is generally increased after 12 p. m.

Son, 5, Also Hit

Mother Struck by Tomatoes At Rally for Wallace Here

A Washington mother—member of the Young Progressives here—said she and her son, 5, were struck by tomatoes thrown by "10 or 12" neighborhood youths yesterday as Wallace followers gathered for a new attempt to lead a mixed racial group into the Rosedale Playground, 17th and Gales sts. ne.

Later, after the scheduled demonstration had been deferred due to an unanticipated fall early Saturday closing of the white play area, four Negro youths were arrested in the neighborhood for playing ball in the street and striking a street lamp.

The tomato throwing was reported by Mrs. Chester Kurrier, 26, of 3545 10th st. nw., who stands a little over 5 feet tall. She told reporters she and her son, Michael, were walking in the direction of the playground to verify reports it was closed when some young "chaps" started throwing the tomatoes.

Angus MacDonald, 35, of 2662 S. Meade st., Arlington, who also participated in the demonstration, said the same group of boys shouted "Nigger lover" as he passed and slung tomatoes at him. One brushed his back.

A spokesman for the Young Progressives said a new attempt to enter the playground will be made at 9 a. m. next Saturday. Four previous tries—all on Saturdays—proved fruitless. Yesterday's demonstration had been planned for 1:30 p. m.

District Spent $12,000,000 on Handicapped

Welfare Board Report Shows Care Provided To 18,110 During Year

The increasing problems of caring for the city's handicapped, the dependent, neglected or delinquent, the feeble-minded, the needy aged and others in distress were outlined yesterday in facts and figures.

In a detailed, statistic-filled 66-page annual report to the District Commissioners, the Board of Public Welfare told of the essential services it provided to 18,110 persons during the fiscal year 1948, which ended June 30. The cost: nearly 12 million dollars.

This number included 4870 insane; 4235 aged, infirm and handicapped adults; 620 feeble-minded children and adults; 5060 needy parents of children receiving assistance, and 2065 dependent, neglected or delinquent children in institutions or foster family homes.

Highlights Problems

In telling the story, John W. Tramburg, director of public welfare, highlighted some of problems ahead for his department:

1. Over half of the board's total expenditures during the year went for the care of District insane at St. Elizabeths Hospital. The average number cared for there during the year was 4868, representing the top of a steadily rising curve since the end of World War II. The bill was $6,502,289 for the hospital services to the mentally ill.

2. The root of the child adoption problem here "is the lack of a comprehensive program of service to unmarried mothers." Early referral of the expectant mother is particularly essential to insure "better prenatal care and deliberation regarding the future plan for the child" so that the decision to keep the child or give it up "will not be influenced, made hastily or under duress."

During the year, services were given to 125 unmarried mothers as against 217 in 1947. The reason for the decline was "a shortage of money" which necessitated "limiting intake of unmarried mothers."

The District has contracts with three maternity homes—Florence Crittenton Home, House of Mercy and St. Ann's Infant Asylum and Maternity Home—but there is "no comparable facility for Negro girls" here.

3. The need for aid to neglected children is intensified by the "breakdown of war and postwar marriages and emotional entanglements involving children born out of wedlock."

In addition, the housing shortage has forced some families to live in sub-marginal homes, crowded into relatives homes or forced temporary separation of the family with the "resultant breakdown of family solidarity and adequacy."

4. "Because clerical salaries in agency services are lower than those in Federal jobs for the same type of work, it has been almost impossible to fill clerical vacancies or to hold the workers on the job."

5. Construction of four buildings is urgently needed: An infirmary for the Home for the Aged, detention or security buildings at the District Training School, replacements for present units of the Industrial Home School for white children and a dormitory at the Industrial Home School for Negro children.

Need for Foster Homes

6. A continuing need for foster homes to take in boys of all ages and girls of school age makes consideration of an increase of boarding rates "imperative."

7. The Landlord-Tenant Consultant Service counseled more than 2400 persons appearing in court in eviction cases.

8. The Home for the Aged and Infirm, commonly known as Blue Plains, has "totally inadequate and dilapidated facilities and equipment" for the preparation and service of 1500 meals a day.

A second problem there is the present policy of admitting alcoholics to the institution. "This helpless group should not, of course, be admitted to the home. However, since the community is without facilities to do otherwise a restricted number are tolerated."

By admitting alcoholics, "the real atmosphere of home life for the remaining guests is totally destroyed no less than once a week."

Representative Beall is a candidate for reelection on the Republican ticket for the Sixth Congressional District of Maryland.

Suspect Resembling Description Held in Policeman's Slaying

PVT. ROBERT B. HARRIS
Killed in line of duty

Witnesses Say They Saw Him Fleeing Scene in Alexandria

A suspect n the slaying of Police Pvt. Robert Benjamin Harris was held by Alexandria police last night after a score of men were screened in connection with the shooting.

Although declining to reveal details, Detective Chief Russell Hawes did say the suspect, arrested near the scene, resembles the description of the killer given by two witnesses, who heard the shot and saw the apparent slayer leap a fence and disappear.

Hawes would not elaborate on the description except to say the fugitive was identified as a Negro.

Harris, a rookie policeman, on the force less than three weeks, died in Alexandria Hospital at about 3:30 a. m. yesterday, 40 minutes after he had been shot in the groin while making a routine check in the rear of the Howard Johnson restaurant, North Washington and Montgomery sts.

Description of the suspected slayer was given police by two women who were waiting for a bus at North Washington and Madison sts., when they were startled by the bark of a pistol.

Saw Him Leap Fence

The women, Edna Wilson of No. 2 Butts Court, Alexandria, and her sister, Lela Wilson of 512 North Washington st., said they saw a man, about 100 feet from where they stood, flee from the rear of the restaurant and leap a four-foot fence bordering the establishment and facing Madison st.

They told police the fugitive then darted east on Madison st. toward the waterfront and disappeared.

Police said the women's story was corroborated in part by Harris' last statement before he lapsed into a coma: "I'm shot. He went that way," pointing toward Madison st.

Harris and Pvt. George Jordan had been making routine checks of property along their beat.

While Harris walked to the rear of the Johnson establishment, Jordan checked a frozen custard shop on Montgomery st. less than half a block away.

Hearing a pistol shot, Jordan came running. He found his buddy sprawled face down on the ground. His .38-caliber service pistol was lying a few inches from his outstretched hand as if he had been prepared to fire.

After saying "I'm shot" and describing the assailant's line of flight, Harris lapsed into a coma from which he never recovered.

Police said the fatal bullet, of "high-powered caliber," passed through Harris' groin, severing a large artery. They said that from the position of Harris' body, the shot probably was fired from near the restaurant's rear entrance.

Spot Blood-Spattered

The rear of the restaurant is separated from a parking lot by an eight-foot fence. On the far side of the alley runs the four-foot fence hurdled by the assailant. The spot where he leaped was mottled with blood, although Harris lay several feet away.

Besides Jordan, another policeman heard the shot and came running. He was Corpl. Thomas J. MacGowan, at the time of the slaying two blocks away on St. Asaph st. He said he saw no one on the Montgomery street side as he approached.

Inspector Russell Hawes declared there was no evidence of an attempt to break into the rear of the restaurant and that a gate leading to the structure was locked.

Hawes' theory was that Harris surprised a prowler before the latter had a chance to try entry and that the slaying followed.

Janitor Released

In the meantime, police released a janitor who had been arrested earlier as a suspect after an eight-block chase. The man had appeared suddenly from the bushes near the restaurant where police were searching for clews.

As the police approached, the man took to his heels. He was captured shortly afterward in the 800 block of Wythe st., but freed later when no link with the crime could be found.

Harris, who served with the Army Air Forces in France, was married and the father of an infant son. He joined the Alexandria Police Department on August 23 after having worked for an electrical supply company. He was a native of Pantegro, N. C.

Reward Posted

Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Elsie Harris, 22; the son, Robert B. Harris, jr., 6 months; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Harris, and a brother, James Harris, 14, all of 529 East Luray st., Alexandria.

A $50 reward for apprehension of the killer has been offered by R. P. Poag, operator of a tourist court on Route 4, Alexandria. Police said an additional reward is expected to be posted by the Alexandria City Council when it meets Tuesday.

Harris' body, which had rested at the Wheatley funeral home, 809 King st., was shipped to Yeattsville, N. C., last night for burial. Private Jordan and Police Lieut. George Eberly escorted the remains. By request of City Manager Nicholas Colasanto, church bells throughout the community tolled as the train bearing the body left the station.

Mrs. Harris had left earlier for the Southern city by mototr car.

The slain policeman was the ninth Alexandria officer to be killed in line of duty since 1887, officials said.

Church Dinner Monday

The Men's Club of First Methodist Church of Hyattsville, will hold a dinner at 6:30 p. m. Monday at the church.

F St. Parking Ban Declared 'Unnecessary'

Few Meters May Go To Make Room for Bus Stops, Young Reports

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Elimination of parking on F st. nw. between 8th and 15th sts., the heart of the downtown shopping area, "will not be necessary," Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young said last night.

The proposal was made last week by the Capital Transit Co. in asking the District Public Utilities Commission to approve a shuttle bus plan for carrying shoppers from fringe parking lots to the commercial area.

General Young, a member of the Board of Commissioners, whose approval would be necessary to institute the blanket parking ban, said consideration is now being given to elimination of a few parking meters to make way for corner bus stops.

Session Called Tuesday

To discuss alternatives, a conference of Capital Transit, PUC, Highways Department, Vehicles and Traffic Department and the Motor Vehicle Parking Agency officials has been called for Tuesday afternoon in the PUC offices.

W. T. Vanaman, assistant director of the Motor Vehicle Parking Agency, which first proposed the fringe parking shuttle bus plan, said consideration is now being given to the elimination of 16 to 20 of the 65 parking spots on F st. to make way for bus stops.

A parking agency survey indicated that each of the 65 spots averaged five cars a day. Some of the spots were occupied, contrary to regulations, for more than one hour, he said.

The two fringe lots included in the scheme are at 25th and E sts. nw. and near the Heurich Brewery at 3d st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. near the Heurich Brewery, and The first named will hold 225 vehicles and the second will begin with 500 to 600, Vanaman said. The capacity can go as high as 1200 there, he said.

Each spot on the lots is planned to average 1½ cars a day, or "two cars a day, to be optimistic," the parking agency official explained. At this rate, the two lots would handle about 1238 cars a day, or almost four times as many as are now accommodated on the F st. section.

A blanket ban on parking, such as was proposed last week by Capital Transit for the F st. area, has been tried in Philadelphia, where an entire city section is now completely free of parking zones, Vanaman said. There it has "resulted in a tremendous traffic speedup," but the same would not hold true here, he declared.

Streets in the Philadelphia plan were almost uniform in size as well as traffic density, while here conditions vary widely from street to street, Vanaman explained.

To Avoid Double Jeopardy

Policeman's Assault Charge Dropped on Technicalities

Charges of assaulting a policeman were dropped against a 25-year-old laborer yesterday when a policeman presenting the case, together with two others, tripped over court technicalities.

Prince C. Cannon, 25, of 1337 R st. nw., a laborer, was fined a total of $35 on charges of "disorderly conduct" and "drunk," when he appeared before District Judge John P. McMahon. Second Precinct Pvt. T. B. O'Bryant brought Cannon into McMahon's court.

Later, when Private O'Bryant took Cannon into U. S. Municipal Court Judge Aubrey B. Fennell's court on a charge of "assaulting an officer," Cannon protested to the judge he had heard the officer give the same testimony before he had been fined $35 on the other charges.

In answer to the man's query why he was "getting two trials," Assistant United States Attorney Robert Short called Pvt. O'Bryant into conference and then asked the judge to nolle prosse the assault chaarge, "in order that the defendent not be in double jeopardy."

Short explained to the court that the assault charge should have been tried first, and in this case, "by aaccident," the procedure had been reversed. Judge Fennell complimented the attorney as a "fair prosecutor" and dropped the assault charge against Cannon.

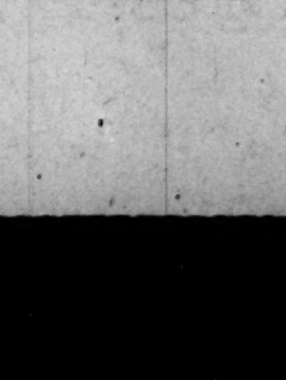
Washington's Most Beautiful
Rock Creek Cemetery
NON-SECTARIAN NON-SPECULATIVE



The Simon Memorial, symbolic of the joyful triumph of the soul over death, is one of the earliest works of Brenda Putnam, but it holds promise of the eminence which she was to gain. Like so many memorials in Rock Creek Cemetery, this one to Anne Simon is an example of the work of a noted sculptor.

Many monuments here are the recognized masterpieces of the sculptors, yet all are part of the beautiful unity of Rock Creek Cemetery. Each is set off as a jewel against a background of green shrubbery. Under the policy set up years ago by the continuing Board of Trustees, landscaping throughout the cemetery is correlated, and suggestions are made to plot owners as to plantings that will be in keeping with the overall plan and at the same time will be attractive to the type of monument being erected. With simplicity as the keynote, a pleasing effect is achieved with shrubs and small trees.

With characteristic foresight the Board has also provided for perpetual care of the individual graves and plots. Careful management has made it possible to maintain the cemetery on a non-speculative basis. Drive through Rock Creek Cemetery soon, see the Simon Memorial and the many other beautiful monuments. See the original glebe and some of the older sections, steeped in history. See the newer sections where attractive lots are still available at reasonable prices.

KOPELAND CROWNS MARY JANE OWENS 'MISS SILVER SPRING'

'Avenue of Progress' Opens

A Great Day in Silver Spring

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

Silver Spring took on a carnival air yesterday as it celebrated the opening of the new Georgia ave. underpass.

There was a parade, one to delight the heart of the most critical of parade connoisseurs.

There were high-stepping young drum majorettes who drew more than casual attention.

And there was music and floats and street curbs lined with wide-eyed youngsters and equally interested adults.

There were talks, one of them by Gov. William Preston Lane, jr. There was a crowning of a shapely young lass who had won the title of "Miss Silver Spring."

No question, it was quite a show.

After Governor Lane snipped the tape at the entrance to the new underpass, the small fry rushed in and fought for lengths of it as souvenirs.

One young lady of three wrapped a length of the ribbon around her waist and smiled happily.

It was a leisurely sort of parade that followed. The car carrying the Governor led the procession through the underpass.

Then came other cars bearing officials and guests. Then —the eye-filling part of the parade—the floats.

The parade moved slowly down Georgia ave. The curbs were lined with thousands of persons. Many of them waved friendly greetings to these in the parade.

From windows emerged many faces. Everyone was smiling. Everyone was happy.

Perhaps Governor Lane thought he was missing the show. His car pulled out of the parade along the route and parked to one side while the bands and floats and precise drum majorettes filed by.

Even when the parade passed from the business section into the residential area, the parade route was still lined. Many families had set chairs on their lawns to watch it pass. The kids scorned the chairs. They perched on the curbs.

At one point, a man carrying a galvanized bucket waved to one of the occupants of the official cars in the parade. It certainly looked like mint sprigs in that bucket, observed one reporter.

"Ah, yes," explained an official wistfully, "it's an old Silver Spring custom. They make their mint juleps in buckets here."

"Miss Silver Spring," or more correctly, Miss Mary Jane Owens, 20, of 718 Chesapeake ave., Silver Spring, drew whistles when, clad in a trim white bathing suit, she passed by on a stagecoach pulled by two horses.

The stagecoach ran into trouble when it reached Montgomery Blair High School's new stadium. The wheels of the coach sank heavily into ground made soft by rainfall.

Miss Owens showed true Silver Spring spirit. She stepped from the stagecoach into a streamlined 1948 convertible coupe.

One entry in the parade that drew chuckles was that of two Campfire girls, Sue Sinclair, 12, and Anne O'Roark, 13. They rode in a dog sulky drawn by a 2-year-old Great Dane named Brenda. The sizable Brenda pulled the sulky the entire mile but was a panting pup at the finish.

Parade Winners

Eight judges, headed by Clifton B. White, put their heads together after viewing the parade and announced these winners:

Most original float—First, Morningside Laundry; second, Civitan Club.

Most beautiful float—Williams Chevrolet Co.

Float best symbolizing progress—First, Maloney's Hardware; second, Suburban National Bank.

Best bands—First, Elks Boys and Girls Band of Silver Spring; second, Montgomery Blair High School band; third, Silver Spring Boys band.

Best marching groups—First, honor guard of the Silver Spring Veterans of Foreign Wars Post; second, Campfire Girls; third, Knights of Columbus.

Auto Relics Groan

Also in the parade were the 304th Regiment Army Band from Walter Reed Hospital and the Scottish pipe band of Washington.

A few automobile relics groaned along the parade route. Oldest entry was an 1899 Cadillac touring car.

Silver Spring physicians sponsored a modern ambulance which bore a sign proclaiming that the city's doctor population had risen from 4 in 1928 to 28 in 1948.

All Silver Spring and Montgomery County officialdom was present, including the county board of commissioners. Blair Lee 3d, president of the Silver Spring Board of Trade, introduced the dignitaries.

Norman Brokenshire, veteran radio announcer, was master of ceremonies.

During the stadium program, H. Stanley Stine, president of the county board of education, and Col. E. Brooke Lee, vice chairman of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, formally accepted the new stadium.

B. & O. Head Speaks

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, which contributed to the construction of the new Georgia ave. underpass, was represented by its president, Roy B. White, and its men's choral group.

"We are pleased to have had an important part in making Silver Spring Maryland's second largest city," said White.

Only casualty of the day was Barbara Browning, 18-year-old Elks Club band drum majorette, who was overcome by the heat at the stadium. She was treated by a physician and then taken to her home, 315 Penwood rd., Silver Spring, by the Takoma Park rescue squad.

REPLICA OF AN EARLY AMERICAN B & O LOCOMOTIVE ATTRACTED MUCH ATTENTION

It's Turning Point For Silver Spring

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Silver Spring seemed to come of age yesterday looking back a little sadly on a happy, sleepy past and forward to a bright, restless future of prosperity and progress.

What happened yesterday, the celebration marking reopening of the community's "Broadway," Georgia ave., was a turning point in its history.

The memory-filled past was buried with fitting honors and a new era was ushered in.

The thousands who pushed and shoved their way to vantage points along the 2-mile parade route saw relics of the old Silver Spring, a wagon that helped build the first Georgia ave. in 1840 and a creaky truck used when the street was first paved in 1914.

There was also hand-drawn fire equipment used by Silver Spring firefighters in 1918, ancient high-wheeled bicycles, gas buggies and old-time costumes.

All Agree It's Great Day

The modern note was furnished by limousines, sleek fire equipment and numerous floats sponsored by aggressive business firms.

A comedy note was furnished by a bulbous-nosed clown who did his best to disrupt the marching units and finally, exhausted, rode the rest of the way behind a cop on a motorcycle.

From Governor Lane, who was on hand with his flashing smile and waving to the crowd, on down to the citizens, all agreed: "It's a great day for Silver Spring."

It was also a day for reminiscing by the old-timers along the parade route and in the stadium stands. They remembered the cow pastures, the vacant areas and the orchards. In their place yesterday were flag-draped buildings, a vast road network and mile after mile of residential areas.

The change in Silver Spring came almost overnight. All of a sudden, it was there, like your twenty-first birthday.

Ask the widow of Frank L. Hewitt, the man who moved there in 1903, had nine children and organized a bank, was the first postmaster and built an extra house on Sligo ave. he hadn't planned to so the community could get its first electricity from Washington.

Ask the children of Enos C Keys, Berry E. Clark or Herbert Cissell all of whom pioneered in Silver Spring. And especially John H. Hunter, now retired, who for decades operated Hunter Bros. farm implement store on Georgia ave. beside the B. & O. Railroad station.

Television is Too Much

They tried to put Mr. Hunter on a television broadcast in conjunction with the celebration so he went to the beach. As Frank L. Hewitt, Jr., who is carrying on his father's real estate business, put it yesterday: "It must have scared him out of town."

There are many others who remember the preboom days in Silver Spring, who played a part in the community's development, and who were on hand yesterday. Like Fred L. Lutes, president of the Suburban National Bank, or Capt. Guy Jones, a retired Montgomery County policeman and his son Lee Jones, owner of the prospering Silver Spring Taxi Association.

Or Charlie Barnes and Joseph B. Nolte, both captains on the county police force; Fred Jones, who at the age of 12 worked in a mill at Georgia and Sligo aves., where Gifford's ice cream plant now stands; Mose Turner, a storekeeper, and Judge William B. Wheeler, or the Clements, the Weismans, the Shriders, the Thompsons, the Barretts and Hugh F. O'Donnell to mention only a few.

But most of all ask Col. E. Brooke Lee, the man they call "Mr. Silver Spring." It was Lee's grandfather, Francis Preston Blair, who named the community for a mica-sprinkled spring in 1842. Lee's father, the colonel himself and his son, Blair Lee 3d, newspaper editor and president of the Silver Spring Board of Trade, have been community leaders ever since.

Col. Lee Reminisces

Fittingly yesterday, Lacy Shaw, a county official for more than two decades also was briefly in the limelight. A close friend of Col. Lee's, for years the political leader of Montgomery County, Shaw formulated major policies and helped shape the county's political destiny.

"There was a big boy chasing me in front of Hunter's store," Lee said yesterday recalling his childhood, "and I fell down cutting my knee severely on a rock on Georgia ave. One of the two doctors then in Silver Spring sewed it up."

"Georgia ave. was then bouncy rock in the winter and covered with three inches of dust in the summer," he remembered.

Still reminiscing, he recalled how in 1908 they raised $8800 by popular subscription to build the Woodside School. Before that there were two one-room schools, one of them run by a Mr. Lemon, Lee said.

There was also reminiscing by the newer residents yetserday—the hordes of Government workers who have settled in the county which boasts the highest standard of living of any county in the country.

They remembered all too clearly the old underpass, narrow and frequently flooded, which caused numerous accidents, someof them serious.

Many were observed yesterday riding through the glistening underpass several times apparently just for the fun of it. One resident, owner of a Silver Spring photographic studio, said he drove through the underpass a week ago while it was still under construction to become the "first."

Maryland Rated High in Hospital Service Offered

Maryland stands high among States in general hospital facilities, according to a report by Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing to President Truman. Virginia ranks comparatively low.

For every 1000 persons in Maryland, there are 4.2 hospital beds available, according to 1946 figures, the report states. There are only 2.9 hospital beds for every 1000 population in Virginia, and 3.3 in West Virginia. Nation-wide goal, reached as yet by very few States, according to the report, is 4.5 beds.

Maryland ranks well, too, in number of physicians in ratio to population. There is one doctor for every 609 Maryland residents, while in Virginia there is one doctor for 927 residents, and in West Virginia, one doctor for 1037, based on 1940 statistics.

Postoffice At Woodmoor Opens Monday

A new branch of the Silver Spring Postoffice to be known as the Woodmoor Postoffice, will open Monday in two stores at 10023 and 10025 Old Bladensburg rd., sarving the Four Corners area.

Superintendent T. Gordon Darby will be in charge of the office, which is in the Woodmoor shopping center. The staff will include three clerks headed by Lawrence H. Reed, 15 carriers and several substitutes, according to Postmaster William E. Bowman of Silver Spring.

The branch will be open Mondays through Fridays from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. and on Saturdays from 8 a. m. until 1 p. m. Delivery of new equipment is expected by November 1 Meanwhile the branch will use makeshift equipment, Bowman said.

Underpass Resulted From 10-Year Fight

Opening of the new one million dollar Silver Spring underpass yesterday brought to an end a 10-year active campaign and more than 20 years of bitter complaining by nearby Maryland commuters.

The old underpass which replaced a grade crossing was built in 1928. Southbound traffic was given two lanes and Maryland commuters homeward bound were cramped into one.

There were frequent accidents and it was a common occurrence for heavy rains to flood the old viaduct, making it impassable.

In 1938, a group of businessmen in Silver Spring started a determined campaign to correct the situation.

Named to spearhead the campaign was a three-man committee consisting of William F. Carlin, a real estate man, Winship I. Green, a banker and the late Raymond E. Barret, a filling station operator.

State, Federal and county officials were hounded by the group for two years until plans for a new viaduct were prepared. All set to go in 1941 the plans were abandoned when war broke out.

At the end of the war, renewed pressure was brought on the State Roads Commission and the Bureau of Public Roads when it was found that funds allocated in 1940 were inadequate. A final "go ahead" was given in the summer of 1947 and work was started about a year ago.

The glistening new viaduct boasts two 36-foot drives with 6-foot sidewalks on each side and a 10-foot island in the center. The clearance is 14 feet.

A major project in connection with the underpass work was construction of a $100,000 outfall sewer which will eliminate flooding.

Thousands of Birds Lose Lives Against N. Y. Building

New York, Sept. 11 (U.P.).—Thousands of migratory birds lost in a fog crashed into the Empire State Building early today in a pitiful tragedy of nature.

From midnight until dawn the birds cracked into the sides of the world's tallest building and dropped by droves to the pavements far below.

The chirping of the injured birds drowned the din of early morning traffic.

Hard-boiled city workers, customarily indifferent, formed silent crowds watching with horor as the feathered creatures rained into Fifth ave.

The Empire State Building tragedy was the third within 15 hours.

In Philadelphia hundreds of birds plunged against downtown buildings. In Nashville yesterday hundreds more dropped to their deaths around the Nashville Airport.

Lee Crandall, general curator of the Bronx Zoo, described the tragedies as "coincidence." He discounted reports of radioactivity, food poisoning and "extreme" electric light heat as responsible factors.

Crandall said three different groups of migratory "day" birds, headed in different directions, "just happened" to run into fog and a shift in the wind from southwest to northwest drove the birds over the city instead of down the coast.

Landlady Notes Appeal in Rental Case Conviction

Mrs. Doris R. Frankfurt, 1513 28th pl. se., yesterday elected to post $500 cash collateral and appeal Thursday's conviction that she rented an apartment after evicting a tenant on the plea she wanted the quarters for herself.

Mrs. Frankfurt was ordered by Municipal Judge John P. McMahon to post $500 bond and note an appeal or otherwise pay a $500 fine or serve 60 days in jail.

The conviction in Municipal Court was the first of its kind on record here under the possession clause of the District Emergency Rent Act, which makes it illegal for a property owner to evict a tenant ostensibly to acquire the living quarters for personal use and then to rent them to another party.

WONDERFUL THINGS will happen in your living room

THE DU MONT SHERWOOD. A period-styled cabinet of dignity and charm in natural brown mahogany. Incomparable direct-view television pictures on a 116 sq. inch screen! AM, FM, worldwide shortwave radio and high-fidelity automatic record-player.

HOME RUNS will be hit; the next President will be picked; world championships will change hands . . . and you'll be right there. Things happen in a big way on this big direct-view television screen. Its brilliant, steady picture reveals every detail. And this magnificent cabinet holds far more than superb television — there's AM, FM and worldwide shortwave radio; and an automatic record player — all with matchless tone. Your home can become a place of endless excitement and infinite enjoyment when a Du Mont comes to live with you. Du Mont receivers are backed by 17 years experience in electronic engineering.

FIRST IN DEVELOPMENT. It was Dr. Allen B. Du Mont's development of the cathode-ray tube from a laboratory curiosity that made electronic television practical.

FIRST IN PRECISION ELECTRONICS. Du Mont Laboratories are the world's foremost makers of fine precision instruments employing the cathode-ray tube for many scientific uses.

FIRST IN RADAR. In 1933, Dr. Du Mont filed a patent application which the army asked him to withdraw and develop the invention in deepest secrecy. That was radar.

FIRST IN BROADCASTING. Du Mont operates the first television network. Its key station — WABD — New York, has the largest and best equipped studio in the world.

FIRST IN STATION EQUIPMENT. A large part of the television broadcasting stations now on the air was planned by Du Mont engineers and built with Du Mont broadcasting equipment.

FIRST IN FINE RECEIVERS. Du Mont built the first commercial home receiver (1939) and was first on the market with a full line of fine postwar receivers (1946).

47.5 Billion Outlay Possible Next Year

By the United Press

Government spending may run as high as $47,500,000,000 in fiscal 1950, a top Budget Bureau official said last night.

This would be about five billion dollars more than the estimated outlay for the current fiscal year.

The official said that, barring new taxes, Government revenues for fiscal 1950 would be roughly about 42 billion dollars.

He said total Government expenditures for the next fiscal year, starting July 1, 1949, depend on international conditions. A worsening international situaton, he said, easily could send military expenditures up another two or three billion dollars.

The military budget for the present fiscal year now stands at about 14 billion dollars.

For the next fiscal year, defense officials originally estimated they would need 22 billion dollars. They managed to pare this down to 17 billion dollars. But President Truman tentatively has set a 15 billion dollar budgetary limit for the Army, Navy and Air Force for the next fiscal year.

Catholic Charges 'Secularism' in Supreme Court

New Orleans, Sept. 11 (AP).—The United States Supreme Court was charged with "Secularism" by a Catholic lawyer here today as the National Council of Catholic Women opened their twenty-fourth anuual convention.

The attorney, George Reed of Washington, D. C., took issue with a recent court decision upholding a Champaign, Ill., mother's contention that religion should not be taught in public schools.

He said the Champaign religious teaching program had been sought by citizens there to combat a wave of juvenile delinquency.

Miss Anna V. Houck, executive secretary of the National Council of Catholic Nurses, of Washington, D. C., warned the delegates against early sex education for children.

"Such education," she said, "often leads young people to remark 'there is no such thing as sin' and 'there are certain natural instincts which should have full freedom.'"

Leave Japan, Reds Ask U. S.

By the United Press

Russia, claiming it played the major role in defeating Germany and Japan, is urging a speedy peace treaty with Japan and prompt withdrawal of occupation forces.

This was disclosed yesterday in an article published in the official "USSR Information Bulletin" distributed by the Soviet Embassy here.

The article, written by Soviet Journalist P. Krainov, said "Japan's rulers had no choice but to ask for terms of surrender" after Red troops defeated Japan's Kwantung army. It also said the defeat of Germany, "accomplished in the main by Soviet forces," predetermined the collapse of the Japanese war machine.

Alleged "belittlement and underestimation of Russia's role in the Far Eastern theater was labeled by Kranov as an attempt to prove that the United States alone has the right to pass final judgment on Japan's postwar problems.

Russia's desire for peace in the Far East is a "disinterested one," the article claimed. It criticized United States rejection of a Soviet plan that only Russia, the United States, Britain and China —with the veto—should bargain on Japan's future. The United States proposed a year ago that the 11 nations comprising the Far Eastern Commission write the Japanese treaty without the veto.

Juvenile Center Head Held in Rape of Inmates

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 11 (U.P.).—Edwin B. Lowell, 39, superintendent of the county juvenile detention center, admitted today he had been intimate with three teen-age girl delinquents placed in his charge.

Lowell, father of two small children, was held in jail in default of $10,000 bond on a charge of statutory rape, involving a 15-year-old. He named her and a 17-year-old girl in a brief confession and said he would make a formal statement concerning intimacies with a third girl "as soon as I can recall her name."

In his confession, Lowell said both the 15-year-old and the 17-year-old suggested the intimacies. He said he accepted their overtures "to avert trouble as the result of their emotional problems."

Lowell, a social worker of considerable standing, formerly was a Chicago boys' club supervisor and was an American Red Cross field director in the Pacific during the war.

D. C. Warned About Housing Fee Losses

The District government is losing thousands of dollars annually as "the result of its negligent policy" in enforcing local housing license regulating a Washington Guest House Association official charged yesterday.

In a letter to John Russell Young, president of the District Board of Commissioners, Paul J. Miller, president of the group, urged that the police be directed to make an immediate survey of all structures and the use to which they are put.

He predicted that such a study would uncover "a vast number" of public housing accommodations "of which the Commissioners at present are not aware, and which are escaping all types of fire safety, electrical, plumbing, building, zonin and health reggulations, and paying no license fees whatsoever."

Miller recommended the survey be launched immediately in order to make the results available in time for consideration at a public hearing on proposed new license fees for such housing now scheduled for October 6.

Letter Cited In Missing Wife Mystery

Milwaukee, Sept. 11 (U.P.).—A love letter from a comely widow to Edmond Lemay, 52, was made public today by authorities investigating the strange disappearance of Lemay's wife.

Sheriff George Hanley said the letter was written by Mrs. Eva Clark, 51, the missing woman's "best friend."

"I miss your kisses very much," she wrote.

Lemay's wife, Cecelia, 54, superintendent of the Milwaukee school lunch program, disappeared about June 15. Hanley said he was convinced she "met with foul play."

Six days after her disappearance, Lemay was transferred to Newark, N. J., by his employer. Hanley said he was accompanied there by Mrs. Clark, who later returned to Milwaukee. But she rejoined him in Newark, and became his "housekeeper."

Lemay denied any knowledge of his wife's whereabouts, Hanley said, and a "truth serum" test indicated he was telling the truth.

Earlier this week authorities shoveled five tons of coal from the Lemay basement in a futile search for Mrs. Lemay's body.

Prelate of Bulgarian Orthodox Church Quits

Sofia, Bulgaria, Sept. 11 (U.P.).—Exarch Stephan, head of the Communist-supervised Bulgarian Orthodox Church, has resigned, it was announced tonight.

The Orthodox religion, with more than five million followers, has the largest membership of any church in Bulgaria. Communist Premier George Dimitrov clamped down on the church ideologically late last year, demanding that priests and orthodox teachers work for the fatherland front (Communist Party).

He banned religious teaching or public prayer in schools or army barracks. In no official oath is the name of any deity mentioned. No religious ceremonies are permitted at state celebrations.

GOP Will Open New Headquarters At Bethesda

Republican headquarters for the Seventh Election District of Montgomery County will be opened this week at 7401 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda, a former bakery store.

The office, sponsored by the GOP State Central Committee, will also house the Dewey-Warren Club and will be the center for distribution of campaign material. Mrs. Leona Rush, lone woman delegate on the Montgomery County delegation to the Maryland Assembly, is in charge of volunteer headquarters workers.

The State Central Committee formerly maintained an affice at 7651 Old Georgetown rd., Bethesda.

Red Cross Uniform Is Redesigned

WANDA CARROLL, of 1106 Prince st., Alexandria, Va., models the new Red Cross women's uniform, embodying the first major changes since before the war. It was designed by Mainbocher, creator of the WAVE uniform. Most noticeable departure from previous styles is the hat, which has a heart-shaped crown and a front visor jauntily rolled on one side

Deconcentration Stands

Tokyo, Sept. 11 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters issued an official statement today that deconcentration of Japanese industry will be carried out as originally planned.

Grandmother, 58, Held in Assault

A 58-year-old grandmother was held in $5000 bond yesterday on a charge of assaulting another woman, who has been in a coma since September 8 as the result of the alleged attack on August 28.

The charge against Mrs. Minnie Stough, 1749 Seaton st. nw., followed police investigation that began September 8, when Miss Isabel Hollandan, 42, of 1701 V st. nw., collapsed while reporting the incident at the Tihrd Precinct and was taken to Gallinger Hospital. Hospital officials yesterday said the woman has been in a coma since September 8, suffering from a brain injury.

At yesterday's hearing, Municipal Court Judge Aubrey B. Fennelly set the bond and continued the case until September 24, pending the outcome of Miss Hollandan's condition.

U. S. Army to Exchange Personnel With British

Graffenwoehr, Germany, Sept. 11 (AP). — The United States and British armed forces in Europe plan to exchange officers and men for mutual experience, it was disclosed today.

Maj. Gen. Frank Milburn, commander of the First United States Infantry Division, said the first group of 7 officers and 13 enlisted men would be sent to British camps in England and in occupied Germany in October. A similar complement of British troops will come to the American zone to train with the American division and observe its methods.

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1948

Determined Britain Calls In Efficiency Experts

(This is another article by a Post reporter who recently returned from western Europe.)

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.

THE news from England last week was less dramatic than from Paris or Berlin, but perhaps no less important for the future of western Europe.

Decisions of the Trades Union Congress, representing almost nine million British workers, amounted to a great victory in the postwar Battle of Britain for economic recovery.

The Congress repudiated Communists and fellow-travelers in the British unions; it condemned wildcat strikes; it refused to demand higher wages, although the pinch of high prices is beginning to hurt; and it indorsed and upheld the government's policy of freezing wages and the prices of essential goods.

But none of these was as important, in the long run, as the announced willingness of the congress leaders to see more efficient methods introduced into British industry.

Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, has contended that the quickest way to increase British production is to increase the output per worker, not by decreeing longer hours of work but by improving the efficiency of British industrial methods.

"Old-fashioned ways and methods are not good enough to meet up-to-date needs and modern competition," he said just before the trade unionists assembled at Margate last week. He already had a pledge of cooperation from management, represented in the Federation of British Industries.

Now he appears to have won the backing of organized labor as well. Much will depend on whether these declarations are carried out, for if Britain can increase her output, reduce her costs of production and sell more of her goods abroad, it will help indirectly to strengthen all of western Europe.

A Brighter Prospect

THE spirit shown by British labor last week suggests that Britain is building on sound foundations, while some of her neighbors on the Continent, notably France, are trying to recover on a base of shifting sand. A visitor who goes to England from the Continent feels that nothing in the European picture is as encouraging as the fairness and the national self-discipline of the British effort at recovery.

France may be half-paralyzed by political weakness, Italy plagued by overpopulation and unemployment, western Germany apathetic and still half-prostrate from the war. But Britain is on the upgrade, and the attitude of her management and labor groups proves it.

Many of the normal methods of increasing production are now out of reach of the hard-pressed British, who have set themselves the goal of exporting half again as much this year as they did before the war.

One obvious method, for example, is to make or buy new machinery for the coal mines, new automatic looms for the textile mills, new equipment of all kinds to speed up production in outmoded and overworked factories. This method is barred, for the moment, by the lack of dollars. The British not only cannot buy the machinery they need, but they have to divert steel to make tractors, looms and other machinery for export so they can earn dollars abroad.

Another way to increase output is to put more workers on the job. But this, too, is out of the question; the British no longer have a surplus of cheap labor as they did before the war. Short of conscripting labor for the essential industries, as they did in wartime, the British have no way to increase their labor force except by importing a few thousand skilled workers from the Continent—and this device creates almost as many problems as it solves.

A third way, which may yet have to be adopted before Britain can stand on her own feet, is to lengthen the hours of work. But the average work week in many of the most important British industries is already more than 45 hours—and the average includes women and the youngest workers just out of school.

A Surface Solution

THE ONE course left is to introduce more productive methods into British industries which for years have shunned the efficiency expert like the plague. Two examples are coal and textiles, which came out of the war as the sickest of Britain's major export industries.

Since new coal-mining equipment simply is not available for digging below ground, the British can at least organize their mines more efficiently above ground, and reduce the present disproportionate amount of labor—the biggest proportion in any mining country today—that is used in moving the coal above ground from the shaft.

Since new automatic looms cannot be bought for the textile weaving mills, the British mill managers can at least redeploy their labor, so that skilled workers can give all their time to the machines and let the unskilled workers do the auxiliary jobs.

"By a keen study of methods," said Sir Stafford Cripps the other day, "and by good team work in reorganization, remarkable results have been obtained, yielding 20, 30 and even 50 per cent increase in output, with lowered cost and higher pay for the operatives."

In the Musgrave cotton mill at Bolton, in Lancashire, the layout of the machinery was rearranged and the jobs separated so effectively a few months ago that production per man hour was boosted 39 per cent, the cost of the finished product cut 10 per cent and the earnings of the workers increased 30 per cent.

All this is an old story in American industry. But in Britain, where management and labor have been instinctively suspicious of mechanization and efficiency experts, it is almost revolutionary. That both groups have announced their willingness to see the Musgrave type of experiment carried further is a real victory in the long, hard British battle for recovery.

Unwitting Heroes

LET no one doubt that it has been a battle. It has taken as much persistence as the dogged fight of the British navy and air force to track down submarines in the Atlantic in wartime. The British people do not know how great they have been in these postwar years.

A visitor from the Continent wonders why so many British people show so little pride in the effort their country has made. He suspects they have listened to too many speeches by Conservative politicians telling them that this is somehow a sordid, mean and ignoble chapter in their history. Actually, no other nation in Europe has done more to pull itself up by its own bootstraps.

The British people made the hard decision to share their shortages fairly and honestly, and they stuck to it. They kept their budget balanced with the help of savage but equitable taxes. They had the character to do without luxuries and many essential consumer goods in order to sell abroad and pay their way in the world.

And they did all this without ever losing their political decencies and without ever sacrificing their democratic processes.

The quality and the extent of the British achievement have been obscured, first, by the fact that the British have had enormous American help, in the 1946 loan and in the Marshall Plan; and, secondly, by the measures lumped together under the name of "socialism." Yet the Labor government's cradle-to-the-grave insurance program and the new national health service are nothing but extensions of programs which Conservative governments started long ago.

The nationalization of the coal industry is supported by the Conservatives no less than by Labor, although with less oratory and demagogy. The nationalizing of railways was carried out long ago by every other European country, and probably would stop causing controversy in England if it began to show real results.

As for the nationalizing of steel, the Labor government is committed to it but cannot possibly accomplish it until 1950. By that time there will be a general election, with so many urgent problems taking priority over this nonurgent one that the nationalizing of steel probably will be pigeonholed in the end.

Envious of Inferiors

INEVITABLY there is a good deal of grumbling in present-day Britain, and not primarily over the so-called Socialist measures. These postwar years have involved a hard and painful leveling process in which the middle class has had to do without the luxuries and amenities it once enjoyed.

A visitor is told again and again that other countries manage their affairs better, and it does no good for him to tell of the inequalities and lack of national discipline in so many countries on the Continent. Some British tourists, having spent their allowance of 35 pounds on a continental holiday, come back with glowing stories of the meals they have had in Brussels or Paris or Rome, and talk as if it is somehow a disgrace that Britain cannot furnish such delights to its own people.

A country that is sick of queues and ration books, and bored with a drab and monotonous diet, wants the machinery of controls relaxed as soon as possible. Businessmen complain about the government as bitterly as they ever did in the United States in the heyday of the New Deal.

Yet if a fair-minded Briton could look at the country's record from a distance, in comparison with the records of most others in Europe, he would hold his head a good deal higher than he does.

Some of the present discontents may disappear as the minor controls of the postwar years are relaxed. Already shoes have been taken off the ration altogether, many items of clothing have been partially unrationed, and unrationed fruits and vegetables are more plentiful than in any summer since the war, although the prices seem unreasonably high.

Old Grooves Are Deep

MORE serious than the gripes and grumbles is the persistence of old habits of thought which Cripps has determined to change.

There are many examples of such survivals in a country where old habits have always died hard. One was the uproar in the House of Commons over Cripps' proposal to set up Anglo-American production councils to advise British industry. Another was exemplified by the Lancashire textile manufacturer who saw no merit in woven nylon cloth, and firmly resolved to make none of the new-fangled stuff, although buyers were clamoring for it.

On the labor side, many unions still think in terms of the unemployment of the twenties and thirties, and cannot get used to an era of scarce labor and full employment. The ghost of the dole still walks in the restrictive practices that have accumulated over the years in the coal and textile industries especially.

The cost of many British exports is too high at a time when buyers all over the world are becoming more choosy. One cotton manufacturer put the problem this way:

"When the war ended, our customers in Switzerland wired us, 'Send us anything you have.' Next they said, 'Send us samples.' Not long ago they said, 'Send us samples—with prices.' And now they've canceled an order because they could make the same goods more cheaply at home."

British Official Photograph.

Britain is exporting everything from Wedgwood ware to heavy machinery like this 108-ton fractionating tower, destined for a Venezuelan oil refinery. Eighty-three feet long, it had to be detoured 38 miles to reach the docks four miles from the factory. It is shown making a difficult turn on a London road, narrowly missing a lamp post

THE drive now started by Sir Stafford Cripps is the next stage in the British recovery effort. It is a drive to cut production costs and to increase output everywhere by using the methods already adopted by the most intelligent and progressive industries.

Some informed observers in London are convinced that more drastic steps than these will have to be taken. Some of them (not Socialists, needless to say) believe the workweek will have to be lengthened, and social services and subsidies cut down, before the world can again have confidence in sterling as a medium of exchange.

But it is a great step to have persuaded labor and management to try overhauling British production methods now. It shows that the British are determined to stand on their own feet by the time the four-year Marshall Plan period comes to an end. The British still have a long way to go to win their present struggle for recovery and survival, but they have only begun to show what they can do.

Gomulka's Crime Was Being Too Polish a Pole . . .

By Samuel L. Sharp

(Mr. Sharp, Eastern European expert of the Foundation for Foreign Affairs, recently visited Poland in connection with his book, "The United States and Poland," to be published by the Harvard University Press.)

THE ouster of Wladyslaw Gomulka as secretary-general of the Polish Workers Party (Communist) has made sensational headlines in this country. It has started the usual flurry of speculation prompted by an impatient desire for quick returns on our "containment" policy. There have even been attempts to link the Gomulka episode with the death of the Cominform Leader Zhdanov.

In Poland, it was known for months that the once powerful secretary-general had been at odds with the other party leaders. It was noted that his name suddenly disappeared from the newspapers after May Day.

When speculation about his possible physical liquidation reached a high point, a short newspaper item announced on August 10 that Comrade Gomulka had interrupted a vacation at the resort of Solice to visit the Exhibition of the Recovered Territories. The visit was a very modest affair, considering that the guest was not only secretary-general of the party and first deputy premier but also titular boss of the former German lands, as Minister for the Recovered Territories.

Then came conflicting statements concerning Gomulka's health and assurances that he was about to resume office. But everyone in Poland knew better; the official announcement of the ouster came as no surprise. After the Tito affair, the Gomulka story was considered a natural sequence.

Official Background

ONE CAN get a clear explanation of the background of the Gomulka affair by studying the announcement made after the plenum of the Central Committee of the Workers Party met August 31 to consider "rightist and nationalist deviation in the party." No less than 38 speakers participated in the debate that followed the report of President Boleslaw Bierut, since "promoted" to replace Gomulka, and the resolution adopted runs into many thousands of words.

This Warsaw resolution contains a critical analysis of the history of the Polish Workers Party since November, 1943, when Gomulka ("Wieslaw") became secretary-general of the party, then operating in German-occupied Poland.

After the Nazis attacked the Soviet Union, the Communist parties of various countries became leaders in the fight for national liberation. Following the example of Stalin, who thought it safer in the hour of peril to appeal to patriotism rather than to Marxist consciousness, the Communists of occupied Europe put national slogans on their red banners. A new set of patron saints—Joan of Arc in France, Jan Huss in Bohemia, Kosciuszko in Poland—replaced the Marx-Engels-Lenin trinity. A specific "Polish," "Bulgarian" and, for that matter, "Chinese" way of socialism was born.

In Poland, the task of the Workers Party was particularly difficult. There was quite a reputation to live down. Communists were considered "foreign agents" in the interwar period. They were the heirs of the SDKPL, which in pre-independence days opposed the nationalism of the Polish Socialist Party under Jozef Pilsudski.

A Shrewd Propagandist

GOMULKA, an able, dynamic trade union organizer and strike leader, developed the patriotic line of the party and raised its reputation by spectacular sabotage and by clever propaganda against that part of the underground allied with the London government-in-exile. He tried to explain away the necessity of a cession of eastern Poland to Russia as the price of lasting friendship and security, and he built up the attractive vision of compensation at the expense of a defeated Germany.

This policy won many adherents for the new regime. But today this policy of broad, democratic appeal, confirmed in May, 1945, by the Central Committee of the party, is being criticized as a "withdrawal from the advocacy of the leadership of the working class in the struggle for state power."

The postwar history of Poland shows that Gomulka later was as active as any other Communist leader in narrowing the basis of the governing coalition. He led in the denunciation of Stanislaw Mikolajczyk and his Peasant Party; he originated the drive to force the Socialist Party to merge with the Communists.

The Warsaw resolution gives him credit for this laudable deviation from his deviationist line, but the conclusion is reached that on the whole his conduct amounted not merely to a difference in tactics but to a "system of rightist and nationalist views."

The resolution points out that, while advocating the merger with the Socialists, he opposed premerger purges and offered ideological concessions instead of just absorbing the left wing of the Socialists, as was done in other eastern European countries. This, in the words of the resolution, exposed the united party to the "danger of nationalist and opportunist deviation."

Crime Against Kremlin

THESE accusations do not exhaust the long catalog of Gomulka's sins. As a matter of fact, they may not be the most serious reasons for his demotion. It is equally doubtful whether Gomulka was actually in serious disagreement with the other members of the Polish Politburo about the "class struggle in the countryside," meaning a drive to squeeze out the 7 or 8 per cent of the peasantry which is the last vestige of rural capitalism.

Throughout the indictment runs this main theme: Gomulka's "misinterpretation of the ideological essence of the relations between the People's Democracies and the USSR, and of the leading role of the Soviet Communist Party in the international front of the anti-imperialist struggle." As in the case of Tito, this seems to be Gomulka's heaviest crime.

At what particular point has Gomulka as a "nationalist" questioned the special status of the Soviet Union and its Communist Party? The resolution is vague on this score.

Of specific instances of Soviet interference in Polish affairs, one could mention the Marshall Plan, but it is unlikely that Gomulka had any difficulty adopting the line of denouncing "American imperialist intervention." He was as vocal about it as any other Communist leader.

Another point of conflict between Polish nationalism and Soviet foreign policy is the German problem. There were persistent rumors in Warsaw for many months that Gomulka and other Polish Communist leaders viewed with uneasiness Russia's support of a united Germany. Poles still cannot help feeling emotional about their former oppressor. The whisper was that the USSR would give back the Polish "recovered territories" to a pro-Soviet Germany.

On a less primitive level, doubts were expressed whether it was advisable to push the consolidation of Germany before Poland and Czechoslovakia had made sufficient progress to match German industrial power. It was rumored that Gomulka was associated with such views. For that reason, he may have criticized the conference of satellite foreign ministers in Warsaw which, at Russian insistence, endorsed the call for a unified Germany.

A National Misdemeanor

SUCH apprehensions are very Polish indeed. By harboring them, Gomulka either proved himself "a good Pole after all" or, what is more likely, interpreted correctly the feelings of the rank and file of the party.

Unfortunately for Gomulka, the Soviet Union is engaged in a power game in which Germany is the stake. She may not have to do anything drastic, but she also may. For just such an eventuality, the satellites are served notice not to impede the moves of the USSR with their "narrow nationalist" objections.

At the July plenum of the Central Committee of the Polish Workers Party (where Gomulka was the only member absent), Foreign Minister Modzelewski acknowledged that the relations between the New Democracies and the Soviet Union were "something new" and that consequently a new interpretation of sovereignty was necessary. Gomulka may have believed in the more traditional interpretation of the word, a petty bourgeois concept indeed.

That, on the basis of the evidence available, is the story of the Polish would-be Tito, who lacked Tito's power to defy the Cominform and the Soviet Union. It is, therefore understandable that, after listening to the indictment, Comrade Gomulka "expressed full consent with the resolution and made a self-critical statement aiming at a revision of his former point of view, which had been utterly wrong."

Thurmond 2-to-1 Over Truman in S. Carolina

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

GOV. J. STROM THURMOND, presidential candidate of the Southern States Rights Party, holds a long lead in his home State of South Carolina at present, although the Truman forces in the State are working to change the situation in the seven weeks before election day.

The first complete survey report on South Carolina by the institute finds that if an election were held today, Governor Thurmond would poll nearly six out of every ten votes cast. In the same poll, the voters expressed a desire to change the election balloting system of South Carolina, only State which does not have a true secret ballot.

The poll question on candidates was:

"If the presidential election were being held today, how would you vote—for Truman, for Dewey, for Thurmond or for Wallace?"

The following table gives the vote, with the percentage of undecided voters included in the first column and eliminated in the second:

Thurmond	52%	59%
Truman	26	29
Dewey	10	11
Wallace	*	1
Undecided	12

*Less than 1 per cent

South Carolina is normally the staunchest Democratic State in the union, its eight electoral votes always being considered a sure thing for the party. But this year the Democrats face not only the possible loss of South Carolina but also the possible loss of electoral votes in Mississippi and Alabama, where the regular Democratic electors are reported pledged to cast their electoral votes for Thurmond.

In Florida, half of the electoral votes are reported pledged to the Thurmond ticket. This makes a total of at least 32 possible Thurmond electoral votes—a serious threat to the Democrats at a time when they will need every electoral vote they can scrape up.

South Carolina's election balloting system differs from other States in that the names of the opposing party candidates are not printed on the same ballot. Voters must ask for the ballot of the party they wish to support.

If they ask for the Democratic ballot, they are handed a ballot with only the Democratic candidates listed, not the Republican candidates. If they wish to vote Republican, the ballot they receive lists only the Republicans. Each party in the State prints its own ballots for use on election day.

The issue of whether this system should be changed was put up to South Carolina voters by the institute poll as follows:

"Do you think voters in South Carolina should or should not have the right to vote by secret ballot in general elections—that is, to mark their choice of any presidential candidate secretly and on the same ballot?"

Should	80%
Should not	8
No opinion	12

The unusual balloting system in South Carolina may be one reason for the one-sided vote usually found in the State. Many of its counties turn up with virtually unanimous votes for the Democrats.

Governor Thurmond and his wife acknowledge congratulations at Houston following his acceptance of the States Rights nomination for President

Cassino Rebuilds Painfully in the Wake of War

By Barrett McGurn

MONTE CASSINO ABBEY, Italy, Sept. 11. The fearfully slow work of recovering from modern war is epitomized by the reconstruction efforts at this famous old monastery and in the town at the foot of the hill.

So far $350,000, most of it from the Italian government, has been poured into the rebuilding of Monte Cassino Abbey. Eighty thousand dollars of it was needed just to clean up the rubble. That work was completed only last December.

A small, temporary abbey has been erected to house 35 monks and lay brothers. A few corrugated iron military sheds shelter the 250 workmen on the project. The first floor of the four-story monastery has been reconstructed. Over its main entrance a giant word has been carved: "Peace."

The monks have decided to put their monastery back together exactly as it was before the terrible winter of 1943-44, when Allies and Germans fought here the six-month battle that decided the fall of Rome. When they will finish is unknown.

They had hoped to rebuild the monastery church by 1950, when hundreds of thousands of Catholics will come to Rome from all parts of the world for "holy year." Now it looks unlikely that they can meet that deadline.

Ildefonso Rea, the tall, slim, urbane abbot, thinks the whole rebuilding project will take at least 10 years. Father Girolamo Panaccione, the abbot's assistant, often thinks it will take nearer 100.

At least another three million dollars will be necessary to complete the reconstruction. How that large sum will be raised, the monks have no idea. Their seminary for 30 aspirants to the priesthood, and their hill-top patch of vineyards, certainly will never produce the money.

Private charities have not been very encouraging. After an appeal in behalf of the monastery by Pope Pius XII, Italian banks ran a drive which netted merely $8000. There have been occasional reports of Americans raising money but, according to Father Panaccione, none has arrived.

Fortunately, the monastery is considered an Italian national monument. Founded 1419 years ago by St. Benedict, the monastery served as a model for similar institutions throughout Europe which safeguarded remnants of the Roman civilization after barbarism engulfed this continent. For nearly 1000 years the monastery and others it inspired fulfilled that function.

Italy's pro-Catholic government has been friendly to the work of rebuilding the monastery, but the government's resources are small. Last November, for instance, the government announced that it would give the monastery another $100,000. On the basis of the announcement, a contractor put the 250 men to work. Now the $100,000 is spent, but none of it has arrived.

The three-century-old frescoes which adorned the monastery are irrecoverable, of course, but all the statues, columns and buildings will be patched together again as well as possible. Out in front of the abbey's flattened church, for instance, Carlino Germano is carving replacements for statues' missing parts. The 8-foot-tall marble image of Charlemagne was typical, Germano says. A new forefinger caused Germano a full day's work. A nose took three days.

Pieces 'Walked Away'

SOUVENIR-HUNTING soldiers who probably did not imagine that the monks ever would attempt to piece the rubble together again, not only walked off with many loose pieces of marble but even knocked off fist-size chunks, Father Panaccione comments without bitterness. The monks have put up a sign in Italian warning that visitors will be prosecuted for pocketing even the smallest keepsake.

At the foot of the 1500-foot-tall, haystack-shaped hill on which the abbey stands, the town of Cassino is reviving in similarly gradual style. Nocola Ferri, Cassino's town engineer, figures it will take another 10 years' rebuilding and about $8,500,000.

If the money is raised, it will not be by Cassino's poor peasants. There are 12,000 in the town now compared with 20,000 before the battle. Most of the missing people are in refugee camps awaiting the day when Cassino revives sufficently to let them return.

Cassino is being rebuilt several hundred feet from its old site. Before the war Cassino was clustered like a hornets' nest on the side of the hill. The position had been ideal in the Middle Ages, when robber bands prowled Italy and when malaria scourged the lowlands.

The town's position long since had lost its reason, but habit and inertia had kept Cassino's people where they were, with houses perched sunlessly and unhygienically atop one another.

When the Allies tried to break the German resistance on March 15, 1944, by "expending" 1400 tons of bombs and 85,000 rounds of artillery fire on Cassiono and the abbey, some of Cassino's progressive minds saw their opportunity to transfer the community to a more rational location. Accordingly, the new town is on flat land with ample sunlight, parks and plazas. It covers four times the old area.

Mines Still a Hazard

FILLING in the details of the plan has been more difficult. Although millions of dollars in foreign aid, much of it from the United States, has flowed into the peasant village, only 40 per cent of the houses have been reconstructed. It cost $800,000 merely to clean up the mines which the Germans strewed in the Allied path. Even at that, about 10 people a year are injured in Cassino Valley by mines which were not found.

One million dollars was used to put the local rivers back within their banks. Retaining walls were smashed in the fighting and for a while the traditional malaria threatened to return.

A hospital of two hundred beds was started, but the Italian government ran out of funds after the roof was on. At least $115,000 must be found merely to open the building on an emergency basis as a 50-bed institution. One million dollars would be necessary to open it fully equipped.

The courthouse, which was probably Cassino's main nonagricultural source of income, is still out of commission. Wrongdoers of 30 near-by towns used to receive justice in the Cassino Courthouse. Ever since the 1943-44 winter, the town of Sora, 30 miles away, has been "enriching itself" with this judicial activity, Guido Varlese, one of Cassino's 40 lawyers, complains fretfully.

Like the hospital, the new courthouse is roofed, but there is no furniture and no proper housing for the judges. Cassino's planners think they can reopen the court this fall. Not only lawyers, but also clerks and even the managers of Cassino coffee bars will profit, Varlese points out.

Wonder at Slowness

CASSINO'S people feel no bitterness against the Allies, but sometimes they do say that the Western powers were so strong they should have been able to push past Cassino in less than half a year, as Acting Mayor Gaetano Napoletano observes.

Only 8 per cent of Cassino's people voted for the Communists in Italy's fateful April elections this year. Two thirds supported the pro-Catholic Christian Democratic Party.

The monks of Monte Cassino contribute to this sense of resignation and of work. As Father Panaccione points out, it is nothing new to have to rebuild the monastery. It was necessary after the barbarous Lombards came through in the year 581. It was necessary again after the Saracens in 840 and an earthquake in 1343.

Viewed in that perspective, the present task is little more than could have been expected.

German Revival Eases U. S. Worries

By Sigrid Arne
Associated Press Staff Writer

WESTERN Germany is coming along so well that State Department experts say now they don't think any compromise will be made on German administration in order to get the Russian zone into a once-again united Germany.

Germans in the American-British zone are paying more of their own bills than they did a year ago. They are actually making a profit on the manufactured goods they sell abroad, although they're still in the red on food.

German "ministers-president" of the 11 states in western Germany have done well enough that the Western Allies plan to turn over more of the governing job to the Germans shortly (but with continued Allied control).

The long-time official American hope is to get all of Germany—the Russian zone as well—into a unified government. But now there is little sentiment at the State Department to toss its growing successes in Germany overboard, just for the sake of getting the Russian zone in.

Allies Keeping Tab

THE real test of German rebuilding is the money the Germans make selling to other nations compared with the money they spend and the bills they run up in other nations.

The best stories of what is happening come out of the American-British zone, where the United States and Britain decided in early 1947 to pool their efforts. They formed a Joint Export-Import Agency to supervise what the Germans bought abroad, what they sold, where they hunted new markets, the prices they charged.

The first half of this year the United States zones sold 229 million dollars worth of goods to 77 nations and territories. In that time they spent 163 million dollars for the machines and raw materials they needed to turn out the goods.

On that operation, German experts here feel it fair to say the Germans are already selling at a profit, three years after the war.

But they have to import much food. That comes high: 450 million dollars for the first half of this year. So naturally the two zones spent 622 million dollars and earned 229 million dollars on their foreign accounts.

That means they earned roughly 40 per cent of what it takes them to live and keep their factories going. But that is double a year ago.

Underwriting Job

SOME interesting contracts have been written for German goods.

An American concern is buying $1,500,000 worth of German dyes. The Americans will furnish $475,000 for machines and raw materials to get the job going. The Germans will pay that bill when the dyes are delivered.

The Americans get the dyes. The Germans make about a million profit. And they have the machines to turn out more dyes.

India will exchange goods with Germany—but she would also like German technicians for some jobs in India. She would like to send Indian nationals to Germany for industrial training.

Through every sale of German goods or labor, the drive is to get for the JEIA account the foreign money which the Germans need to buy abroad.

For example:

JEIA collects the royalties paid a German singer who makes records for a Swiss concern. JEIA pays her in German marks.

A German specialist from Weisbaden is fitting glass eyes in a Swiss hospital. His pay of $50 a day goes to JEIA, which deposits marks to his home account.

A canary breeder gets a JEIA okay to import seeds for his birds. When the birds are old enough they'll be flown to a New York dealer. He will pay JEIA in dollars, and the German will get marks.

JEIA insists that Germans charge near the going world price for their goods. Germans who apply for export licenses must present at least three world price quotations to get JEIA's okay.

New Target Date

THE big question is: "Can Germany become self supporting, and when?" At first it was hoped 1949 would turn the trick. Now experts figure on 1951.

Recently France agreed to cooperate with the United States and Britain in aiding German's reviving trade.

There is a parallel growth on the political front.

At London in June, the United States, British and French governments agreed that it is time the Germans begin to run their own government under supervision. They agreed to call a meeting of the German ministers-president in the near future, and give them the power to call a constituent assembly. Delegates to the assembly will be elected from the 11 western states.

The assembly will be asked to write a constitution for Germany that will:

1. "Allow all German states to subscribe as soon as circumstances permit." (That leaves the gate open for the Russian zone.)

2. Set up a federal form of government which will protect the rights of individual states and the freedoms of the individual.

If the draft constitution gets the okay of the Allied military governors, it will go to the German people for a vote.

Depression Singles Out Belgian Port

By Godfrey Anderson
Associated Press Staff Writer

ANTWERP, Sept. 11.—Belgium's great port of Antwerp is having a postwar depression due in part to the prosperity of the rest of the country that has cut down the need for imports.

Before the war, Antwerp, with its 500,000 inhabitants, ranked as the third port of the world in total tonnage handled—about 18 million tons a year. Then came the lean years of occupation and the sudden boom in military traffic which the liberation brought.

The labor market—12,000 dockers in 1939—was quickly boosted to 16,000. Enormous military cargoes handled for the Allies in 1944 and 1945, the extensive war damage done to Antwerp's principal competitors—Rotterdam and Dunkirk—and their belated liberation, all caused a traffic movement far beyond the normal levels. Antwerp found herself in a unique and powerful position.

Then, toward the end of last year, the volume of cargoes sharply declined in weight and value. Belgian coal and wheat production was in full swing again, reducing the necessity for American imports. The most urgent needs from overseas, steel, food, textiles, leather, had been fulfilled in large measure. The Belgian industrial pump had been primed and was working with prewar efficiency again.

Now 8000 of those 16,000 dockers are out of work, while United States flag shipping has dropped from first place in 1944 to fourth.

Belgium's traditional foreign customers, short of hard currency to finance new purchases, are keeping Belgian exports down. The ships go out half empty just as they come in. Only the Belgian lines to the Congo, a virtual monopoly, are as busy as they used to be.

Argentine Stores That Sell Dollars Offer No Bargains

By Laurance F. Stuntz
Associated Press Staff Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 11.—The law of supply and demand is still working in Argentina, and right now it's making United States dollar bills an expensive commodity.

The economic law has the same effect on money as, for instance, on strawberries. When there aren't many strawberries, the cost is higher. And since dollar bills are scarce in Argentina, you have to pay more to get them.

Exchange houses here usually do a big business in dollar currency. These are ordinary stores, but instead of selling shirts, for example, they sell foreign money. Their window displays may be a couple of packs of $20 bills, a sheaf of 1000-lira notes from Italy, and a pile of Mexican gold coins.

These exchange houses also buy foreign currency. They have boards in their windows, giving the price they will pay and the price they ask. Usually their profit is about 1 per cent.

A Handy Currency

FOR years the exchange houses had been buying dollar bills for about 4.30 pesos per dollar. Foreigners selling dollar checks to the banks would get about 4 pesos per dollar.

The dollar bills sold for a little more because they were easier to change.

An Italian immigrant, for instance, could buy a $20 bill and mail it to his family in Italy. The chances were he didn't know how to buy a $20 draft to send the money home.

But things began to change several months ago. Argentina ran out of dollars. To save what she had left, she put restrictions on the movement of money.

For instance, an Argentine who wanted to buy a car in the States had to obtain Central Bank permission to buy the dollars from the private banks. An Argentine going to the United States on a trip had to get Central Bank permission before he could buy dollar travelers' checks. A family with a boy in a United States university had to obtain special permits to send him money. And these amounts which could be sent were limited.

To get around these restrictions, Argentines themselves began to buy dollar currency. This resulted in a greater demand and the price began to creep up. It cost 4.50 pesos to buy a dollar; then 5 pesos—6—7—and finally 7.65.

Price Forced Down

THIS quotation of more than 7 pesos to the dollar was largely artificial. The peso still bought as much beefsteak or milk or butter as it had when it was quoted at 4 to the dollar. However, if anybody wanted to buy a United States bicycle, for instance, it would cost more. The importer had to pay for it in dollars and the dollars cost more.

With the value of the dollar climbing sharply, crowds began to collect outside the exchange houses to watch the boards. A few newspapers printed stories. The government was worried about the impression the people were getting.

Finally, it raised the price of dollar checks from around 4 pesos to 4.81 pesos. This resulted in an increase in the number of dollars sold in the form of checks. At the same time, the government forbade the exchange houses to sell currency at more than 10 per cent above the check price.

This step snatched the price of dollar currency down from 7.65 to 5.30 pesos.

But the old law of supply and demand was still working. Dollars were still in short supply. The price of checks began to work up gradually and the price of currency went up with it. Still, the prices of both were somewhat limited by the government orders.

The result was that fewer dollar bills were sold. People who had them held on to them. Now, when a tourist boat from the United States gets in, the tourists sell their dollars and the price sags a few centavos. But the demand is still there. When these dollars have been sold the prices go right up again as far as the government will let them.

Strong Words Likely at Paris

Assembly Faces Atom Showdown

By Francis W. Carpenter
Associated Press Staff Writer

LAKE SUCCESS, Sept. 11.—The atom and world arms reduction stood out today as the biggest worries for the 1948 United Nations Assembly.

The Western powers, chiefly the United States, are set for a knock-down fight with Russia over who is to blame because the atomic bomb has not been wiped out and world arms cut.

The Assembly will meet September 21 in the Palais de Chaillot, built for the 1937 Exposition in Paris. Strong words are expected to resound amidst the beautiful surroundings soon after the formalities are over.

There are other issues for the U. N., such as Palestine, the Balkans, the Little Assembly and Korea. But after two years of trying to do something about atomic energy and the armaments in the world's war chests, many delegates feel it is time to take stock on those problems.

The Americans are said to feel deeply that the Assembly must take a stand on those two questions. They have sounded out a number of other delegations on the situation and are ready to let go both barrels.

Bandied the Blame

THE Western powers began laying the groundwork for the Assembly fight last spring after they saw they were getting nowhere in the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission.

Over Russia's protests they put through a report saying it was useless to try to agree on atomic controls until Russia decided to cooperate with the rest of the world.

Russia and the Soviet Ukraine protested that the United States really was to blame; that the United States was trying to wreck all attempts to tame the atom.

Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, vetoed on June 22 a majority decision of the Security Council approving the American plan for world atomic control. That plan was put before the Atomic Commission on June 14, 1946, by Bernard M. Baruch. It proposed a world atomic authority, waiver of any veto on atomic punishments and thorough inspection.

The Baruch proposal was adopted by the commission in December, 1946, with Russia and Poland disapproving.

This amiable picture of then Secretary of State Byrnes and Foreign Minister Molotov was taken two years ago, shortly before Molotov surprised the first UN Assembly with a proposal for arms reduction

The second report of the Atomic Commission was written in September, 1947, and outlined the general lines for an atomic authority. Again Russia did not like it.

The third report, made last April, said there was no point in going further until Russia's attitude changed.

Vague About Inspection

RUSSIA presented her plan June 19, 1946, calling for prohibition now of the atomic bomb, with controls to be worked out later. Almost a year later Russia suggested formation of an international control commission responsible to the Security Council.

Russia also said she favored inspection, but no opposing delegate received what he regarded as a clear answer as to how far inspection would go.

Russia refused to waive the veto.

On the arms problem, the delegates have not got even as far as making a tentative plan.

Soviet Foreign Minister Vyacheslav M. Molotov surprised the first U. N. Assembly in the United States in 1946 with a call for a reduction and limitation of world armaments and destruction of the atomic bomb. The Assembly finally approved unanimously on December 14 a resolution favoring reduction and limitation of arms and armed forces.

The Security Council in February, 1947, set up the U. N. Commission for Conventional Armaments. The Russians tried to include atomic energy in the commission's work, but the majority resisted, saying they already had one commission working on the atom.

The Wrong Atmosphere

FINALLY the commission decided 9 to 2 that now is not the time for cutting arms. Russia and the Ukraine opposed the majority.

"A system of regulation and reduction of armaments and armed forces can only be put into effect in an atmosphere of international confidence and security," the majority decided.

With this background of continued deadlock, Russia and the Western powers await the Assembly. At this point there is no sign of any agreement on either issue.

Tuesday Primaries Eyed for Tipoff on Senate

By Alexander R. George
Associated Press Staff Writer

DEMOCRATIC AND REPUBLICAN politicians will focus unusual attention on senatorial primary elections in Minnesota and Colorado Tuesday.

The biggest election battle this fall, next to the presidential contest, is for control of the Senate.

Democrats contend they have a good fighting chance of recapturing the Senate majority they lost in 1946. GOP leaders contend, however, that "this is a Republican year" and that they will enlarge their majority in the Senate and House as well as capture the Presidency.

Democrats will watch Minnesota returns for signs of Democratic strength in the November balloting for the Senate seat now held by Republican Joseph H. Ball. Minnesota is one of six or seven States in which the Democrats express hope they will pick up enough seats to win a majority in the United States Senate.

Republicans will watch the Colorado primaries for indications of GOP chances to win the seat now held by Democrat Edwin C. Johnson. Colorado is one of four States outside the Solid South in which Senate seats held by Democrats are at stake in the November election.

Foe Has CIO Backing

SENATOR BALL'S opposition in the Minnesota Republican primary is divided. One opponent is a woman, Leonore Irene Bussman of St. Paul. The other is Earl Miller of Aitkin.

Rival candidates for the Democratic senatorial nomination are Mayor Hubert Humphrey of Minneapolis and James Shields, former regional director of the National Labor Relations Board. Humphrey has the backing of CIO President Phil Murray.

In the Colorado Democratic primary, Senator Johnson is running against Eugene Cervi, former party State chairman. Candidates in the Republican primary are former Gov. John C. Vivian and Will F. Nicholson of Denver.

From a mathematical standpoint, Democratic prospects appear better than they will be for some years. The Republicans now have a 51-to-45 edge in the Senate. A net gain of four seats by the Democrats would give them a majority, 49 to 47.

Eighteen Republican seats are involved in election contests this year, compared with the four seats now held by Democrats outside the Solid South.

Eleven seats occupied by Democrats outside the Solid South will be on the election block in 1950. In 1952 there will be contests for six non-Southern Democratic seats.

The Democrats say their prospects are bright in Oklahoma, West Virginia, Kentucky and Wyoming. They also say they have hopes of gaining a seat or two in Illinois or Idaho as well as in Minnesota.

Republican big guns will resist the Democratic drive for Senate control. Governors Dewey and Warren will give campaign speaking aid to Republican senatorial candidates involved in tough contests.

Oklahoman Bowing Out

THIS IS what is happening in States (other than Minnesota) where Democratic hopes lie:

OKLAHOMA—In this usually Democratic State, Republican Senator E. H. Moore is retiring. Battling for his seat are former Gov. Robert S. Kerr and Republican Representative Ross Rizley.

New Republican power was demonstrated in last week's primaries, when Utah Republicans cast 68,000 votes for their two candidates for Governor, against 55,000 polled by the two Democratic candidates. It was the first time since Utah instituted the direct primary in 1938 that the Republican vote was larger.

Democratic Gov. Herbert B. Maw won renomination. His Republican opponent will be J. Bracken Lee of Price, Utah.

Acting Gov. Dan E. Garvey and Bruce Bockett were the Democratic and Republican nominees, respectively, in the Arizona primary. Herman Talmadge won the gubernatorial nomination in Georgia.

WEST VIRGINIA—Republican Senator Chapman Revercomb is running for reelection. His Democratic opponent is former Senator Matthew M. Neely. West Virginia normally leans Democratic.

KENTUCKY—Republican Senator John S. Cooper is opposed by Virgin Chapman in this usually Democratic border State. Chapman will have the campaign aid of Kentucky's Senator Barkley, Democratic vice presidential nominee.

WYOMING—The Democratic opponent of Republican Senator Edward V. Robertson is Gov. Lester Hunt, usually a strong vote-getter even in Republican landslides. Robertson has been prominent in the State's cattle and sheep-raising industries.

ILLINOIS—Democrats claim Paul Douglas, former University of Chicago professor and World War II veteran, is making a strong race. The GOP voices confidence that Senator C. Wayland Brooks will win reelection in a State which was heavily Republican in the 1946 congressional elections.

IDAHO—The Democratic candidate for Senator is State Supreme Court Justice Bert H. Miller. Republican Senator Henry C. Dworshak, running for reelection, defeated Miller in the race for a United States House seat in 1938.

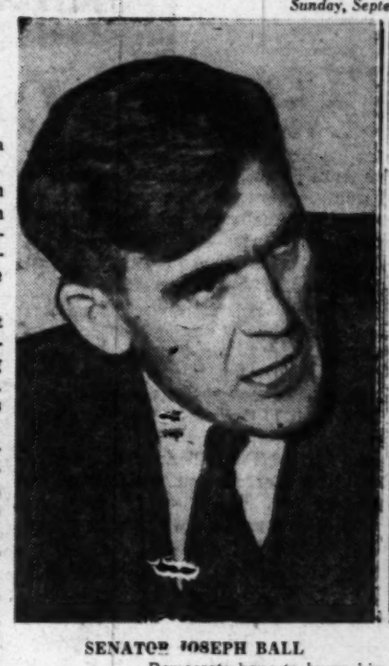
Duel in New Mexico

THE FOUR non-Southern States in which Democratic Senate seats are sought by Republicans are Rhode Island, New Mexico, Montana and Colorado. Besides Senator Johnson of Colorado, Democratic incumbents seeking reelection are Theodore Green of Rhode Island and James Murray of Montana.

Senator Hatch of New Mexico is retiring. Clinton P. Anderson, former Secretary of Agriculture, is the Democratic nominee for his seat. His Republican opponent is Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War in the Hoover Administration.

Republicans declare they have a good chance to win at least one or two of the four Democratic seats. They say that GOP Candidate Tom J. Davis is giving Montana's Senator Murray very formidable opposition.

Senator Green of Rhode Island is unopposed for the Democratic renomination. His November opponent will be chosen at the Republican primary September 20.



SENATOR JOSEPH BALL

Campaign Buttons Are Puny Compared With Hoopla Days

By Charles Anthony Grefe

QUITE a few changes have occurred in the manner of presidential election campaigns since the early days of the Republic. There was much more shouting (and shooting) then.

In the early days the candidates didn't take the stump or go out of their way to make personal appearances. It was not until 1880, when James A. Garfield enjoyed the unique distinction of being at one time Congressman-elect, Senator-elect and electee to the highest office in the land that the precedent was broken.

Garfield made some 70 speeches during the campaign, chiefly extemporaneously. Prior to that, presidential candidates let the committeemen, precinct leaders and ward lieutenants do all the rabble-rousing.

Supporters displayed their faith in their candidate by pinning silk pennants half the size of a handkerchief to their lapels. These forerunners of present-day campaign buttons were embellished with the names and crude pictures of the idols.

But, regardless of how campaigns were conducted, somebody was elected. The 32 men who have occupied the pilot's seat of the Nation present an interesting tapestry of curious facts.

Small Town Lads

ONLY two, once great friends and later bitter enemies, were born in big cities: William Howard Taft of Cincinnati, and Theodore Roosevelt, New York City.

None of our Chief Executives was an only child. The closest to that distinction were Calvin Coolidge, whose sister died when she was 14, and Franklin D. Roosevelt, who had a half-brother.

Warren G. Harding was the last of the Presidents to come from a large family. He was the eldest of eight. James Madison was one of 12 children.

John Tyler, a grossly misunderstood and underestimated President, was the father of the largest family. With a first and second wife, he fathered 16 children, only one of whom died in infancy. He, himself, died without official notice by Congress, because at the time of his death on January 17, 1862, he was a Representative-elect of the Confederate States of America.

Few of the Presidents kept diaries. George Washington kept one which has been of incalculable value to historians. Had it not been for his nephew, Bushrod Washington, associate justice of the Supreme Court, much more of our early history would have been verified in Washington's handwriting. Bushrod, who inherited Mount Vernon, liked to please visitors by tearing out whole pages of his uncle's diary and giving them away as souvenirs.

BY FAR, the most comprehensive diary was kept by John Quincy Adams. Rising often at 4 o'clock in the morning, he wrote for several hours a day. His journal comprises 12 printed volumes of about 500 pages each, nearly 6 times as many words as the Bible contains.

John Quincy Adams, by the way, was the only former President to serve in Congress. He was a House member for 17 years and collapsed in that chamber (now Statuary Hall) just prior to his death.

The number of military men who have occupied the White House is fairly large. Eleven of them were generals: Washington, Jackson, William H. Harrison, Taylor, Pierce, Johnson, Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur and Benjamin Harrison.

Monroe was a lieutenant colonel in the Revolutionary War. John Tyler and Buchanan served in the War of 1812. Lincoln fought Indians in the Blackhawk War. Cleveland, although drafted, hired a substitute, whereas McKinley enlisted as a private in the Civil War.

Theodore Roosevelt had his Rough Riders, and no President since him had seen service until Harry S. Truman entered the White House. Truman served with the AEF in France, and was discharged with the rank of major.

Adams Had 'Ghost'

THE first President to address Congress in Washington, D. C., was John Adams. It was his curtain speech and he had a famous ghost writer. John Marshall, Chief Justice and interpreter of the Constitution, wrote it.

Martin Van Buren, who was nicknamed the "Little Magician," was the first President not born a British subject; in other words, the first one born after we became an independent Nation. The first White House occupant from west of the Mississippi was Herbert C. Hoover, an Iowan by birth.

Of the 32 Presidents, 22 served in Congress. The first President under our Constitution, George Washington, and 12 others, including Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman, were Masons.

Up to the middle of the last century the office of Secretary of State was a great springboard to the presidency. James Buchanan, the great appeaser who preceded Lincoln, was the last former Secretary of State to jump into the White House.

He was one of the minority Presidents, receiving 1,224,750 popular votes against John C. Fremont's 1,340,618. But Buchanan had 174 electoral votes and his opponent only 114.

It was in this campaign that sex was first injected into the melee. Fremont's headquarters distributed thousands of cards picturing Fremont's beautiful wife, daughter of Senator Thomas Benton.

Torches Burned Out

BIG election parades and fireworks have left the American scene. The last parades of any size, with bands and torches, were in 1928, when Herbert Hoover was swept into office on the anti-Smith vote.

Today the political wizardry is chiefly exerted through the radio. Franklin D. Roosevelt was the first to sway the voters with his magnetic radio personality.

Unlike William Howard Taft, Roosevelt was a master of tone value and modulation. Taft was so tone deaf that his secretary had to nudge him whenever the National Anthem was played.

Science Centenary Bringing 5000 Here

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

WASHINGTON will be host—or guest—this week to the centennial celebration of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Actually, it will be the 115th meeting of the organization, but who wants to quibble over statistics when more than 5000 scientists are converging on the city?

The week-long convention does mark 100 years of scentific advance since the first meeting of the "Triple-A-S," as such, in Philadelphia on September 20, 1848. Then, on a resolution of the Association of American Geologists and Naturalists, the AAAS was born.

From that nucleus of 461 members grew the organization that today has more than 200 affiliated and associated societies with an overall membership topping 500,000. Nine thousand new members were added this year in a special centennial drive.

A True Brotherhood

"ONE World of Science" will be the keynote of the Centenary, for science is the same the world over and is generally held forth as the best hope of mankind's becoming one world in purpose. Races, creeds and nationalities are one and the same to true science.

The Statler will be registration headquarters and core of the week's activities. They will spill out, however, into virtually all the large hotels and many of the smaller ones. And the city's many scientific centers are being opened wide to the visitors.

Morning sessions will be symposiums of scientific papers; afternoons will generally be set aside for scientific, cultural and historical tours of the area, and evenings will be shared with the interested public in free lecture programs whose speakers are far beyond the budget reach of any Chautauqua.

They include such authorities in their lines—to use unscientific terms—as Dr. Harlow Shapley, star gazer; Dr. Brock Chisholm, world knitter; Dr. Harold C. Urey, atom animater, and Dr. James Hillier, Peeping Tom among molecules.

Eminent scientists not mentioned must not feel slighted. The credit list that will make the centenary tick would require a booklet.

Here's what the public is being offered for free:

More than 325 prints in black and white and color will be displayed in the foyer of the National Museum until September 21. Last year's winning print was a microscopic, longitudinal section shot of a plant louse feeding upon a leaf.

Chain Store Foes Merely Biding Time

By Loyd Brady
Associated Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—What does the public think of chain stores today?

One of the Nation's biggest retail chains, with the memory of depression-born anti-chain proposals in mind, decided to find out. The findings:

1. Anti-chain store sentiment is still alive, though dormant because of high business activity generally.

2. The sentiment is directed largely against smaller chains, those with an annual volume of 250 million dollars or less.

3. Too few chains regard themselves as good neighbors in the communities where they have outlets.

The survey was made by a Chicago public relations firm, Imberman and DeForest, for a firm which declined use of its name. It covered 87 communities in the 5000-50,000 population bracket in the Midwest. Some 4023 persons were interviewed with techniques developed at Harvard and the University of Chicago.

Said A. A. Imberman, one of the partners: "The first dip in the business cycle will bring forth a host of new proposals by local merchants against the competition of chain and department store branches.

"The old arguments against the retail chains, such as monopoly, absentee ownership, drainage of currency to Wall Street or LaSalle Street . . . are still alive beneath the surface."

Arsenal Makes New Tanks of Battle' Junk'

By Edward L. Prizer
Associated Press Staff Writer

DETROIT, Sept. 11.—War-battered tanks by the hundred from battlefields all over the world are getting a complete face-lifting in a new program to build up the armored forces.

Rusted and shell-shattered, the tanks limp into the Army's vast Detroit Arsenal. Days later they roar out, rebuilt down to the last bolt, gleaming with fresh paint, bristling with added power.

A production rate of about 50 a month will be reached shortly, officers say. By next summer the rate will be increased to somewhere near 15 per cent of the plant's wartime potential.

Scheduled for production next year is a brand new medium tank, the General Patton. It's still on the secret list, but indications are it will be speedier and tougher than anything the Army ever has put in the field before.

Literally Taken Apart

THE rumble of presses and screech of lathes at the Arsenal is the Army's answer to those who claim tanks are obsolete in this age of long-range aircraft and atomic bombs.

Wartime tank production of 900 a month was reached at the huge, glass-walled plant, almost a quarter of a mile long. The first impression of the plant is one of dress parade order and cleanliness. There is little grime or grease. Floors are well swept. Stock rooms are as neat as barracks on inspection day.

From a field filled with row on row of crippled tanks, the vehicles move to a stripping line inside the arsenal. As they roll along the line, they dissolve into thousands of parts.

Inspectors discard useless parts. The others go through cleaning baths and then are distributed to various departments for repairs. Engines are overhauled until they're as good as new.

At the other end of the plant, revamped tank hulls start down an assembly line to be built up piece by piece. Sprockets, tracks, engines, hundreds of smaller parts are added. The tanks drive off the line to a paint chamber where they are sprayed with olive drab.

Finally, guns and turrets, radios and other accessories are bolted on. The finished tank, ready for action, rolls out for shipment to any part of the world.

A Civilian Operation

MEANWHILE, mechanics in other parts of the plant are hard at work machining and assembling experimental armored vehicles of the future—the result of long research.

Experimental models go to Fort Knox, Ky., for exhaustive field tests. Some are returned many times for changes by the tactical experts, who work closely with arsenal engineers.

The arsenal is run according to up-to-date industrial management methods, chiefly by civilians. The payroll of more than 2500 is steadily increasing. Col. David Crawford, arsenal commanding officer, estimates it would take four to six months to get the arsenal back on a wartime production basis.

The spacious designing rooms and stock control office, where several hundred engineers and industrial experts are at work, are marvels of efficiency. Every phase of production is minutely traced and recorded throughout.

Wide World Photo

Answer to Dispersion

AND what is the reason for all this?

Crawford, a tall, soldierly West Point man from Durant, Miss., says:

"What planes are to the Air Force and ships to the Navy, combat vehicles are to the field forces. Tanks are the weapon of opportunity of the Army.

"In the event of a future war, our potential enemy will make use of dispersion on a vast scale, both in his own country and in others. It would be impossible to bomb him out without killing off millions of civilians.

"Much territory will have to be occupied by ground forces piece by piece, and held. Tanks are the best way to do this with a minimum of manpower.

"Tanks will also have the job of screening advance airfields. Without their protection, planes could hardly operate at effective ranges."

Looking Backward Down Trail That Leads to Electric Chair...

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

ON THE morning of November 19, newspaper reporters will gather at the District Jail.

Unless there is a last-minute miracle (and one seems unlikely), they will be official witnesses to the execution of Jesse James Patton and Reginald Joseph Wheeler.

The reporters will be herded into a small room. On one side of the room will be a glass partition.

They will look through the glass partition and see silent men fumbling with a grim apparatus. This will be the electric chair.

Minutes will lengthen and pulses will beat faster as a young Negro is escorted to the chair. He cannot see through the glass partition because of the arrangement of the lights in the death chamber.

A hood will be placed over the young man's head. His arms will be strapped tight and the electrodes set in place.

The reporters will hear nothing. Everything will be in pantomime. They will only see. When the switch is closed they will see the figure in the chair lunge forward against the straps. They will see his hands clench in a last mighty spasm.

Within 10 minutes another young man will be led into the chamber and the strange, silent scene of death will be repeated.

This will be the way Jesse James Patton and Reginald Joseph Wheeler will meet death.

Payment in Full

CAN you shrug your shoulders and say it was predestined that these two men should some day sit in the lethal chair of the District of Columbia Jail and be burned and jolted into the limpness of death?

Or was there a shaping of the clay in the 23 years of Patton's life, the 28 years of Wheeler's, that drew them inevitably into the shadow of the electric chair?

What do they think?

"Was your early life responsible for your present troubles?"

Each was asked this question recently. Each answered with a flat "No."

Obviously they are to be put to death because society demands payment for the holdup murder in June, 1946, of a Washington pharmacist, Maurice L. Bernstein.

But are there other answers . . . environment, finances, social history, companions?

Patton and Wheeler answered a few written questions sent to their cells by The Washington Post.

Wheeler Is Bitter

THESE are the questions and these are the answers:

Q—What do you blame for your predicament?

Patton: "I can't say anything definitely."

Wheeler: "I don't know, but by the witnesses that were against me, lying like they did (and that was proven in court) is the blame for my being here where I am today."

Q—What do you think should be done to help other boys like yourself avoid the things that brought you here?

Patton: "People take an interest in them to help them."

Wheeler: "By other people's help, by people telling the truth about the case."

Q—Did you ever think about what might happen if you got caught in a crime?

Patton: "Yes, but I did not think anything like this would happen because I never did anything that bad."

Wheeler: "Yes, for I was sent to Lorton, Va., for two charges in 1937."

Q—Did you know the punishment for serious crimes?

Patton: "No, all crimes are serious."

Wheeler: "Yes, I did, because I learned a lot when I went to Lorton, Va., and also from my mother and my church."

Both Football Fans

Q—What recreation or amusement did you enjoy most as a boy?

Patton: "Baseball, football, most anything other boys played."

Wheeler: "I like football the most, and the theater."

Q—Is there anything you would like to have done in your name?

Patton: "Yes, help my kid out there. That's everything I want somebody to do."

Wheeler: "I would like to have my name cleared of this charge because I am not guilty of this charge."

Q—When and where did you meet one another?

Patton: "I met Wheeler at Lorton about four or five years ago."

Wheeler: "I met Patton about four or five years ago in the 1300 Block of Corcoran st. nw."

Q—Do you think if you had kept closer to your church you would have stayed out of trouble?

Patton: "I don't see where that had anything to do with anybody getting in trouble. I went to church."

Wheeler: "That has nothing to do with my trouble. I went to church quite often."

$3000 in Two Months

IT CAN be seen that Patton and Wheeler do not agree as to where they met. That is hardly important. It is important that on April 5, 1946, they became partners in banditry.

During the following two months, before their careers were cut short by capture, they averaged a holdup a week and accumulated cash loot of more than $3000.

Their first successful venture as partners was in the holdup of a women's apparel shop on April 5, 1946. The take was small, only $34.

Then followed a quick series of holdups.

On April 10 they stuck up a dress shop and got $34.

On April 23 it was a liquor store and $275.

Another liquor store on April 27; this time good for $780.

An undisclosed sum of money in a drug store on May 6.

Then an individual on May 14, and $347 more in their pockets.

A liquor store on May 30; only $30.

A big haul—$1340—in a liquor store on June 1.

So Patton and Wheeler probably considered themselves successful men of crime when, on June 5, they walked into the Bernstein drug store at 1786 Florida ave. nw., for another holdup.

A Blunder of Fate

EVERYTHING went smoothly at first. Three clerks and a 14-year-old boy customer meekly raised their arms. The bandits emptied two cash registers.

Then the flaw, the beckoning fate.

Bernstein, the druggist, was in the basement during the early stages of the holdup. Suddenly and innocently he intruded upon the scene, entering through a door behind the counter.

Wheeler's trigger finger tightened in a spasm of panic and a .38-caliber slug ripped through Bernstein's heart.

Wheeler told police later he didn't remember when his revolver was discharged.

"I saw him fall to the floor and cough," he said. "That was the first I knew I had shot him."

Bernstein was 52 years old, the father of three children, and lived at 3520 34th st. nw.

Patton and Wheeler fled from the scene in a cab and later separated. They did not learn that Bernstein had been killed until they read about it in the newspapers.

Police tracked down Patton in five days. He was sullen and silent, but finally broke under questioning.

"But I didn't fire the shot," he insisted. "Wheeler did."

A Weary Surrender

WHEELER had fled like a crazed and pursued animal to South Carolina. By day he hid in a cotton field. By night he slept fitfully.

The capture he dreaded and then grew to anticipate finally happened. One night while he struggled for sleep, naked and fear-

Detectives found the exhausted Wheeler sleeping naked in a South Carolina farmhouse ridden, Washington detectives and South Carolina authorities closed the trap.

There was no struggle. Wheeler accepted capture with the exhausted resignation of quarry run to ground by the hounds.

Among Wheeler's effects was found the .38-caliber revolver that had killed Bernstein.

The trial was eminently fair, but there was little doubt what the verdict would be. The jury retired on November 21, 1946, to make its decision. It returned in one hour and 15 minutes. The verdict was guilty of murder in the first degree, a conviction carrying a mandatory death sentence.

Execution was first set for March 28, 1947, but Patton and Wheeler received a series of stays so their attorneys might exhaust every avenue of appeal.

One of 15 Children

THIS murder, capture and sentence of execution will prompt many to wonder what conditions caused Patton and Wheeler to enter a career of crime.

What was their home environment?

Where did they go to school?

What were the mainsprings of their antisocial behavior—Greed? Money? Rebellion? Laziness? Bad companions?

And—an important question—can society learn any lesson from this story of murder and punishment?

Both men said flatly that their early lives had not been responsible.

Consider the case of Wheeler. He was born in Washington February 7, 1920, the third of 15 children. His mother and father, Minette and Thomas Wheeler, now live at 1711 15th st. ne.

"He got in trouble because of bad companions," his mother said several months ago. "Reginald was easy going. If his friends wanted him to do something he'd say 'all right' and do it."

Wheeler's education was only fair. He went as far as the tenth grade. As a boy he started at Mott School, later went to Cook School and finally studied bricklaying at Phelps Vocational School.

When he was 16 he was baptized by the Rev. J. Harry Randolph, pastor of Mount Moriah Baptist Church.

"I have known Reginald's mother since she was a little girl," the Rev. Randolph said recently. "She is a good woman and certainly no blame can be attached to her. It seemed to me the boy grew away from the church."

Capture Was Swift

HE GREW away rapidly. One year after his baptism, Wheeler held up a store with a toy pistol. He was arrested several blocks from the scene. That was in 1937, and District Court sent him to Lorton Reformatory to serve a term of from one to two years.

At 17, a year after he was baptized, Wheeler held up a store with a toy pistol

Wheeler was properly repentant. He applied for parole when he became eligible, and in his application stated:

"At the time I committed this crime, I was badly in need of money as it was just about time for school to start and I had no clothes to wear.

"I did not realize the seriousness of what I was doing, as if I did I am sure I would not have done it. I have never been in trouble before and I am sure this is the last time for me.

"I can see the dreadful error I made and deeply regret it. It was a toy pistol I used in the robbery and I had no intention of hurting anyone."

But Wheeler's mother and father indignantly deny that the family's economic circumstances were ever so severe that their son was forced to rob at the point of a gun.

"We don't have much now and we didn't have much then, that's true," said the mother, "but we always managed to get by somehow. I don't know why Reginald said that. He didn't have to steal to get clothes. My mother was a maid with a well-to-do family and she helped us. She always saw that the children had shoes and clothes to wear to school."

Every Little Helped

A GOOD deal of pride probably tempers this mother's statement. Actually, it would seem that the family had very little. Even the $6.30 Wheeler earned as a movie usher while a schoolboy was considered a windfall.

Here is additional evidence:

After Wheeler applied for parole, an investigator reported that if he was given a conditional release he would live with his parents in a four-room frame house at 119 16th st. se.

What kind of a house was this? The report said it had no electricity, no gas, no inside water facilities and rented for $18.50 a month.

Paroled, Wheeler couldn't find work to help his mother support eight small children

The investigator also reported: That Wheeler's father had recently been transferred from direct relief to the WPA; that his income was the only income in the home; that the mother was caring for eight of her small children.

Wheeler was paroled, and on October 4, 1939, his mother wrote this note to the parole officer:

"Reginald was down to see you but was unable to see you. I am sick in bed and he is the only one I have to look after the two little ones. He is only working on Saturdays.

"Mr. Stein, is there any way you can help Reginald get work? The reason I am asking is my husband was working on WPA but he has been put off for 30 days.

"I have gotten back in my rent, the first time in 10 months. I have six children in school. We are unable to get any assistance from anywhere.

"So if Reginald was working it would mean so much. My husband is working only at the market and that is very little bit."

Status of 'Habitual'

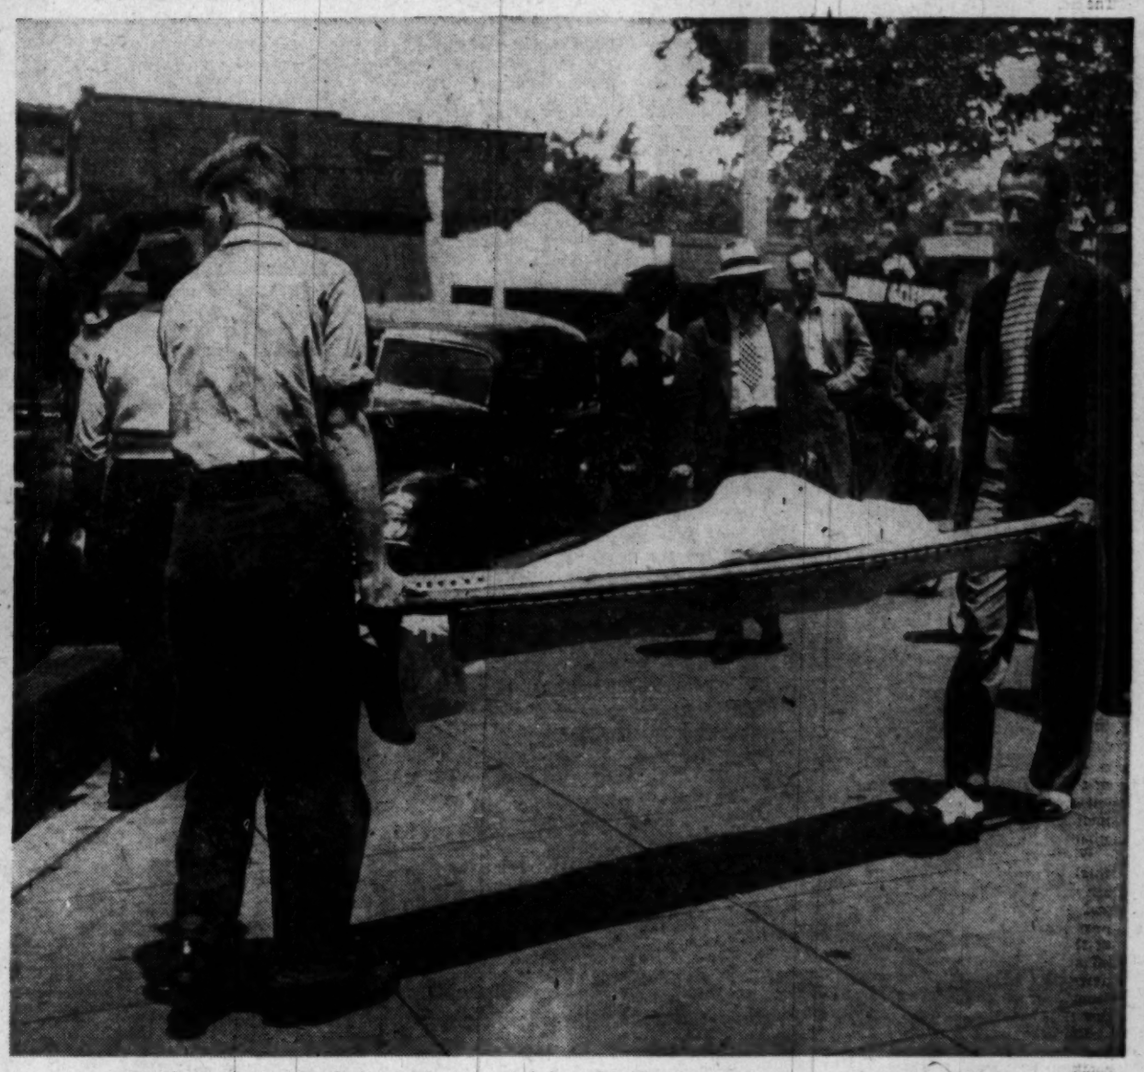
UNABLE to find a job, Wheeler again turned to robbery. This was 1939. He robbed two Palace Laundry branches.

As a second offender, Wheeler received a stiffer sentence this time—two to three years in Lorton.

The pattern now was set. The second social evaluation at Lorton classified him as "an habitual type criminal."

"No interest in religious functions or respect for social ethics . . . wrong associates and environment," stated the official report.

When Wheeler was released from Lorton for the second time he got a job as a mail carrier during the Christmas season of 1942. It was the best job he ever held—$75 for every two weeks. But when the Christmas rush had subsided he was again idle.



The body of Maurice L. Bernstein is carried from his Florida ave. drugstore after the fatal holdup

REGINALD JOSEPH WHEELER — MAURICE L. BERNSTEIN — JESSE JAMES PATTON

He moved on to another job, as a $30-a-week maintenance man at the Lichtman Theater. Perhaps he was now "an habitual type criminal," for one night he stole a check from the manager's office, forged a signature and cashed it.

Back to Lorton for the third time went Wheeler in 1944, sentenced to a term of from four months to year and a day.

The next time he was arrested was for murder.

After he had been convicted and sentenced to death, Wheeler asked jail officials to permit his common-law wife and mother of his two children to visit him.

"I hope I can see her soon," he pleaded, "because she is doing something for me that no one else can do."

He said their planned legal marriage had been blocked because of "this trouble."

Wanted to Be a Cop

LOOKING through Wheeler's file, you find several curious items. He smoked but did not drink alcohol in any form. He had once confided to an interviewer at Lorton that his boyhood ambition had been to be a policeman.

From the evidence, it appears that Wheeler and Patton became acquainted while both were serving terms at Lorton in 1944.

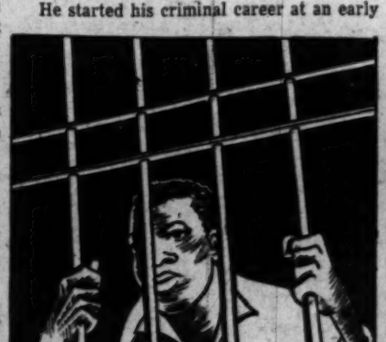
Patton was another character entirely. Much of his background is shadowy. Even he did not know his real name or the names of his parents.

Perhaps it was actual ignorance or perhaps juvenile braggadocio, but Patton repeatedly lied about his age and birthplace when he first got into trouble.

He insisted he had been born June 5, 1918, in Trenton, N. J. Actually he was born June 5, 1925, in Asheville, N. C. It is another curious note that the Bernstein murder occurred on his birthday.

He started his criminal career at an early age. According to FBI records, Patton was only 14 when he was arrested September 5, 1939, in Charlotte, N. C., for larceny. But he claimed he was 21. Instead of being treated as a juvenile offender, as he should have been and would have been if he had told his true age, he was treated as an adult felon and sentenced to a six-month jail term.

Perhaps it was prophetic that this 14-year-old jailbird should be given a criminal's name, Jesse James.



Arrested at 14, Patton lied about his age and was jailed as an adult criminal of 21

Patton was out of school and working as a busboy in Charlotte at the age of 10

Abandoned as Infant

AS A youth, he was befriended by Berry and Beatrice Calhoun, who now live at 2132 11th st. nw.

According to them, Patton was abandoned by his parents after he was born and a couple by the name of Patton in Asheville took over his care.

Patton had not even the advantage of foster parents for long. When he was 2, Mrs. Patton died.

Calhoun and the elder Patton were intimates at this time. They worked together in landscape architecture, principally in the construction of golf courses.

After the death of his wife, the foster father left young Jesse with friends in Charlotte while he and Calhoun ventured to Newport News, Va., to work on a new project.

From that time until Patton was sentenced to the electric chair, the foster father saw him only a few times, and then briefly. While the boy remained in Charlotte the foster father worked in Newport News, then, in 1939, moved to Ohio.

After service in the Army during the war, the elder Patton settled in Trenton, N. J.

Young Patton's schooling was almost negligible. According to Calhoun, at the age of 10 the boy was working as a bus boy in a Charlotte restaurant.

After one of his arrests, a social report noted that he had spent much of his time "gambling and in pool halls." But to his credit it was noted that he enlisted in the CCC in 1938 and was honorably discharged in 1940.

Came Here in 1940

SHORTLY after his discharge from the CCC, Patton came to Washington, and early one morning in 1940 rang the doorbell of the Calhoun home. They took him in.

He got a job in a cafe in the 1300 block of 5th st. ne. On September 10, 1940, he stole a purse containing $200. It belonged to the woman owner of the cafe.

Again Patton lied about his age. He was only 15, but said he was 22. Again a legitimate juvenile case, he was treated as an adult felon. The 15-year-old was sent to Lorton to serve a one-to-three-year term.

He applied for parole the following year. One of the conditions of parole is that the prisoner have a home to go to.

This was a problem for homeless, parentless Patton, so he made up a mother, a nonexistent Madeline Patton, living at 106 L st. nw.

Investigators routinely checked at the address. There was no Madeline Patton at that address, nor was any woman by that name known in the block.

When Patton was released he was able to get a job driving a delivery truck for a Washington department store.

The Pattern Repeats

PROBABLY he, too, had fallen into the criminal pattern. His eyes strayed while he was driving his truck, and he spotted a valet shop in the 3500 block of S. Capitol st. It looked like an easy touch. Patton broke into the shop and stole $800 in cash and $800 in checks.

He was arrested three days later on July 22, 1944, and returned to Lorton. This time his sentence was for four months to a year and a day.

Like Wheeler, Patton had a common-law wife. From this union there is a 3-year-old boy.

Patton was a lonely individual. This is evident in a letter he wrote to Mrs. Calhoun in March, 1941, from Lorton.

". . . it is kind of hard for a fellow when he comes in from work and the fellows are getting mail," he wrote. "You know, it makes you think of home . . . now I know that I was a bad boy when I was home."

Patton (probably because he had experienced too little of it) did not take well to discipline at Lorton. Once when a guard snapped an order at him to hurry back in line, Patton retorted:

"I don't have to hurry—I've got three years to get in line."

Patton never got in line. Neither did Wheeler.

The Magazine Rack

By Katharine Graham

WITH THE INAUGURATION of the airlift to Berlin we have set out on a course from which there is no drawing back, state Columnists Joseph and Stewart Alsop in the Saturday Evening Post. "The next President must expect crises like the Berlin crisis to recur, not in Germany only but wherever the Kremlin chooses to resume the game of push-and-grab along the borders of the Soviet empire."

The risk of war which we are taking is unfortunately one we are ill equipped to meet, say the brothers in "If War Comes—" The armed forces have finally developed a new strategic concept for peace, with some vital requirements which are outlined, but none of which has yet been realized.

In the same issue, Hambla Bauer, who was a horse trainer once herself, profiles Warren Wright, "Boss of Calumet Farm." The farm was purchased by Wright's father, founder of the Calumet Baking Powder Co., which was sold in 1928 to General Foods for 35 million dollars. Since then the younger Wright has devoted his time exclusively to the farm, which he runs on a strictly business basis.

Not a horseman himself (it is said, according to Miss Bauer that the only horse he can recognize in a bunch is Whirlaway, on account of his long tail) he nevertheless makes his own good way among the Kentucky blue grass gentlemen. Calumet won $1,402,436 in 1947 and is on its way to another jackpot year.

ESQUIRE is developing a tendency to carp at the female of the species. It contains "A Bachelor's Confession" by Jimmy Cannon, obviously a last desperate come-on from Cannon or else an embarrassing public strip tease.

What Cannon likes about being single is that the girls he takes out are forced to listen to him and can't burden him with their own boring domestic activities of the day. He can take a night off at the movies and admire an actress without fear of criticism from a spouse. He can choose the radio program he likes.

He can eat at 21 or Stork Club and never have to suffer home cooking and meals chosen by someone else. No one advises him to be moderate in drinking or smoking and he is never rudely exposed to the patter of little feet.

Esquire also has a handsome 12-page guide to good hunting.

THE AUTUMN issue of the newish homemaking magazine Living also has a section, "We Are Bachelors," four who live alone and like it. Newspaperman Tom White of the Baltimore News-Post explains, "My bachelorhood I attribute to the intelligence of those to whom I have proposed. Its perpetuation is guaranteed, for it takes a rare form of insanity to marry a newspaperman—and I prefer normal girls."

Living also shows a career girl who wisely furnishes her apartment with a possible married future in mind.

WHILE WAITING for the great day, the lady might do well to read Millicent Fenwick's "Young Girl On Her Own," an excerpt from Vogue's forthcoming Book of Etiquette in that magazine. She can choose whether to abide by the strict set of rules or a more lenient set of rules, but she must abide by three unbreakables if she is ever to be acceptable at all to such bachelors as Cannon and White.

JUST to run the whole thing into the ground, Pageant has a piece by Ted Shane, "Women Are Lousy Cooks." They are slaves to cookbooks and fancy charts, stingy with the cooking sherry and the garlic, and lovers of French dressing in the bottle. Proof of the flat pudding is that no first-class restaurant is bossed by anyone but chefs, Shane points out.

At last some antidotes for seasickness have been found. A simple one, according to Leonard Reed in Pageant, is to throw your head back and stare at the ceiling. But better yet is hyoscine, a member of the belladonna family. If taken before a trip it was found by the Navy virtually to eliminate the malady, says Reed.

WANT to win one of the fabulous prizes being offered these days? Maxine Block in McCall's gives a few simple rules on "How to Win a Contest." It still remains for you to invent the $64 jingle or whatever, but she advises how not to be thrown out the first thing, how to go about writing the answer and how to catch the eye of the judges.

'Wright' Adds A Chronology

AMERICAN FICTION, 1774-1850. By Lyle H. Wright. Henry E. Huntington Library, San Marino, Calif. 355 pp. $6.

WRIGHT'S bibliography of American prose fiction is modestly subtitled, "A Contribution," but since its first publication in 1939 it has become an indispensable tool, with students of American literature referring to "Wright" much as one refers to "Webster."

This new edition contains 2772 entries. The first edition listed the fiction in 19 libraries; the new edition lists the material in two more, and there are about 600 more entries, including both titles and editions.

In addition, authorship of several works has been clarified.

A new feature is the chronological index of titles. It is particularly valuable in affording a quick, accurate picture of the increase and development of American fiction from 1774, when one work appeared, to 1850 when about 130 appeared.

That first work was Francis Hopkinson's "A Pretty Story," an allegorical political satire, and among the publications of 1850 was Ik Marvel's (Donald G. Mitchell's) "Reveries of a Bachelor," half essay and half fiction. Both works indicate the difficulty of attempting to delimit anything as fluid as fiction for critical or cataloging purposes, a problem that must often have perplexed Wright.

Eyewitness Report on Middle East

'Armed Might' of Islam Debunked

By Sterling North

HATE, HOPE AND HIGH EXPLOSIVES. By George Fielding Eliot. Bobbs-Merrill. 284 pp. $2.75.

GEORGE FIELDING ELIOT does not say in so many words that in a knock-down, drag-out fight the Israeli army can defeat everything the Arab world can send against against it. But that is the conclusion most readers will have after reading this strictly nonpartisan, eyewitness report on the military situation in the Middle East.

G. F. ELIOT

The shibboleth of Arab power notoriously nurtured by the British Colonial Office and a certain faction of the American State Department evaporates like a desert mirage as Eliot debunks the armies of Islam.

Egypt, torn by explosive internal politics, does not dare send more than a fraction of its 28,000 combat soldiers outside the country.

The Lebanese, with only 3500 armed men, are virtually incapable of taking the offensive.

Syria, "with a great effort," could perhaps put 6000 or 8000 men in the field at one time.

The Iraqi army, with 600 miles of desert road to reach Palestine can (and has) put one weak brigade into the fray.

Transjordan's army, best organized and best equipped of any in the Arab confederation, can probably send up to 14,000 men against the Jews. But back in May even Glubb Pasha, commandant of the Arab Legion, told Eliot it would be "damn foolishness" for them to attack.

Iran and Turkey have their hands full watching Russia. Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia will doubtless continue to collect his fat oil royalties and prove a sly and undependable ally in the Arab cause.

And against these loosely organized confederates, the brave, determined and well organized and relatively well equipped Israeli army has more than a fighting chance, despite the great vulnerability of virtually isolated Jerusalem.

This report is not mere wishful thinking on Eliot's part. It is his balanced conclusion after visiting Tel Aviv, Jerusalem, Beirut, Damascus, Baghdad, Teheran, Cairo, Ankara and Amman, and watching the armies of almost every country he visited on maneuvers or in action.

His conclusions are also, in part, the consensus of many of the best informed men he met and interviewed—including, surprisingly enough, some of the important Arabs.

Eliot managed to question almost every important leader except Ibn Saud. Among others, he saw Azzam Pasha, King Abdullah, the Shah of Iran and President Ismet Inonu of Turkey. He talked to many Israeli officers and even a member of the Stern gang. And everywhere he went he contacted correspondents and American and British officials.

Eliot remains sternly objective throughout. He is aware that the trouble in Palestine is only part of the much larger picture—darkened by the horrible shadow of a possible war between Russia and the United States. In such a war the Arabs would be pitifully weak allies despite the fantastic claims that have been made to justify concessions made to them.

There is, however, a probability that Turkey and even Iran might fight a delaying action for weeks (or maybe months) until American and British forces could swing into action. Loss of the Middle East to Russia might easily prove fatal to the American cause; and upon our strength in the Mediterranean may lie the final outcome of the dreaded but always possible World War III.

The suggestions for strengthening our position in these regions which Eliot offers in the final chapter are excellent. Fortunately he throws light rather than heat upon an already superheated controversy.

DREADFUL CALIFORNIA. By Hinton Helper. Edited by Lucius Beebe and Charles M. Clegg. Illustrated by James Alexander. Bobbs-Merrill. 162 pp. $2.50.

DEAR READER: Are you thinking of moving to California? I suggest that before you charter your covered wagon you read of the "paucity of the soil . . . the expensiveness of living . . . the lack of scenery . . . the disagreeable consequences of the weather . . . the inefficiency of the laws . . . the anarchial state of society . . . the breaches of faith between man and wife . . . the unexampled debauchery of the community . . . and the depravity of the adolescent generation."

You may not find gold in the streets of San Francisco! You may even be beaten and robbed by the rascals who swarm all over the State of "desert and mudholes." And the virtue of your wife will be greatly endangered.

Wrote Hinton Helper in 1855, "I may not be a competent judge, but this much I will say, that I have seen purer liquors, better seegars, finer tobacco, truer guns and pistols, larger dirks and bowie knives and prettier courtesans here than in any other place I have ever visited; and it is my unbiased opinion that California can and does furnish the best bad things that are obtainable in America."

Messrs. Beebe and Clegg, that indefatigable pair of short-line railroad enthusiasts who hunt their folklore in all the better-known bars frequented by Cafe Society, have hit pay dirt in the forgotten Helper diatribe. Edited with an introduction and footnotes, it makes an ironical commentary on California then and now.

Fires still rage, drought still strikes, water is still scarce, and the divorce rate is still high in happy, sunny California. And although irrigation has done much to make the desert bloom like the (Billy) Rose, much that Helper has to say about San Francisco, Sacramento, Stockton and Sonora are in some measure still the gospel truth.

If you have among your friends an out-of-work Hollywood scenarist or a rancher ruined by drought, do send him a copy of "Dreadful California"—a tract which will soon be denounced by every chamber of commerce from San Diego to the border of Oregon.

THE WHIMSEY REPORT: Or Sex Isn't Everything. By Parke Cummings. Crowell. 150 pp. $2.

HERE is a survey to end all surveys. Doctors Kinsey, Gallup and Hooper should be furious!

Imagine a mere broth of a boy like Cummings, aided only by a wrestler called "The Professor" and a pool hall habitue named Al, setting forth to prove that "Sex Isn't Everything." (Nothing personal, we hope).

CUMMINGS

Underwritten by Old Blunderbuss Whisky, the author seems to have purloined his technique from Kinsey and the Fuller Brushman.

He rang doorbells, interviewed bar flies, shared his Old Blunderbuss with commuters! But Cummings was a novice in getting answers compared to The Professor, who used the hammerlock and the half-nelson to elicit answers from reluctant interviewees.

And what did these three galloping musketeers of scientific Hooper-snopering discover:

That folks like to tell anybody everything. (Try and stop them).

That most wives claim their husbands snore and most husbands deny it.

That an astonishing number of golf players cheat in sand traps; some as often as 20 times a week since the age of 12.

That you can sell the same confidential information several times and later use it as a basis for blackmail.

That the food most hospitals serve is lousy.

That most people have common colds, insomnia, too little money, too small a house, too old a car, too mean a boss and know very little about bringing up children.

That most children won't work around the house except for money.

And, finally, that the majority of citizens have "rocks in their heads."

This review, of course, is merely a scientific cross-sampling of the Cummings cross-sampling. But it will prove to any unbiased reader that Cummings is no better and no worse than others in his profession.

I shall be very much surprised, however, if it doesn't result in the author being hailed before the officials of the Anti-Saloon League, his mother-in-law or the Thomas Committee.

His highly subversive little book hints at the very lares and penates of home and country. No husband will ever again be able to sweep dirt under the edge of a rug without a guilty twinge of conscience. The world of sport will be shaken. Soap opera addicts and little comic book fiends will turn introspective. Housewives everywhere will quiver at the sound of the doorbell. And thousands of undistinguished gentlemen will switch to Old Blunderbuss Whisky and books by Parke Cummings.

• "An entertaining journey into New York's past," says HARRY HANSEN of this dramatic story of David Wakeman and the struggles he faced while building the Croton reservoir and aqueduct a hundred years ago. Scheming politicians, fire, flood and labor trouble—and finally the big freeze presented almost insurmountable obstacles. Her Last Three Stories

Cather Looks Homeward at Last

THE OLD BEAUTY AND OTHERS. By Willa Cather. Knopf. 166 pp. $2.50.

FOR some years before her death in April, 1947, it seemed that Willa Cather was moving ever farther from the spirit of her frontier Nebraska.

She was seeking in religion ("Death Comes for the Archbishop" and "Shadows on the Rock") pattern and tradition and solace. She was reclaiming her Virginia heritage in such novels as "Sapphira and the Slave Girl." It was hard to believe that she would ever return to the mood and subject matter of the sod-house frontier she knew in her childhood, the fresh and lyric beauty of "O, Pioneers" and "My Antonia."

The first story in this farewell volume seems to continue that long retreat. In a character study, using the technique of "My Mortal Enemy" and reflecting more than a trace of Henry James, she captures the vestigial charm of London before the First World War, carrying it together with her chief character into the Hotel Splendide at Aix-les-Baines in 1922.

Photographed by Steichen
WILLA CATHER
. . . a surge of power

Gabrielle Longstreet, a cool and fabulous beauty who came originally from Martinique and became the toast of London before the turn of the century, is now a forgotten woman, wasted by age and sickness. She is recognized by one of her old admirers, a Mr. Seabury, and is approached through her companion, Cherry Beamish, at one time a musical comedy favorite.

The rest of the story to its rather tragic conclusion is a series of graceful loop-backs into the past of Gabrielle, who only now is beginning to realize how little she appreciated the famous men who came, all-kneeling, to her feet. The sexually unawakened woman has a glimpse before she dies of what her life might have been.

This is a successful, smoothly-written, sophisticated story contrasting two eras and two worlds and drawing at least three good character sketches. But it has none of the depth and haunting evil overtones of "My Mortal Enemy." And it is a further retreat.

The last story in the book, "Before Breakfast," is a rather slight sketch of a man, exploited by his family, seeking solitude on an island off the coast of Maine. It is, of course, well written.

But in the central story of this trio, "The Best Years" (literally the last Willa Cather ever wrote), she returns to her Nebraska beginnings, and the result is a surge of power and awakening of emotion not to be found in Cather's writing in many years.

The life and death of a teen-age Nebraska school teacher as seen through the eyes of her friend, Miss Knightly, the county superintendent, is one of the finest stories Willa Cather ever wrote. The scene in which this slight and spirited girl brings her children safely through the blizzard (which is her own doom) will stand with any climax in a Cather novel.

Miss Cather, like the Old Beauty, perhaps rediscovered too late that it is not by withdrawal but by acceptance; not by cool appraisal but by participation, that one finds love and happiness.

Another Search

THE DOVE, by Wilson Tucker (Rinehart, $2).

This has to do with the search for a cigar box. A small fortune was hidden in it by an old star of the silent movies, Leila Dove, after a feud with leading man Tanner.

Charles Horne gallantly rescues the Dove from a hospital where she had run up a bill, and accompanies her to Hollywood, where she evens the score at a dire moment when he, too, is in need of rescue. It gets gruesome and tense, too.—(P).

AEC Operating in Vacuum

Public 'Snub' of Atom Called a Phenomenon

WASHINGTON REPORTERS who have endeavored to peek discreetly into the activities of the Atomic Energy Commission, and who often have been rewarded with little more than frustration, are citing to commission officials these days an unusually pertinent article in the current issue of the University of Chicago Law Review.

The article, written by Herbert S. Marks, former general counsel of the commission, calls attention to the fact that this newest—and, in the long view, probably most important—of Government agencies is operating in a virtual vacuum of public scrutiny and public debate. It is, he says, "a phenomenon unique in the conduct of important public affairs."

A digest of Mr. Marks' article follows:

IN THE midst of noise it is difficult to perceive areas of silence.

Since the appointment of the Atomic Energy Commission in October, 1946, millions of words have been published about the administration of the McMahon Act. But the very quantity of material has obscured the fact that critical analysis and insight have been negligible. Even more remarkable, the range of issues which has excited any active public debate has been exceedingly limited despite the many intrinsically controversial questions with which the Atomic Energy Act is concerned.

Actions of the Atomic Energy Commission that are the subject of press release are duly reported in the newspapers—but rarely with more penetrating comment or follow-up than that which accompanies the society news. The old argument over military versus civilian control has some continuing vitality; whether or not the secrets of the atomic bomb are being securely kept also gets attention; the patent provisions of the law and their administration are discussed in professional quarters. The list could be extended, but not significantly.

Of late, a handful of informed appraisals has appeared concerning such matters as the relationship of the commission's program to business, the commission's special problems with respect to loyalty investigations, the status of research at Oak Ridge. What is strange, however, is not so much the infrequency of perceptive commentary; the striking fact is that neither in depth nor scope is the public discussion which prevails for other Government affairs even approximated in the field of atomic energy.

Most recently the congressional controversy over the reappointment of the commissioners might have been expected to stimulate critical review of the broad field of operations of the Atomic Energy Commission. In fact, however, what has been observed in these legislative proceedings is little more than a series of election-year maneuvers.

The absence of wide debate and criticism concerning the administration of this far-reaching law is a phenomenon unique in the conduct of important public affairs.

There are, of course, strong reasons for this peculiar situation. Some, like the requirements of secrecy, will appear obvious; others may appear more subtle. The significance of the unusual present conditions will be clearer, however, if first viewed in the light of the normal attitude toward public affairs.

Checkrein on Mischief

THROUGHOUT its history, this country has cherished a principle from which we have rarely tolerated departure. We have believed that the chief protection of society against incompetence, unfairness and corruption in government is the unlimited opportunity for public scrutiny and protest. We have believed also that this is the chief means of assuring that officials will pursue the course upon which the public is set.

Sixty years ago, Lord Bryce observed "a healthy and watchful public opinion" as a commonplace of the American political system. "Mischief is checked in America more frequently than anywhere else by fear of exposure or by newspaper criticism in the first stage of a bad scheme," he said. And in a current opinion, the United States Supreme Court quotes Bentham's century-old observation: "Without publicity, all other checks are insufficient: in comparison of publicity, all other checks are of small account . . ."

In observance of this principle, the physical and social sciences could find their most important common ground. Science, says a distinguished physicist, "is not a field in which error awaits death and subsequent generations for verdict—the next issue of the journals will take care of it." Perhaps the test of our faith is our firm belief that it is the fatal weakness of communism and all other forms of totalitarianism that they can find no substitute for the self-correcting process of open discussion and criticism which is the democratic tradition.

We pay a high price to maintain this tradition. Ordinarily there is no need to encourage criticism of large Government enterprise; the danger is rather that it goes too far. The able administrator is harassed and disgusted, the timid administrator is paralyzed, public affairs suffer from endless delays.

Yet, even in the conduct of the war agencies, whether civilian or military, we have insisted upon this principle. On balance, we have always been convinced that the price was not too high. Nevertheless, in the case of the administration of the Atomic Energy Act, critical debate has been largely absent.

Scope Is Well Known

THE lack of critical discussion by no means signifies an inactive atomic energy program. We know that the Atomic Energy Commission operates a capital investment of three billion dollars; that it spends well in excess of a half billion dollars annually; that directly or indirectly it employs 60,000 people; that it has important business relations with hundreds of business concerns and educational institutions; and that its regulatory activities affect business, the press and other private institutions.

Nor is it really possible that the absence of debate and criticism is simply a reflection of the high public respect and confidence which the present commission and its staff rightly commands. Our theory and practice are such that it is a matter of indifference whether Government officials are able and incorruptible public servants—a David Lilienthal or a General Groves—or suspected machine politicians. We subject both classes to the gantlet.

The public servant, on his part, is rarely aware that the pressures and attacks from which he suffers during all his official life are frequently a source of strength and almost always a source of guidance. It is public pressure which helps weed out incompetent associates when official inertia would retain them. It is an interested, critical public which often supplies the only adequate forum for resolving conflicts between executive agencies, between Congress and the Executive or between Government agencies and special interests.

Above all it is the public reaction to what he does or fails to do which tells the administrator what is expected of him. It is his duty to provide leadership, but leadership in the direction of the public's expectations.

Members Worried

BUT how can the Atomic Energy Commission be responsive to the impulses and expectations of a society which in relation to this subject matter are not expressed, which seemingly are not even felt?

The men who compose the commission have been conscious of the vacuum in which they operate and have sensed the dangers which it portends. For many months, in their reports and speeches, they have made eloquent pleas to the public to get educated about and take an active interest in atomic energy.

To these pleas, the most common public response appears to be: "What is it that they want us to know? Why don't they tell us?" The pleas have somewhat puzzled the public; the public response has somewhat puzzled the commission.

Secrecy is certainly the most important factor in accounting for public inertia in relation to the administration of the Atomic Energy Act. The requirements of security altogether remove from public view certain activities and certain problems of the Atomic Energy Commission.

The areas of information that are shut off for reasons of security inevitably seem to obscure those which are open. No matter how much the questioner may be assured that he can understand what he needs to know without access to what is hidden, he always has a lurking uneasiness that his interpretation of what is in sight will be distorted by what is unknown.

Fear of Magic

THERE is, moreover, a general frame of mind which inhibits the active curiosity without which scrutiny and debate do not take place. A taboo-like quality attaches to atomic energy, which is perhaps no more than another way of saying that the immense proportions of the new physical force, the seeming magic and real mystery connected with it, its tradition-shaking consequences and the walls of secrecy and epic drama which surrounded it from the first, made of it a subject from which we instinctively shy away.

Any practical measures that may be proposed now for releasing the normal forces of critical scrutiny and debate will seem modest as compared with the proportions of the problem. What is important is that the process commence. The best hope for constructive change lies in recognition of the fact that, once started, this process which is so close to our most basic traditions will find its own strength, and its own new channels for growth.

U. S. Supplies Go Into Greek Trade

ATHENS (AP).—Almost 80 million dollars worth of food, clothing, machinery and other supplies were moved out of Greek warehouses into trade channels the past year by the American mission. These were UNRRA and United States war surplus stocks.

American mission distribution experts reveal that approximately $37,500,000 worth of vitally needed goods, ranging from buttons to iron bars, have been put out to the consumer. Officials say "one of the most successful accomplishments" was the disposal of about $900,000 worth of machine tools. A quantity of these had been stored away for two years. The entire lot was sold out in one day.

Yanks Beat Nats, 6-3; Bosox Win Twin Bill

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

EVEN THE DEATH of Babe Ruth did not cause the London Times to unbend. His obituary was published under the caption: "Mr. George H. Ruth" . . . but the Times' headlines sometimes have charm as in the case of the jaywalker who absent-mindedly stepped into a London traffic stream and was killed. The one-paragraph story was titled: "Lost in Thought." . . . When Vic Raschi was knocked out of the box by the Red Sox the other day, baseball historians delved into the 25 games he has won for the Yankees in two seasons and discovered he had never beaten Boston . . . Lu Gambino got a violent introduction to pro football when he joined the Baltimore Colts last week. His first practice scrimmage play produced a broken nose for Gambino . . . inexplicable is the fact that Maryland U.'s season ticket sale has increased since Gambino was declared ineligible, but easily understandable is the added fact that Coach Jim Tatum's blood pressure is also booming . . . Joe Louis, born in Lafayette, Ala., now views as his likeliest successor Ezzard Charles who was born across the State line in Lafayette Ga. . . . Clark Griffith is now concerned with averting the second eighth-place finish for his Washington club since he moved to the Nation's Capital 37 seasons ago. Even last place would not endanger a renewal of Joe Kuhel's managerial contract, however.

POVICH

THE WASHINGTON BALL CLUB made no bleat against the new District law which charges the club $20,000 a year for police protection until it was discovered recently that the "protection" bill of $5947 for the last three months included the following item: Police protection on the night of the Police vs. Firemen's ball game . . . for which Clark Griffith had donated his park . . . and Turner's Arena, hit by the same new law, protests that it is being billed for police protection in advance, before the number of monthly events is known . . . Bob Mathias, the Tulare, Calif., 17-year-old who won the Olympic Decathlon title, will be honored in Washington on Friday as the "Boy of the Year," in conjunction with Youth Month proclaimed by President Truman. Attorney General Tom Clark will present him with a plaque . . . Sonny Hertzberg, one of the stalwarts of the Washington Caps basketball team last season, threatens to kiss the boys goodbye, refusing to take a $1000 salary slash . . . George Myatt, the Nats' former second baseman who is now managing their Chattanooga farm club, has announced he will pitch the team's last game of the season this afternoon . . . Mack Posnak, an All-American basketball choice when he was playing for St. John's of Brooklyn and later a coach in Washington, is under survey for a stomach ailment in Doctors Hospital here.

IT'S RATHER STARTLING to note that Villanova will entertain Texas A. and M. in its football opener Saturday at, of all places, Franklin Field. Penn rarely permits a school other than Army or Navy to use its massive stadium . . . Jim O'Keefe, Georgetown's 235-pound tackle; Johnny O'Keefe, Holy Cross' 220-pound end, and Tommy and Marty O'Keefe who top 180 and play for Gonzaga High School, are the sons of 152-pound Charles J. O'Keefe, Washington attorney . . . Daddy O'Keefe is rooting for a tie on September 25 when Georgetown opens its season against Holy Cross . . . At Atlantic City, one of the younger race tracks, bettors poured $1,800,000 into the mutuel machines last Saturday in contrast to the $1,400,000 at long-established Arlington which features bigger stakes . . . the Maryland Racing Commission retained the mouse test to establish stimulants by horsemen after 30 experiments on the mice. Twenty-nine samples of salvia containing stimulants were given the mice plus a thirtieth sample without stimulants. Twenty-nine mice reacted, the thirtieth didn't . . . Jim Castiglia, bypassed by the Redskins when he held out for more than a $5000 salary after being the club's greatest ground gainer last season, is awaiting a call by the club which is suffering from the lack of a fullback . . . "My weight is down to 215, 5 pounds less than last year and I run 3 to 5 miles every day," Castiglia pens this department, "and I've never been clocked at more than 11 seconds for 100 yards."

UP IN THE CATSKILLS where Marcel Cerdan is training for his middleweight title bout with Tony Zale, the Frenchman's favorite game of backgammon has edged out gin rummy and pinochle as the top diversion in the fight camp . . . on the betting front: The Cleveland Browns are 7-point favorites to beat the Buffalo Bills today. San Francisco's Forty Niners are 7½-point favorites over the New York Yankees, who are without the injured Buddy Young. Tony Zale is a 7-to-5 choice to retain his title against Cerdan. Jersey Joe Walcott is an 8-5 favorite over Gus Lesnevich . . . the Green Bay Packers are sore at the Redskins for putting them on the spot with the Chicago Tribune by insisting on playing Harry Gilmer, who is non grata with that powerful newspaper in the Packers' home territory . . . Corinne Griffith Marshall, author of "My Life with the Redskins" which is being filmed in Hollywood, is threatening action against the producers for picturing her both smoking and drinking. She says she doesn't.

DiMag Hits 35th Homer; Reynolds Wins 16th

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

In typical Yankee fashion, the Yankees fashioned a 6-3 victory over the Nats yesterday at Griffith Stadium.

The New Yorkers lashed out 14 hits—only eight of them singles—to deal the Nats their eleventh straight defeat before 10,255 indifferent observers. Washington's tailspin leaves the club only two behind the all-time Nat record of 13 consecutive setbacks established 44 years ago.

Joe DiMaggio contributed the mightiest blow, a 420-foot homer run, which raised his production in that department to 35 this season.

Allie Reynolds, who registered his sixteenth pitching success; Gus Niarhos, Tommy Henrich and Johnny Lindell chipped in doubles. Lindell, in fact, got two.

This hefty offensive coupled with an agonizing demonstration of Washington futility enabled the Yankees to remain only 3 games behind the league-leading Red Sox who trounced the Athletics twice in Boston.

Three Hits for Mark

Although they wore the Washington uniform, Mark Christman and Eddie Yost didn't look like Nats against Reynolds. Christman got three of the eight Washington hits and scored all three runs. Yost drove him in twice with outfield flies. Christman scored the third Nat run on Al Kozar's infield out.

Forest Thompson, who absorbed his ninth loss, held the Yankees runless in the first inning, but they peppered him for two scores in the next frame.

Niarhos drove in the first with a double and he scored a moment later on George Stirnweiss' fly.

Lindell's first double and Phil Rizzuto's single made it 3-0 in the the third and DiMaggio's drive into the left field stands added another run to the Yankees total in the fifth.

Strangely enough, the Yankees produced their final two runs in the eight without an extra base hit. Singles by Stirnweiss, Henrich and DiMaggio plus two out-

Kiner's Homer Wins for Bucs

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP).—Ralph Kiner, who had hit only one grand slam home run in his major league career, banged another in a pinch-hitting role with two out and two strikes on him in the eighth inning today, to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a wild 13-12 win over the Chicago Cubs.

Kiner, who was out of the regular lineup because of a stomach ailment, delivered his homer off Hank Borowy after an error by Roy Smalley had kept alive a Pirate rally. It was the big outfielder's thirty-ninth circuit drive of the year.

It was barely enough, too, for Andy Pafko hit his twenty-fourth homer for the Cubs a few moments later with a man on base to bring the score to its final status.

Pennant Won By Nashville

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 11 (AP).—The Nashville Vols tonight clinched the 1948 Southern Association pennant by beating Mobile's Bears, 7-2, for their eleventh straight victory.

The powerful Vols, in and out—mostly in—of first place all year, captured the flag, their eighth, with only one day of regular season play remaining.

BAUGH TRIES TO RUN—The going was so hard for the Washington Redskins against the Green Bay Packers in Birmingham yesterday that Sammy Baugh of the Skins was forced to run with the ball. Baugh, haltered all day by the Packers' tight forward pass defense, is shown making a 5-yard gain. The Packers won handsomely, 43-0

Braves Add To Lead by Winning Two

Philadelphia, Sept. 11 (AP).—The Boston Braves increased their National League lead to 3½ games tonight by thumping the Philadelphia Phillies twice—3-1 and 13-2—in a day-night twin bill.

Bob Elliott's twentieth homer with two men on was the deciding blow in the day contest.

The twin win extended the Braves present streak to six.

In the day game, caused by postponement of yesterday's contest because of rain, Johnny Sain won his nineteenth decision—tops for a National League pitcher. He limited the Phils to seven hits, the big wallop being Shortstop Eddie Miller's fourteenth homer in the seventh frame.

Elliott put the first game on ice in the third frame after Alvin Dark singled and Earl Torgeson walked with two men out. He stepped into a fast ball thrown by Schoolboy Rowe—and it was the clincher.

The night game, a regular scheduled affair, turned into a slugfest with the Braves doing all the slugging.

Even the pitcher chipped in—Warren Spahn clubbing a homer in the eighth inning with one on—his first four-bagger as a major leaguer. He also hit a double.

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 11.—The Washington Redskins made their third exhibition start of the 1948 season a perfect exhibition of inept football here today, getting themselves kicked around Legion Field, 43-0, by the Green Bay Packers.

The two National Football League teams, giving some 30,000 Birmingham fans their first taste of organized professional action, weren't in the same league today.

The Packers won their third straight pre-season outing with five assorted touchdowns, the first after only 2½ minutes of play, plus four extra points and Fullback Ted Fritsch's three field goals.

It was the first game in which the Packers had scored more than one touchdown.

Washington lost its second game in a row with miserable pass defense, practically no running game and seive-like protection for Slingin' Sammy Baugh.

The only defense of the Redskins' poor showing was their lack of several key players, all out with injuries. Quarterback Harry Gilmer, nursing a cut leg, got into one play for the benefit of the home folks. And Halfbacks Eddie Saenz, Dick Todd and Howie Livingston weren't even in uniform.

But Washington's main trouble was the tremendous power in Packer uniforms.

The Wisconsin forces were missing three first-line backs—Walt Schlinkman, Perry Moss and Earl Girard—but they had plenty left.

Their scoring was divided between five stars, although former Redskin Quarterback Jack Jacobs was involved to the extent of

Fans Give Gilmer Set of Golf Clubs

All-America Harry Gilmer's single appearance in the game came midway of the second quarter as Washington profited by a pass interference penalty and took the ball on Greenbay's 31.

The injured ace, as a token showing for his home-town admirers, slanted a soft pass to Hugh Taylor just over the line of scrimmage. It was a perfect shot but Taylor was well covered and the ball was knocked from his hands.

In pre-game ceremonies Gilmer was presented a set of golf clubs and a large silver plaque by the junior chamber of commerce, sponsors of the game benefiting the children's hospital of Birmingham.

Giants Down Bums, 2-1 In 13 Innings, Win 2d, 6-4

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—The New York Giants all but ruined the Brooklyn Dodgers' pennant chances today when they trounced their interborough rivals twice, 2-1 and 6-4.

A paid crowd of 48,583 saw Larry Jansen best Joe Hatten in the first game 13-inning duel to win his 17th decision of the season. Substitute Shortstop Bobby Rhawn's three-run homer with two out in the sixth and final inning furnished the winnng runs in the nightcap. The second game was halted because of darkness after the winning runs scored.

Branca Routed

Trailing 4-2 when they came to bat in the bottom of the sixth, the Giants quickly disposed of starter Ralph Branca when Sid Gordon walked and Johnny Mize singled him to third. With Southpaw Paul Minner on the mound, Willard Marshall singled to right scoring Gordon. Righthander Hank Behrman came in to strike out Pinch Hitter Less Layton, but Rhawn, recalled from Minneapolis last Wednesday, smacked his first pitch into the lower right field stands to give the Giants a sweep of the twin bill.

Wildness cost Hatten the first game. He walked Buddy Kerr on a 3-2 pitch with two out and the bases loaded in the thirteenth to force Marshall over the plate with the winning run. Marshall had singled with two out for only the sixth hit off Hatten. Eddie Miksis threw wild on Johnny McCarthy's grounder and the Giants wound up with men on second and third. Thomson was purposely passed, setting the stage for the walk to Kerr.

A single by Kerr, Jansen's sacrifice and another single by Jack Lohrke gave the Giants a run in the third inning. The Dodgers tied the score in the sixth when Marv Rackley walked, stole second and scored when Jackie Robinson rapped a two-out single off Lohrke's glove.

The Dodgers muffed a great opportunity to win in regulation time when Gene Hermanski opened the

Gonzaga Defeats Mt. Vernon, 6-0

Fullback Tommy O'Keefe plunged four yards through the middle with but two minutes left to give Gonzaga a 6-0 victory over the Mt. Vernon High Majors last night at Mt. Vernon stadium.

O'Keefe's payoff buck capped a 53-yard Gonzaga drive in the last period. Both teams played cautious, defensive football, counting only 13 first downs between them. Of these, Gonzaga scored seven and Mt. Vernon six.

5000 fans witnessed the game.

Post Writers Analyze Football Prospects of Big College Teams

The Washington Post will begin this week to let football fans know what's what about major teams of the Southern Conference area.

Staff writers will visit the camps of a dozen or more top teams for analytical stories, now that the squads have had sufficient practice to shape into units for opening games.

Morris Siegel, Jack Walsh, Bill Burnett, Herb Heft and other staffmen will do first-hand stories on Virginia, VPI, VMI, North Carolina, Duke, Wake Forest, Navy, William and Mary, Richmond, Washington and Lee, Maryland, George Washington, Georgetown and others.

Siegel, who knows the middle name of almost every player in the Southern Conference area, will make a swing of Virginia and the Carolinas. His first story will be published Thursday, September 16, on Duke's prospects.

Lemon Posts No. 20; Tribe Captures Two

Cleveland, Sept. 11 (AP). — The Cleveland Indians took both ends of a double-header from the St. Louis Browns today, 4-1 and 9-1, to run their current victory string to six games. Bob Lemon's six-hitter in the nightcap made him the first 20-game winner in the majors this season.

It was Lemon's second try for victory No. 20 against 11 defeats, and the Tribe staked him to three runs in the first inning and six more in the seventh.

Lefty Al Gerheauser, the loser, was chased from the hill in that frame by a rally that included a two-run single by Ken Keltner and two-run doubles by Thurman Tucker and Jim Hegan.

Hegan got his two-bagger off relief hurler Bill Kennedy.

Lemon kept the Brownies scoreless until the fifth, when singles by Ed Pellagrini and Gerheauser and Paul Lehner's fly brought the visitors' only marker. By fanning four, Lemon raised his league-leading total to 133.

Steve Gromek's 4-1 triumph in the opener was a four-hit performance, his eighth victory of the season.

He did not give a hit until Paul Lehner's single started the fifth. Bob Dillinger's single and Gerald Priddy's double brought the Browns their lone score in the sixth.

Cleveland got off to an early lead in the opener with two runs in the first frame on Dale Mitchell's single, Tucker's triple and Lou Boudreau's fly. The Tribe added

Ashburn Named Rookie of Year

St. Louis, Sept. 11 (AP).—The Sporting News today named Richie Ashburn, 21-year-old outfielder of the Philadelphia Phillies, as the major league rookie of the year.

Ashburn was cited for his 32 stolen bases, his .333 hitting, some "thrilling catches, fast thinking and strong throwing." Ashburn led the National League in stolen bases and was third in batting when a broken hand recently put him out for the season.

Other rookies winning mention include Hal Jeffcoat of the Chicago Cubs, Bob Chesnes of the Pittsburgh Pirates, Robin Roberts of the Phillies, Satchel Paige of the Cleveland Indians, Lou Brissie of the Philadelphia Athletics, Gene Bearden and Joe Tipton of the Tigers, Bob Porterfield of the New York Yankees and Dick Kokos of Indians, George Vico of the Detroit the St. Louis Browns.

Galehouse, Parnell Beat Macks by 9-1 and 2-1

Boston, Sept. 11 (AP).—Boston's Red Sox moved three games ahead of the rest of the field in the American League flag chase tonight by shading the Philadelphia Athletics 2-1 behind the slick pitching of Lefty Mel Parnell.

The Sox had defeated the A's 9-1 in the daylight half of this afternoon-night program.

Parnell, who won his 12th game of the season, his sixth in succession, got into a bad hole in the last of the ninth when the A's loaded the bases on two walks, a hit and a sacrifice.

But he brought a great shout from 34,002 fans when he grabbed Ferris Fain's high bouncer and pegged home to start a game-ending double play.

Di Mag Bats In Two Runs

Dom DMaggio's long triple to deep center scored Matt Batts, who had walked, and Parnell, who had bunted safely, for Boston's two runs in the fifth inning.

The only Philadelphia score came in the seventh. It was knocked in by Fain who hit a Texas Leaguer into left on which Pete Suder scored from second.

Suder had started the inning with a single between third and short. Pitcher Joe Coleman's sacrifice sent him to second.

Eddie Joost then walked and Parnell struck out Barney McCosky. Then came Fain's hit.

Parnell struck out six and walked an equal number.

Galehouse in Fine Form

In the afternoon game the Sox gave their veteran righthanded pitcher Denny Galehouse fine support both at bat and afield in their 9-1 triumph.

The Sox whipped off five double plays—of which the most spectacular was one started by Center Fielder Dom DiMaggio in the third inning.

DiMaggio ran far to his left to grab Barney McCosky's bid for a hit.

The ball looked as if it might drop safely and Bill McCahan, starting Philadelphia pitcher, who had singled ahead of McCosky, was half way between first and second.

The "Little Professor" pegged to first as he continued running, the ball landing in the glove of Billy Goodman ahead of the sliding Mc-

Cards Clout Eagles, 23-9

Philadelphia, Sept. 11 (AP).—The trusty toe of big Ventan Yablonski helped boot the Chicago Cardinals to a 23-9 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles tonight in the eleventh annual Inquirer Charities football game.

A crowd of 65,000 watched the former Columbia University star placekick three field goals and two points after touchdown.

It was a scrambling, feverish game, with the breaks and Yablonski's accurate booting over-balancing the surging power of the Eagle's Steve Van Buren and a booming 48-yard placement field goal by big Joe Juha.

Yablonski's boots were 15, 36 and 19 yards, with the first two in the opening quarter giving the defending National Football League champions a lead they never lost.

The big Cardinal fullback's sterling performance earned him the Robert E. French memorial trophy, awarded each year to the outstanding star of the charity game.

Cullop, Prendergast Fined $25 for Row

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 11 (AP).—American Association President Frank Lane today fined Milwaukee Manager Nick Cullop and Pitcher Jim Prendergast $25 each for "vile language" against an umpire in the game at St. Paul Friday night.

Lane reported that Cullop's outburst against Umpire Art Meier caused his ejection from the park in the eighth inning. He said Prendergast's "abusive remarks" against Meier came after the game. St. Paul won, 4-3.

Replica 2d Wins Foxcatcher Steeplechase by a Neck

Fair Hill, Md., Sept. 11 (AP).—In a three-horse finish, Richard K. Mellon's Replica 2d won the gruelling $7500 Foxcatcher National Hunt Steeplechase today.

Johnny Murphy drove the 10-year-old, Pittsburgh-owned jumper home a neck in front of Bayard Sharp's Tourist Pride. Ella Widener's Chance Bullet was a nose back in third at the end of the 3-mile run.

It was the closest race in the nine years of what is considered the most severe test for jumpers in this country.

Replica cleared the final fence in front with Tourist Pride only a half-length back and Chance Bullet closing fast another length to the rear.

Floating Isle, the favorite from Thomas T. Mott's Auburn Farm of Sandy Springs, Md., faded to fourth in the last mile. Irish Oyster was fifth. Dunsan, never a contender, brought up the rear.

The 7-furlong dash on turf went to Hals Pal owned by Mrs. G. H. Bostwick.

Gambino Sorely Missed As Terps 'Lose' Scrimmage

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

It was never more evident than yesterday that those tears Maryland's Jim Tatum is shedding for the missing Lu Gambino aren't the crocodile variety.

In a rugged 2½-hour scrimmage approximating game conditions, William and Mary's defending Southern Conference champions really gave the Terps a pushing around.

Sad thing, from a College Park standpoint, was that Maryland didn't display anything that resembled a good running game. Johnny Izdik, one of the backs touted for Gambino's spot, dispelled the gloom only briefly when he knifed his way for a 30-yard touchdown run.

You understand, of course, that no scores are kept in these affairs. But that didn't prevent some 300 assorted spectators from counting William and Mary

Conversion Program On Out at G W

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

A localized conversion program, Bo Rowland style, is taking place at George Washington's football training camp.

Mustering his forces for the Colonials' opener at Wake Forest next Saturday, Rowland has been moving ends to the backfield, backs to the end spots, and guards to the center post. It's his answer to his shortage of material.

Rowland's juggling has met with most notable success at center.

With last year's regular, Don Druckenmiller, out of the picture because of injuries, Rowland has only two men who played the center position before this year.

They are letterman Johnny Grinnell, 6 foot 3 inch 200-pounder, who played defensive center last year, and Dick Smith, 185-pound White Plains, N. Y., native, who played for Patuxent and Anacostia Navy teams in 1946 and '47.

To get depth at the snapback post, Rowland has dipped into the backfield, his strongest department, and pulled out Joe Famulette, a willing 190-pounder. From the guards, he plucked Talbot Dredge, a 205-pound Idaho cowboy.

The two convertees have taken to their new jobs with such alacrity and skill that Bo is undecided on which of the four candidates to start against Wake Forest.

While the crowded center is a happier one for Rowland, it's trying for Grinnell, who has had his sights on a regular position since his high school days.

When Johnny went out for the Washington-Lee High of Arlington team, he tried, without success, to beat out Druckenmiller, the All-Virginia selection.

Grinnell thought he'd get his regular job when he graduated to G. W., but to his dismay, Druckenmiller chose the same school. Johnny finally got a break last year when Coach Skip Stahley used him whenever G. W. was on defense.

When Druckenmiller suffered a severe head injury against Miami and quit the game at doctor's orders, Grinnell thought he had a clear shot at the center job.

However, the fine showings of Smith, Dredge and Famulette are giving the Arlington boy a lot of competition.

Title Won By Gray Lark

Before a crowd of approximately 4500 people Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Hallman's Graylark annexed the Hunter Tricolor with 10½ points at the nineteenth annual horse show of the Montgomery County Horse Show Association on the farm of T. A. (Lex) Barnsley, Olney, Md.

Reserve Hunter Champion, with 7½ points, was Joe Burrows' Sportsman, ridden by Carroll Curran.

Highlighting the morning events was the pinning of Frank Palmer's percheron stallion Brillitude as heavy champion of the show.

Other notable wins were scored by William Page's Nowin's Little Eva and Edward D. Talbert, jr.'s, Mag of Valhalla.

Bobby Out To Make It 3 Straight

Billy Griffin, the 22-year-old golfing pride of Prince Georges Country Club and George Washington University, yesterday answered the riddle of who would oppose Bobby Brownell today in the finals of the District Amateur.

Griffin fought his way past Jim Gardner, 4 and 3, in the morning and followed with a 1-up victory over Don Miller at the Columbia Country Club.

Bobby Brownell was waiting for him in the final round, after victories over Howard Nordlinger, 4 and 3, and Bob Morris, 3 and 2.

Brownell, looking for his third straight District title, will face Griffin this morning at 9:30 and again at 1:30 p. m. in the 36-hole final match at Columbia.

Don Miller, who had had an easy quarterfinal round in whipping Parker Nolan, 8 and 7, started chasing Griffin at the very first green in their semifinal. Miller caught up once on the eighth hole after going two down on the fifth, but never did pull ahead.

Griffin went one up at the turn, but Miller again caught him on the tenth. Bogies on the eleventh and thirteenth put Miller on the debit side again. He closed the gap slightly by taking the sixteenth but ran out of holes before he could catch Billy a third time.

Morris, despite the distracting effect of stymies on the third and ninth holes, held his own against Brownell until the twelfth, where Bobby began to put the heat on. Brownell added the thirteenth on a birdie, and Morris put himself three down on the fourteenth by taking three putts. They halved the fifteenth and sixteenth and Brownell was once more a District amateur finalist.

Earlier in the day, Morris had bounced Billie Shea from the quarterfinals, one up.

Jet Motors Loses, 8-5

Harrisburg, Sept. 11 (AP).—The hard-hitting American Legion ball players from Union City, N. J., turned aside the Jet Motor Sales Corp. of Washington, D. C., today, 8 to 5, in the annual All-American Amateur Baseball Tournament.

The Jersey players bunched most of their hits in the last of the fifth, when Myles was driven from the hill and Smith, relief flinger, failed to find the plate and walked four men in a row.

The Washington club was off to a good start with three runs in the second inning, but after that Lynn settled down and held the Jet boys in check until the seventh.

Plumbers, Body Works Will Resume Title Series Today

The City Unlimited League championship series ends today with Merchandising Plumbers needing a double victory over Northeast Body Works to win the crown.

Anything less for the Plumbers will give the title to the Body Works, whom they meet in the first game at 1 p. m. on the South Ellipse.

It's the windup of a two-out-of-three series which began last Sunday with a 4-1 Body Works victory.

Paul Schaefer, versatile left-handed pitcher, will be on the mound for the Body Works. He'll be opposed by either Warren Webb or Harry O'Neill.

Schaefer pitched a neat four-hitter last week, and helped with his own game with a double.

Fairfax entertains Forestville at 3 p. m. in the second game of their two-out-of-three Fairfax County championship series.

Fairfax won last week, 14-2, and can clinch the title by winning again today. If Forestville can make a comeback today, the deciding game will be played next Sunday at Fairfax.

Potomac and Colesville meet in a crucial Montgomery County League game at 3:30 p. m. at Potomac.

Potomac, with a 15-2 record, can clinch the $150 first place prize money by winning. Colesville, in second place with 13-3, still has a chance for first money.

The two clubs have split in two previous meetings. Bob Love, who lost a 16-inning heartbreaker last Sunday to Bethesda, will be on the mound for Colesville. He'll be opposed by Lefty Joe Wells, former Georgetown star.

Part of Regatta

Canadian and Olympic Stars Row Today in Canoe Events

The canoeing phase of the President's Cup Regatta will be unfolded today, starting at 1 p. m., on the Potomac River between Lincoln Memorial Bridge and Fourteenth Street Highway Bridge, with no less than 30 Canadian paddlers listed for competition against the Americans, many of whom participated in the recent Olympics in London.

General Chairman Bill Rogers is hopeful of having approximately 100 starters, with the Canadians to represent the Balmy Beach Canoe Club of Toronto and the Island Canoe Club of Montreal.

Also on hand will be five of the District stars who did themselves proud in the Olympics. Tom Horton, Johnny Eisman, jr., and Ken Clark of Potomac Boat Club; Bill Havens, jr., his brother, Frank, both of Washington Canoe Club, will be the Washington aces.

Bill Havens was fifth in the 1000-meter single blade race and Brother Frank was second in the 10,000-meter Olympic single blades. Bill recently won the national canoe tilting championship for the tenth straight year at Sebago, N. Y.

Two more Olympic satellites will be on hand in the persons of Steve Lysak and Steve Macknowski, both from the Yonkers (N. Y.) Canoe Club. They won the tandem single blade Olympic championship.

No President's Cup Regatta would be complete without the unbeatable American National double blade champion, Ernie Riedel, and his teammates from the Pendleton (N. Y.) Canoe Club. Winning the regatta title seems to be a habit with Riedel and he is favored today.

Also entered are Dempsey's Canoe Club of Washington, with several members fresh from mashing triumphs in the Nationals at Sebago, Philadelphia Canoe Club; Nite Owl Canoe Club of Dedham, Mass.; Samoset (Mass.) Canoe Club, and Inwood Club of New York.

The new course of a mile along the seawall will offer points of vantage for some 25,000 spectators. Order of events will be one-man single blade, tandem double blade, quad single blade, one-man double blade, tandem single blade, quad double blade and tilt.

crossing Maryland's goal-line on five distinct occasions.

As a matter of fact, Coach Rube McCray was so elated over the offensive strength of his Indians he admitted they looked "good in spots."

McCray had ample reason to feel good. Jack Cloud, prominetly mentioned on All-American teams as a soph last season, showed no ill effects of a knee operation.

The chunky 210-pounder sliced off tackle on one occasion and went 65 yards for one of those scores that didn't count; he tallied again on an 8-yard pass from Tommy Korczowski.

The boys from Williamsburg looked particularly spectacular on two successive plays in one of those six periods they battled through. Cloud passed to End Vito Ragazzo who lateraled to Back Henry Blanc for an over-all gain of 25 yards. Then Korczowski broke loose for 46 yards to the four. On the next play the latter took it over.

That glue-fingered end, Ragazzo, took a 42-yard pass from Korczowski on the eight and sprinted across. Soph Ed Magdziak crossed Maryland's goal the other two times on short bucks.

A couple of the Terps looked good on defense, particularly Centers Jim Brasher and Jake Rowden.

After the scrimmage, Coach Jim Tatum dolefully admitted that his team "couldn't do a thing right."

Janney Wins, 2-0

Steve Carpman allowed only one hit as his Janney teammates beat Palisades, 2-0 in a D. C. Department of Recreation League game at the Palisades diamond.

Aussie Stars Dominate Regatta Swim

Two 19-year-old members of Australia's Olympic squad dominated last night's opening of the swimming program of the President's Cup Regatta at Indian Spring Country Club.

John Davies won the finals of the 200-yard breast-stroke by half the length of the pool over Mark Coughlin and Harold Levy. His Sydney teammate and neighbor, Bruce Bourke, qualified in both the 100-yard freestyle and 100-yard backstroke events.

Nine final events will be held when swimming is resumed at 8 o'clock tonight.

Bourke's time of :55.1 was the best in the freestyle and he was .1 of a second behind Brighton's Bill Clinton in the backstroke. Clinton negotiated the distance in 1:06.

Marie Corridon, Olympic swimmer from New York Swimming Association, turned in the best qualifying time in the women's 100-yard backstroke but was third in the freestyle race. Ambassador's Wilhelmina Orme turned in a 1:08.1 race and Dolores Kuss, Watchung Lake, N. J., was timed in 1:08.3. Miss Corriden's time was 1:10.6.

Hippensteil, Decker and Welsh Lose

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Washington's Charlotte Decker, Barney Welsh and Capt. Charles Hippensteil were turned back today as the national tennis championships got underway after a 24-hour enforced delay.

Miss Decker was defeated by Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., who was opening defense of her women's singles titles, 6—1, 6—1. Welsh lost to Indoor Champion Bill Talbert of New York, seeded second and bidding for his first national outdoor crown, 6—2, 6—1, 4—6, 6—1 while Hippensteil was beaten by Bruce Hunt, Danbury, Conn., 6—3, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3.

Jaroslav Drobny of Czechoslovakia, regarded as the main foreign threat to the crown given up by Jack Kramer, looked the part in smashing Tony Vincent of New York City, a student at the University of Miami, 6—1, 6—1, 6—0.

Parker, Mulloy Win

Frankie Parker of Los Angeles, the top-seeded favorite, drew a first-round bye, as did also Gardnar Mulloy of Miami, and Bob Falkenburg of Los Angeles, seeded third and fourth, respectively.

In perhaps the day's most closely fought duel before 5000 fans in the stadium, Earl Cochell of San Francisco employed a killing service to eliminate a fellow townsman, Ed Moylan, 6—4, 6—3, 4—6, 6—2. Moylan never solved Cochell's bullets.

eventh seeded Victor Seixas of Philadelphia toyed with Ed McGrath of New York City, 6—2, 6—3, 6—1, and Tom Brown, jr., of San Francisco, who was a finalist against Kramer two years ago, outslugged Jim Brink, tall southpaw from Seattle, 6—3, 6—8, 6—3, 6—2.

Parker is scheduled to open up tomorrow against Gilbert Bogley of Chevy Chase, Md. Adrian Quist of Australia, the top-seeded foreigner who had his wings clipped very close in the Davis Cup matches last weekend, meets the veteran Frank Shields of New York for a starter.

Doris Hart Draws Bye

Of the top women stars, only Doris Hart of Miami sat it out.

Mrs. Margaret Osborne DuPont of Wilmington, Del., a former champion now seeded third, ousted Nina Irwin of New York, 6—2, 6—3.

Mrs. Patricia Canning Todd of La Jolla, Calif., who rounds out the "big four" of the women's game, chased Sylvia Knowles of Newport, R. I., 6—1, 6—0.

Shirley Fry of Akron, Ohio, turned back Elaine Lewicki of Hamtramck, Mich., 6—1, 6—2, and Beverly Baker of Los Angeles beat Mary Lou Beyer of Detroit, 6—0, 6—1. Gertrude Moran of Los Angeles, seeded seventh, drew a bye. Mme. Magda Rurac of Romania, the first seeded foreign woman, had a struggle before she defeated Lois Felix of Meriden, Conn., 6—4, 4—6, 6—2.

Louis Drills Here Friday

World's Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis will workout before press and radio representatives at the Liberty Athletic Club's gymnasium Friday at 2 p. m. while tuning up for his six-round exhibition with Pat Comiskey, headlining the Liberty Athletic Club's all-star boxing show at Griffith Stadium a week from tomorrow night, September 20.

Comiskey, the 6-foot 3-inch, 212-pound redhead from Paterson, N. J., reports here Thursday and will begin daily drills.

Harry Mendel, advance man for Louis who checks in here tomorrow, emphasizes that the champion is eager to prove his physical fitness and is arranging this workout in an effort to do so.

"We would like to open Louis' workout to the public, but we don't have the space," Promoter Goldie Ahearn declared last night. "However, Joe is coming in early to show that he means business."

Louis has agreed to address the National Boxing Association's annual banquet in Philadelphia Tuesday night.

VFW Finale

All-American Post, VFW, closes its baseball season today with an exhibition against Mayo Beach, of the Maryland Shore League, 3 p. m. at Mayo Beach.

SKINS—From Pg. 1-C

Green Bay Runs Over 'Skins, 43-0

throwing two sucker touchdown passes.

Others with a hand in Packer scoring were Ted Cook, Alabama end; Ed Cody, Tulane fullback; Clyde Goodnight, Tulsa end; Ken Roskie, rookie fullback from South Carolina, and the veteran Fritsch.

Points for Fritsch

Fritsch collected the first of his 11 points in the first quarter after the Packers had romped 72 yards with the opening kickoff and Jacobs had covered the last eight yards with a pass to Cook for touchdown No. 1.

Fritsch, a native Wisconsin lad starting his sixth year with the Packers, added another conversion after Cody's 1-yard touchdown drive in the second quarter, then booted a 31-yard field goal. Jacobs made it 23-0 at halftime on a brilliant 55-yard scoring pass with Goodnight on the receiving end.

Fritsch completed his point-making in the third stanza with two more field goals from 41 and 42 yards.

Cody got his second touchdown on a 3-yard plunge after a 71-yard drive in the final quarter, then kicked the extra point.

In the waning seconds, Roskie, on his second straight interception of passes by Tommy Mont, picked one out of the air and raced 12 yards into the end zone. Cody brought his total points to 14 with another placement.

Washington, meanwhile, was making only one serious threat. The 'Skins reached the Packer 12 in the first period, but there Baugh's fourth-down pass to Hugh Taylor was dropped in the end zone. A field goal effort by Dick Poillon was wide and the 'Skins were no threat from therein.

It was the first time since 1946, when the New York Giants hung a 31-0 beating on them, that the Redskins had gone scoreless.

NBA Cracks Down On Punchy Boxers

The National Boxing Association apparently really meant it when it said it planned to clamp down on wornout boxers who should quit the sport.

For Harvey L. Miller, executive secretary of NBA, in his annual report today gave this breakdown on increased business in his organization:

	1948	1947
Boxers suspended	448	150
Boxers reinstated	47	76
Boxers retired	278	26

Miller prepared his report for the twentieth annual NBA Convention which opens in Philadelphia tomorrow.

The statistics cover the year ended September 8.

Charles-Bivins Fight Focuses Fistic Spotlight on D. C.

Despite Waivers

'Skins' Will Keep Todd, Now Injured

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 11.—That hasty rush of sympathy for Dick Todd, 34-year-old halfback on whom the Washington Redskins asked waivers after he suffered a concussion in the Denver exhibition game, may just as hastily be tucked away.

Todd was not being "tossed over the side as being too old and too injured to be of any further use." Such waivers are now the National Football League clubowners' device for keeping an injured player and still observing the 35-player limit . . . There is no more reserve list . . . Other owners are expected to observe such waivers.

RED DREW, coach of Alabama's Crimson Tide, is going on a limb in predicting the next Southeastern Conference champion . . . Others agree it'll be Georgia Tech, but Drew is sticking to his guns on Georgia . . . Hollywood is starting work on a movie about the Green Bay Packers whose coach, Curly Lambeau, is one of the most photogenic gents in the football business . . . Script trouble is said to be holding up the "Hail to the Redskins" movie, which at first put Washington fans in a bad light and contained such technicalities as the identification of the great race horse, Sun Briar, as a filly.

HARRY GILMER may be Birmingham's current football favorite, but Don Hutson and "Bo" Russell are still famous in these parts . . . There's a rumor circulating that Bob Waterfield, Los Angeles' brilliant passer who is married to Movie Star Jane Russell, is about to retire to a job with an oil company . . . The strongest man in football, according to the Green Bay management, is Guard Bill Neal, a 290-pounder from Tulane. He is one of the few remaining old-time blacksmiths during the off-season.

WHEN THE Marshall Plan was first mentioned in Colorado, a nice old lady is quoted as asking: "Now what's Everett up to?" She referred to Everett Marshall, the veteran wrestling champion who appeared many times in Washington. He's quite a civic leader in the Rockies nowadays, centering most of his attention on boys clubs.

Steve Bagarus, whose broken leg is not quite healed, has asked the Redskins to buy him back from the Los Angeles Rams . . . Sammy Baugh never won the "most valuable player" award of the National Football League during the nine years it was presented from 1938 through 1946. BILL BURNETT.

ninth with a triple. However, Jansen fanned Pete Reiser, forced Bruce Edwards to raise an easy pop foul to Mize and got Pee Wee Reese to ground out.

The Dodgers opened up a 2-0 lead against Andy Hansen in the first inning of the second game. They added another off Dave Koslo in the third to take a 3-0 advantage. The Giants got two of those back in the fifth when McCarthy cracked a pinch hit homer with one on. Robinson's third hit, and Don Mueller's muff of a fly ball gave the Brooks their fourth run off Ken Trinkle in the top of the sixth.

Monday Bout May Draw $75,000 Gate

As Ezzard Charles and Jimmy Bivins put in their last training licks yesterday, the fight crowd decided that Monday night's heavyweight fight at Griffith Stadium has put Washington on the spot.

The Charles-Bivins scrap unquestionably is the best fight that has come Washington's way in a long, long time. Charles and Bivins are recognized as the two best heavies in the business today.

The winner of Monday's fight will be in a position to succeed Joe Louis to the title when he formally declares the championship vacant.

This leads to the inescapable conclusion that anything less than a whopping turnout for the Charles-Bivins bout will be a disappointment and knock Washington down as a top-bracket fight town.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez's latest prediction yesterday was that the fight will attract a gross gate upwards of $75,000 . . . that it may reach $100,000.

A result of such proportions would be highly satisfactory and place Washington in a strategic position to bring the winner of the Charles-Bivins fight back for a possible title show this fall.

After watching Charles and Bivins wham sparring partners around yesterday, followers of both camps were sure of one thing—that the fight will end in a knockout.

Charles, No. 1 pretender to Louis' title, has won more than half of his 60-odd bouts by knockouts. Bivins has 23 kayoes to his credit.

Between them, they have whipped almost every heavyweight worthy of the name engaged in the fight ring today.

Odds of 9-5 on Charles

Charles is expected to be a 9-5 favorite at bell time. He will come in at 178 pounds to 181 for Bivins.

The largest press corps to cover a fight here since Louis knocked out Buddy Baer will be on hand. Vitally interested spectators will include Sol Straus and Nat Roberts, representing Mike Jacobs' Twentieth Century Club; Andy Neidereitter, promoter for Tournament of Champions; Herman Taylor, well known Philadelphia promoter; Felix Bocchicchio, Jersey Joe Walcott's manager; Babe Culnan, American representative for Light Heavyweight Champion Freddie Mills, and Nat Fleisher, editor of Ring Magazine.

Supporting card: Six-rounders—Jimmy Cooper (Washington) vs. Johnny Longo (Baltimore), Johnny Hansbury (Washington) vs. Sonny Boy Bunn (Washington); Bob Amos (Cleveland) vs. Floyd Gibson (Cincinnati), and Bob Eisler (New York) vs. Al Smith (New York).

Four-rounders—Holly Sanders (Trenton) vs. Garland Edwards (Washington), and Jackie Ford (Washington) vs. Roscoe Mercer (Washington).

Turner's Arena box office will remain open today to accommodate fans who wish to purchase tickets. Seats for the bout, which will aid the Variety Club Welfare Fund, are priced at $3.00, $5.00, $7.00 and $10.00.

field flies provided them with their final scores.

The Nats had Reynolds on the ropes in the fifth, but they couldn't deliver the haymaker which would have disposed of him. The locals had the bases filled with only one away, but all they got out of it was one run.

The Nats flubbed another opportunity in the seventh when they again filled the bases with one out, but managed to squeeze only one run out of the situation.

Pinch - Hitter Tom McBride cooled off the rally by taking a third strike and Gil Coan put the final chill on the abortive revolt by striking out.

Before Coan encountered the displeasure of the audience by fanning, Kozar had driven Christman in with the only run of the inning.

Christman scored for the first time in the third on a lead-off single, another single by Thompson and Yost's fly to Lindell. The Nat shortstop crossed for the second time in the fifth, a single, a walk, an infield out and a second Yost fly doing the trick.

IN SHORT—It took five Nats to eliminate Rizzuto in a rundown between first and second in the third inning. . . . DiMaggio has hit a home run at Griffith Stadium in every Yankee series here this year except the first back in April. . . . Larry Drake, rookie outfielder, and Jim Clark, rookie infielder, have been sold outright by the Nats to their Chattanooga Farm Club.

Two Detroit Lefties Win From Chisox

Detroit, Sept. 11 (AP).—Supporting a pair of little southpaws with a dozen hits in each game, the Detroit Tigers slapped the lowly Chicago White Sox twice today, 4 to 1 and 6 to 4. Ted Gray and Stubby Overmire took credit for the wins.

Gray allowed only six hits, taking his fifth straight victory in the opener and Overmire yielded just three blows in the last six innings of the nightcap, taking credit for the victory after relieving Billy Pierce in the fourth.

Vic Wertz's three-run 380-foot homer off Al Gettel in the fifth inning broke a 1-all tie to settle the opener and the Tigers bunched five hits for four runs in the third inning of the nightcap to hang the defeat on Starter Frank Papish.

Filly Beats Harmonica, Gallorette

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Conniver staked a powerful claim for 1948 divisional honors among the turf's "weaker sex" today when she rounded down the Aqueduct stretch in a blazing finish to capture the $68,300 Beldame Handicap.

Almost lost in the large 14-horse field during the early running of the 1⅛-mile event, the favored 4-year-old brown filly battled into contention in the final bend. She caught Harmonica in the run for home, and bounced under the wire three lengths on top to grab the $49,700 winner's share for her owner, Harry La Montagne of Oyster Bay, L. I.

The second choice, Mrs. Marie A. Moore's Gallorette, came from nowhere in the stretch to take third place, a bare half length in arrears of Harmonica, owned by Arnold Hanger.

Conniver, in winning her richest stake, traveled the route over a track called sloppy early in the day but "good" at race time in 1:52 2/5. Her backers in the Aqueduct closing-day crowd of 31,282 were rewarded with $6.70, $3.80 and $2.90.

This was Conniver's first start since July 31 when she ran second to Beauchef in the Merchants and Citizens Handicap at Jamaica.

Prior to that, the Maryland-bred daughter of Discovery had knocked off Gallorette and Stymie in the rich Brooklyn Handicap, and had defeated Harmonica for top swag in the Vagrancy Handicap, both at Aqueduct. Her Brooklyn winnings were only $39,300, so this was by far her biggest one-day bankroll.

Harmonica held a half-length advantage in the furious run for the wire after they straightened away, but Jockey Doug Dodson called on Conniver just inside the last furlong, and she romped home to win easily.

Rough Cloud Scores Again

Timonium, Md., Sept. 11.—J. Yancy Christmas of Upper Marlboro, Md., provided the winner of the Albert G. Weston Purse here today as Rough Cloud, a $3.80 choice, won the feature of the final day's program.

In order to account for her sixth triumph of the year, Rough Cloud had to first put away Country Dude and then withstand a stretch bid from Margaret E.

With the closing of this 10-day session, the sport shifts next week to Belair for the final 10 day period of sports for this year's half-mile season.

Apprentice Carl Meyerhoffer guided Rough Cloud. He got the mare away well, hustled her forwardly in order to catch Country Dude, who was essaying a front-running stint, and gradually drew clear of the latter. But after that was done, Rough Cloud had to battle it out with Margaret E., who rushed up from the outside on entering the stretch.

3 Longshots Score In Speed 'Cap

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP).—Billings, 3-year-old colt belonging to R. W. McIlvain, Chicago oilman, earned a neck victory at 16-to-1 odds in the $24,700 speed handicap at Hawthorne today.

Helen S. Reineman's recent purchase, Carrara Marble, defeated Mrs. Emil Denemark's Bullish by half a length for second place. Carrara Marble, part of a four-horse field among the 17 starters, was 12 to 1 and Bullish was 17 to 1.

Billings paid $35 to win, $19.40 to place and $12.40 to show. Carrara Marble returned $9.40 and $5.40 and Bullish $11.20.

Steve Van Buren Weds; Plays Against Cards

Philadelphia, Sept. 11 (AP).—Steve Van Buren, star back of the Philadelphia Eagles National Football League team, and Grace Hewson of Philadelphia, were married today. Van Buren started his honeymoon tonight by playing with the Eagles against the Champion Chicago Cardinals in the eleventh annual Inquirer Charities, Inc., exhibition game.

Giant Rookie Ill

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Joe Lafata, utility first basemen and outfielder whom the New York Giants recently recalled from Minneapolis, was taken to the Medical Center today suffering from an internal hemmorhage.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

"The Country's Getting Caught Up"

The mood of the moment is dour. Tension in Berlin and another cabinet crisis in France put a crimp in what started out as a cheery post-Labor-Day stock market. At the same time the Government here pursued its lukewarm war against inflation. The Federal Reserve Board hiked reserve requirements of member banks. The effect was more psychological than real. But nonetheless, there it was—a wet towel on speculative ardor.

Livingston

The saying among business men these days is: "The country's getting caught up." Thus, ample supplies of fuel oil for industrial use are expected this winter—in contrast to last year. Some soft coal companies are cuttin, work schedules. The largest cotton crop in 11 years—15,200,000 bales—is forecast, topping by 3,500,000 bales indicated domestic and export demand. And wheat exports and prices are expected by the Department of Agriculture to decline.

Elbowroom at Last

True, steel is still short. Manufacturers of industrial equipment, autos, television sets, refrigerators still say, "Give us more steel, and we'll get out more goods." But the rush for furniture and many electrical appliances has subsided. August sales of furs were 15 per cent below last year. Cigar production is down 2 per cent from '47.

We're getting back to an elbowroom—a free—economy. The seller is no longer an absolute dictator. Prices are moving two ways. Union Carbide and Carbon lifted quotations on ferro-alloys; International Harvester on tractors, farm implements and industrial products. But General Electric lowered prices on sun lamps, and AA butter is off about 18½ cents from its record high of 93 cents last December.

The approach of "easier living"—being able to shop around, to bargain, to buy when you want to—revives in sellers' minds memories of the 1937-38 collapse or of 1920-21 or, among the more jittery, of 1929-33. But it's no signal of industrial collapse.

A hard core of basic business remains. Housing is still in demand. Many companies have not completed postwar plans for plant expansion or installations of equipment. Business men who put off buying capital equipment when prices rose will be back in the market if prices recede. They missed their market—they didn't get in soon enough. They won't want to miss it again. The point is that postwar machinery and postwar techniques save sufficient money in business operations to compel new installations even if production slips.

The postwar boom is not all inflation. People are spending money on an unprecedented scale. Living standards are well above prewar. And will continue so. Department store sales are an excellent indication of what has happened. Prices are up 100 per cent over '39, but sales are up 180 per cent (see chart). Moreover, the tendency for sales to increase over the preceding year persists. Thus, for the four weeks ended September 4, sales were 8 per cent ahead of 1947—that in spite of unusually hot weather in late August.

Applied Psychology

The Federal Reserve Board's hike in reserve requirements comes under the head of "psychological warfare." Bankers will have to sell about two billion dollars of Government securities to replenish reserves. Normally, this might serve as a credit curb. Bank earnings would drop. Banks would raise interest rates. Customers might balk at higher rates. At the same time, because reserves were pinched, banks would hesitate to make new loans.

However, interest rates are low to begin with. Customers, who see profits ahead, won't quibble over a quarter or half of one per cent. And the banks have more than 50 billions of Government securities which they can sell to increase reserves. So, as a credit curb, the reserve boost is more form than substance.

The action of the Reserve Board, incidentally, is itself a commentary on the business outlook. Apparently, the board feels that inflationary tendencies—not deflationary—are still ascendant in the United States economy.

War preparations are an underlying source of support to business. Persistent diplomatic difficulties with Russia suggest that the United States will rearm, regardless of whether Dewey or Truman is elected. That implies continued insertions of Government money into the business and income stream; also continued withdrawal of manpower and materials from the civilian economy.

It's significant that Secretary of the Treasury Snyder has just said that the Government will not be able to cut its debt in the next ten months. Yet debt reduction—an excess of Treasury receipts over expenditures—is the best inflation antidote.

APRA Plans Wider Scope Of Activities

By S. Oliver Goodman

An expanded program of activities for the American Public Relations Association and promotion of Miss Birtie A. Johnson as assistant to the president were announced at a luncheon meeting Friday of the APRA executive committee in the Carlton Hotel.

Miss Johnson

Miss Johnson, formerly secretary of the association, will figure prominently in the new program. Leonard W. Trester, APRA president, said yesterday the program aims at enlarging the scope of the national headquarters in Washington to function as a clearing house for information on the major fields of corporate public relations.

"I believe," President Trester said, "that since good public relations is now generally recognized as being one of the major forces which binds together the American people and those of like mind in other lands, there is a real demand for a comprehensive program of this type . . ."

Trester added that a series of regional conferences will be held, taking as their theme such topics as Public Relations Problems in the Retail Trade, Government Relations at the Community Level, The Importance of Community Relations to the Motion Picture Industry and similar subjects having a wide general appeal.

The APRA now has more than 500 members throughout the country, with the Washington Forge of more than 150 its one largest.

Accountants Baffled by 'True Profits'

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—How to present a "true picture of business profits during inflation" has many experts stumped, according to a survey released by the American Institute of Accountants.

Polling business executives, economists, investment analysts, Government officials, labor leaders, bankers and financiers, the institute found:

1. A majority opposed changing the present methods of reporting income in current dollars and using instead "real economic value of the dollar." This would change figures for plant and equipment from their actual cost to their replacement cost.

2. But a majority also contended that the orthodox financial statements should be supplemented with an explanation of the necessity for retaining part of the income to meet higher costs.

Institute President George D. Bailey said the survey showed "practically everyone who deals with financial statements is seriously concerned about the problem of presenting accurate figures on corporate profits when corporate income is inflated by rising prices."

Of 204 replying to the questionnaire, 46 favored changing accounting methods "to provide satisfactory reporting of corporate income in view of recent changes in price levels." But 41 per cent of those who opposed a basic change in accounting methods said that some supplementary information should be given.

Bailey concluded "it is obvious that there must be much more extensive discussion before we can reach a final solution which everyone will be willing to accept."

Producers Foresee Good Coal Market

Pittsburgh, Sept. 11 (AP).—Old King Coal gets as many black looks as he gives black hands but he's still tops in the fuel picture.

Despite growing use of oil and natural gas as substitutes, coal men say 1948 looks their best peace-time year yet.

The mounting cost of coal, due in large part to more pay in miners' pockets, plus shortages brought on by past strikes have drawn censure—but demand still runs ahead of supply.

Last year's total bituminous production of 619 million tons was the best of any peacetime year but that mark may be shattered this year, despite a loss of some 53,400,000 tons in the soft coal miners' pension shutdown earlier this year.

Although oil and gas have given growing competition, demand for coal has increased too. The soft coal industry also kept in the race by developing more efficient ways of digging coal with mechanical devices.

Miners' production rose from four net tons per day per man in 1920 in the bituminous fields to 6.14 net tons last year. Wages have risen from an average of $23.88 a week in 1939 to $73.64 this year.

At present, a severe railroad car shortage is the biggest obstacle to top production. Some mines were reported close to the wall for lack of shipping facilities. Many others, less handicapped, reported inability to ship has forced operators to curtail work schedules here and there. In addition, a downward revising of exports was having an effect.

Texans Fear Depletion Soon In Natural Gas

Dallas, Sept. 11 (AP).—Easterners who give thanks for the natural gas that cooks their meals and fuels their factories may be surprised to hear that many Texans will not say "you're welcome."

Those Texans are afraid that the day is not too far off when the State will run out of gas for their home use.

Nearly half—45 per cent—of the natural gas used in the United States now comes from Texas wells. A spider web of huge pipelines carries it to the Eastern Seaboard and the Great Lakes region. Another big line is reaching for the Pacific Coast.

The "Big Inch" and "Little Big Inch" pipelines, built under war pressure to assure the East an oil supply when German submarines were preying on tankers, are now carrying gas. Within the last few days the Gulf-Coast Northern Gas Co. of Tulsa, asked a Federal permit to build an 1184-mile, 26-inch line to carry gas from Texas to the Chicago area.

Where oil men talk in millions and governments talk in billions, gas men talk in terms of trillions. (One million million.) They are talking not of dollars, but of cubic feet of gas. Texas produced nearly three trillion cubic feet of gas last year. It piped out of the State 525 billion cubic feet.

One of the most outspoken opponents of increasing exports of gas to other States is Olin Culberson, member of the Texas Railroad Commission. That body rules on the amounts of oil and gas that may be produced daily in the State's fields.

Culberson said in New York last week that the life expectancy of his State's gas reserves, set at 43 years by "most optimistic" estimates, has been materially reduced through the building of new pipelines and the continued granting of permits by the Federal Power Commission. He issued a statement at the close of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission meeting, which he attended.

Irregular Gains In Commodities

Commodities were irregularly higher yesterday. Cotton closed steady to strong with final prices unchanged to 60 cents a bale higher.

Buying by shorts in September corn pushed that option higher but new crop deliveries declined. Wheat was generally steady and trading in flour was more active. Oats were slightly lower. Soybeans and lard spurted.

Hogs and cattle were nominally steady in Chicago.

Lumber Shipments

Lumber shipments of 386 mills reporting to the National Lumber Trade Barometer were 6.1 per cent below production for the week ending September 4. In the same week new orders of these same mills were 14.4 per cent below production. Unfilled order files of the reporting mills amount to 49 per cent of stocks.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP).—The shorts in September corn went right on buying at rising prices today, taking only a casual look at an Agriculture Department forecast of a record-breaking crop this autumn. It won't help the September shorts, who need corn now.

While the September contract ended with gains of more than 2 cents, the new crop months dropped fractionally. There was not much selling on the crop report, which was hardly news to traders. But it was hard to find buyers with a 3½ billion crop coming up.

Wheat did well. A milling concern took a fair quantity of the grain, presumably removing hedges against sales of flour to the domestic trade. Flour business was said to have increased sightly. Oats were mostly a little lower while soybeans and lard spurted.

At the close wheat was ⅝ to 2⅛ higher, September 2.23; corn was ⅛ lower to 2¼ higher, September 1.72¼@1.72½; oats were ⅝ lower to ⅛ higher, September 72; rye was ½ higher, December 1.55½, and soybeans were 5½ to 7 cents higher, November 2.59½@2.60.

Soybeans continued their rally. Eastern demand helped lard, which ended 25 to 60 cents a hundred pounds higher, September 19.85.

WANTED MEN WHO CAN MAKE DECISIONS

A Message from The WALL STREET JOURNAL

During the next 5 years, the men who get ahead in business will be those who have the ability to make decisions. And your ability to make decisions is based on your knowledge of business conditions. For example: How will current trends in consumer buying affect your business? What are the latest price trends of raw materials? What is going on behind the scenes in Washington? In New York? In London? What new inventions are creating new ways to make money?

Every day you can get answers to questions like these in the pages of The Wall Street Journal. The Journal keeps you informed on every major new development relating to Prices, Taxes, Inventories, Industries, Production Trends, Commodities, Securities, Marketing, Consumer Buying, World Trade and New Legislation. You get the facts in time to protect your interests or to seize quickly a new profit-making opportunity. Business today is not a guessing game or a "yessing" game. You've got to KNOW. And the men who know, will make money during the next 5 years.

The Wall Street Journal is the complete business DAILY. Has largest staff of writers on business and finance. The only business paper served by all four big press associations. It costs $20 a year, but you can get a Trial Subscription for 3 months for $6 (in U.S. and Possessions). Just tear out this ad and attach check for $6 and mail. Or tell us to bill you. Hollywood: From Slacks To Ermine

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

HOLLYWOOD, SEPT. 11.—After a bewildering Hollywood sojourn, pleasurable oddments pop to the surface of an exhausted mind.

THINGS AMUSING: Greta Garbo indulging in a moderately expensive gown, striking the fitter pink when outer garments were shed, revealing the beautiful Swede's glamorous undies—utilitarian gents shorts; learning what Hedda Hopper looks like below her hats—very nice indeed, tall, blonde, longlegged; reading Romanoff's roundup, printed on inner fold of Mike's menus; also the menu cover, a photograph of the hard-working successful phoney dolled in torn shirt, windbreaker, handkerchief, instead of collar, topped by a jewelled crown, beringed fingers; grasping a gold scepter and seated on a curlicue throne.

George Jessel's daisy dining-out costume, bright red dickey, ditto visored velveteen jacket; the muscular young guys in tights and padded hip length shirts lunching in the Paramount commissary between shooting of "The Mask of Lucrece."

THINGIMEBOBS UTTERLY RIDICULOUS: Banner flaunted in the Biltmore Hotel lobby "Welcome Members of Hoo Hoo;" the small yellow truck printed with the macabre sign "Driven by a Blind Man," which proved merely a repairman for Venetian blinds; the doctor's signs boasting "We Kill Every Patient"—the patients we discovered were termites; "A Little Alibi"—a small but nifty hashery owned by a Little of New York with an over-counter acquarium filled with plum white "Kissing Fish;" the hapless MGM employee who spent a week of evenings corraling specially large night-roving ants for a Van Johnson picture and barely escaped jail because of his suspicious actions in digging on a vacant lot after dark.

GADGETS WE WOULDN'T MIND POSSESSING: Redheaded Mrs. Reginald Gardiner's mauve and white striped dinner dress; Irene Dunne's broderie anglaise ditto over a black taffeta slip; Mrs. Walter Pidgeon's pin—a bunch of fine gold stems, each topped with a very blue sapphire; Mrs. Errol Flynn's triangular white ermine tippet; Irene Castle's pale blue and black print dress; Sir Charles Mendl's Philipino chef.

Universal Director Cheever Cowdin's dining terrace, surrounded on two sides by high rocky cliffs, sprouting tropical vegetation plus a grottolike fishpond; Connie Bennett's tiny black velvet hats, modestly trimmed with aigrettes; Carlton Alsop's spear-shaped diamond studs which would make elegant earrings.

HOLLYWOOD FASHIONS: In the shop of Rex, once a John Frederic's henchman—velvet berets sprinkled with rhinestones accompanied by matching velvet stoles, each end turned into pockets or velvet fronted vests dotted with sparklers; nylon tulle gloves, shawls of coarse crocheted wool crusted with gold sequins;

Louella Parsons picked up a little ensemble of ermine scarf, a cone-shaped hat of crystal beads, rhinestones banded with ermine.

The most popular apparel for feminine hoi polloi is less gaudy—merely slacks topped with a beruffled peasant blouse.

THINGS ESPECIALLY APPEALING: The advertisement reading "Will walk dog or take mother-in-law to a picture."

The Uplifters Ranch, where California's Governor and Republican vice presidential nominee and Mrs. Earl Warren were vacationing—a dozen or more small cottages clustered around a big main house and all kept private to members;

Ethel Barrymore looking serenely happy sitting quietly after a dinner party; Joan Crawford namesake—14-year-old Joan Evans, who is to play a leading part in a picture about the Hatfield-McCoy feud; Mrs. Herbert Marshall's pert little face, her simple attractive clothes; the Victorian sets for "The Heiress," in which Miriam Hopkins will emote; the press agents' opinion of Bob Hope "absolutely

Girl, 17, Very Popular With Both Sexes And Always Praised as Perfect Lady, Is Swept Into Affair and Demoralized by It

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am an attractive girl, 17. I've always had many friends, both girls and boys. Several boys have been seriously interested in me; and after we stopped going together they told people that I was a lady from my head to my toes.

About a month ago I met Larry on a blind date. He is 19 and just home from the Navy. On our first date we started towards an affair. On our second date the affair was in full swing. It all seemed perfectly all right when I was with him, as he is very considerate and kind.

I love him very deeply and believe he is seriously interested in me; but even though this is the situation, I still go out with other boys. Larry lives about 35 miles from me and only comes over once or twice a week. The other boys don't suspect the affair and are just as considerate and gentlemanly as ever. I feel very cheap and deceitful.

One time we discussed a man who lived with a woman for about a year and Larry said he didn't see why the man didn't marry her. Should I break with Larry or wait and see if he may want to marry me? I feel terribly about the whole thing and have spells of despondency and crying. My family and Larry don't suspect this. I will follow any advice you give; and please advise me soon, before it's too late. R. S.

As a Minor, Girl Needs Family Help

DEAR R. S.: I have discussed your appeal with a seasoned psychologist, long accustomed to dealing at firsthand with emotional storms that sweep individuals off their course.

He says your prime need at this time is to pour out your distress to some kindly, trustworthy older person in your family circle, your mother, preferably, provided you don't fear her "judgments;" or, as next alternatives, an aunt or mature-age female cousin.

He carefully stresses the fact that you are a minor, therefore legally constrained to rely upon family, which is to say parents or their appropriate "delegates," for confidential counsel and leadership that may vitally affect your life-experiences for better or worse; a consideration which, in turn, automatically inhibits responsible-minded outsiders from advising any procedure except recourse to natural guardians.

Break Nightmare Spell of Secrecy

THE SPECIALIST remarks that it's always a mistake to try to cope lonehanded or furtively with a major problem, especially if one is burdened with feelings of fear and guilt to boot. He explains that "talking things out" with another person of mature social sense is excellent therapy just in itself, which tends to ease panic and restore sane perspective; and beyond that, "two heads are better than one" in weighing any situation and deciding what's best to do about it.

Since knowing Larry, your personality has become the battleground of overwhelming conflict, with his influence warring against principles of behavior that your reason and conscience hold most dear; hence the spells of despondency and crying, which refer to critically demoralized nervous tension, worsened by efforts to wear a customary face in the throes of desperate crisis.

So, for advice, you can't afford to let things drift, waiting to see if Larry means marriage. To regain emotional equilibrium, and with it safe control of the situation, you must unburden the story to some wise good relative, and thus break the spell of nightmare secrecy that paralyzes your reasoning faculties now. M. H.

How do the candidates stand today? The Gallup Poll tells you, exclusively in The Washington Post loosening your skin!

MAKE THIS TEST!
You will be shocked to find out how loose your skin really is!

DO THIS! Sit before your mirror. Do exactly as the girl is doing in the picture above. If folds of skin roll up under your eyes, you have loose skin! This loose skin may easily wrinkle too soon causing you to look much older than you really are!

Millions are actually loosening delicate skin tissues around their eyes in the very act of creaming their skins.

But this old way of skin care is rapidly being discarded. Well informed women are adopting modern skin care that ends destructive rubbing.

My Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting. No more need for rubbing at all. Think what this means!

When you use my cream that requires no rubbing, you are not loosening your skin—you are not deepening fine lines! In short, you stop helping your skin to grow loose and older looking. You help to preserve the tone, elasticity and smoothness your skin naturally possesses.

Clearer Skin, Too, The First Day

What's more, I can promise you a clearer skin the first day you stop rubbing dirt-laden cream back into tiny skin crevices and into pore mouths.

Here's why. The cleansing ingredient in Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting—it has the power to surround each tiny particle of stale make-up and grime and separate it from the skin. It literally lifts dirt away from your skin! No destructive rubbing is necessary—just smooth it on and tissue it off!

What to Expect

Your first trial will convince you that my 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting (no more rubbing) and that it makes your skin far cleaner than before, without rubbing.

So get any size jar—even the smallest size is ample to prove that you don't have to rub your skin any more to clean it.

And remember, this one cream does 4 things for your skin. Besides self-acting cleansing—it smooths!—it aids the natural pore-refining process!—and it makes a perfect powder base!

Gray Hair?

RE-COLOR it with Canute Water

A few applications of this delightful beauty aid will re-color your gray hair completely—similar to its former natural shade. In one day if you wish—gradually if you prefer. Then primp just once a month to keep it young looking. Canute Water is not like tints or rinses that wash off. Shampooing actually improves the rich, warm new color and leaves your hair fresh, clean and natural to the touch. You may even curl it or get a permanent, if you wish. Skin test NOT needed. Colorless and crystal-clear. Proved harmless at one of America's Greatest Universities. Thirty years without injury to a single user.

No Other Product Can Make All These Claims

Is it any wonder that leading dealers in most of America's largest cities sell more Canute Water than all other hair colorings combined? At drug stores everywhere.

Lanes Return to Annapolis Mansion

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 11.—This is the season of the year when everyone is returning to town, getting the children back to school, and busy with preparations for the gay autumn schedule. After spending two weeks, including the Labor Day weekend, in Ocean City, Md., Gov. and Mrs. William Preston Lane, jr., and their daughters, the Misses Dorothy and Jean Lane, returned to Annapolis on Tuesday and are again occupying Government House, better known locally as the Executive Mansion.

Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., and Mrs. Holloway are also back in Annapolis and are occupying the superintendent's quarters at the Naval Academy. They have had as guests Mrs. Holloway's sister-in-law, Mrs. Johnson Hagood, wife of Colonel Hagood, USA (ret.), and her daughter, Sue, of Caracas, Venezuela. The Holloway's daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Hayworth, who has spent much of the summer here with her parents, left this week with her infant son for Virginia Beach to join Lieutenant Hayworth. Admiral Holloway recently returned from a trip to Dallas, Tex., where he was a guest at the twenty-first annual convention of the Fleet Reserve Association.

The commandant of midshipmen at the Naval Academy, Capt. Frank T. Ward, and Mrs. Ward have returned to their quarters in Porter rd. after a few days' visit to Dr. and Mrs. Richard Sheppe in Wheeling, W. Va.

Miss Hopkins Bride

A pretty wedding was solemnized Saturday afternoon in the Naval Academy Chapel, when Miss Betty Hopkins, daughter of Mr and Mrs. J. Lloyd Hopkins of Annapolis, was married to Lieut. Ben A. Moore, jr., USMC. Among several parties given for the bride was a miscellaneous shower held August 31 by Mrs. R. D. Hopkins at her home.

Miss Elizabeth Langan of Akron, Ohio, niece of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Langan of Annapolis, and David Philip Green, son of Dr. Ethel Herrmann Green of Catonsville, Md., were married on September 9 in St. Mary's Church here. Dr. and Mrs. Paul Conway Langan, parents of the bride, arrived on Tuesday from Akron and remained over to attend various festivities in connection with their daughter's wedding. Mrs. George Zornow of Cleveland, whose marriage took place recently in that city, also was here to attend her sister's wedding.

Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. John T. Oleksy of Norfolk, Va., have announced the engagement of Mrs. Oleksy's sister, Miss Mary Alice Klein of Annapolis, to Edward Brownley Owens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Owens of Portsmouth, Va. The wedding will take place in December in St. Anne's Church, Annapolis.

Ensign and Mrs. A. M. Poteet, jr., are returning at the end of this week from a motor trip to Cleburne, Tex., where they spent two weeks as the guests of Ensign Poteet's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Poteet. Mrs. Poteet, before her recent marriage, was Miss Kitty Beall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Beall. Upon their return, Ensign Poteet will assume his duties as an instructor at the Naval Academy.

About Removing Stains

Will you please tell me how I can remove rust stains from a wool, knitted yellow sweater? The stains were produced by pins used to stretch the sweater while drying. M. C. S.

Use an iron soap to remove the stains. This soap can be purchased at some drug stores. Use according to the directions on the package.

How should I go about removing mildew from a leather brief case? V. G.

There really isn't too much which can be done to remove mildew from leather other than washing the article in mild soap and water. Should the mildew be removed by washing, then go over the billfold well with a good leather preservative. Since mildew is a fungus, it may have penetrated so that no surface preparation will remove it. In that case you may wish to cover the case with a plastic coating product which is made especially for leather and comes in a wide range of colors. For further information about this product, call District 1130.

We have received some very fine men's suits in perfect condition which we want to send to some people overseas. Although we have just had them dry cleaned, they have returned with the same strong underarm perspiration odor which was on them before they went to the cleaners. Even other pieces of clothing coming in contact with the suits take on this odor. Please tell us what can be done to get rid completely of this odor? M. R.

Sponge the underarm or other perspiration-laden areas with warm water to which a few drops of vinegar have been added. Sprinkle powdered pepsin or a good deodorant powder over the stain and work it well into the cloth. Let stand one or two hours until thoroughly dry and brush off the powder. Repeat if all the odor is not removed at the first treatment.

Airing the clothes on sunny, breezy days will also do much to freshen them. Here's another thought: the liquid which can be sprayed into upholstery, etc., to prevent mildew is also a deodorizer. It can be purchased in the housewares departments of most department stores. Thoroughly spraying the clothes with this before one of the airing periods and again when they are packed for shipping might do much to eliminate the troublesome odor.

Will you please offer some suggestions for removing brown liquid shoe polish from a coat? I sent the coat to the cleaners, but the spots were not removed. R. S. H.

Since the coat has been cleaned there is a possibility that the stain is there to stay. Did you point it out to the cleaner telling him what the stains were when you left the coat? Most cleaning establishments are experts at removing stains and are glad to try their best to do it. However, you might try this if the coat is wool: sponge the stains with denatured alcohol. If this doesn't remove all of the color, use a bleach. Sodium perborate (buy it at a drug store) or hydrogen peroxide are both bleaches which are safe to use on wool. To use the perborate, dampen the stained area with water, sprinkle the powdered perborate onto the stain and work it in well with the fingers. Allow it to remain on the stain for several minutes and sponge away using water on a soft cloth. To use the peroxide, dampen a soft cloth with it and sponge the stain. When the stain is thoroughly removed, rinse the area well with water to remove all of the bleach.

We have a 1937 Station wagon which has artificial leather upholstery on the seats. Can you tell me where I can purchase a paint for the seats, one which will not crack up? In other words, I wish to paint the artificial leather seats, preferably a gray color. They are now brown. F. K.

You could paint these seats with a plastic coating product which is made for use on leather. It comes in a wide range of colors. For further information about this product, call District 1130.

I would like to know where I might possibly obtain some teacups in the Blue Tulip pattern of the Steubenville China Co., of Steubenville, Ohio. This pattern is discontinued. I bought my set about 15 years ago and have broken most of the teacups. S. D. C.

Do any Ask Anne readers have any of this set which they would like to sell?

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest O. Osborne

Uncooked kitchen vegetables—carrots, turnips, beets, radishes, small potatoes—are the raw material of household sculpture that can be lots of fun for the whole family. With toothpicks to hold the parts together, one can make realistic-looking elephants from carrots, appealing Santa Clauses from radishes (with a bit of cotton for beard and hair) and, indeed, all sorts of interesting animal and human figures.

These may be used as decorations for the table on special occasions, placed as a centerpiece on tables or just played with.

Children will appreciate it when Mother and Dad take a hand and work out their ideas along with the kids. It's a lot of fun to compare each other's sculpture.

Mothers will find this is a fine rainy day activity, too. Children will stay busy for a long time with very little supervision or help. Of course, only a few of the materials that can be used in kitchen sculpture have been mentioned above. There are raisins, gum-drops, sugar cubes, pieces of macaroni—dozens of other things which imaginative children can find on kitchen shelves.

World YWCA Leaders Arrive Here Tuesday

Fifty YWCA leaders from foreign countries will arrive in Washington Tuesday for a two-day visit as guests of the local Young Women's Christian Association. Highlights of their stay will be a tea at the White House Wednesday, 4:30 p. m., followed by a reception on Thursday when the distinguished visitors will meet Cabinet, Supreme Court and diplomatic wives.

Chosen by the YWCAs of their own countries, the young women came to the United States to attend the first International Study Conference on Women and World Reconstruction. The conference, sponsored by the Foreign Division of the YWCA National Board, has been in session during the past month at Teachers College, Columbia University in New York City. It brought together young women of outstanding ability, most of them in their early thirties, from 26 different countries—Siam, Burma, India, Pakistan, Turkey, Egypt, Ceylon, Lebanon, Korea, China, Japan, the Philippines, Mexico, Canada, Chile, Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay and several European countries.

Under guidance of a distinguished visiting faculty, they have spent the past month in seminars at Columbia University studying the social, political and economic problems which they, as women leaders, can help to solve upon their return to their home lands. All hold responsible positions in the YWCAs of their own countries. Their visit to Washington comes at the close of the conference and from here they will scatter to various towns and cities to study individually YWCA procedures as practiced in the United States.

Twenty Washington hostesses will entertain the visitors in groups at luncheons Wednesday. Coffee hours on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings will provide conversation and discussion periods.

President of the YWCA of Washington is Mrs. Howard G. Nichols. Working with her in directing this event is Miss Mabel R. Cook, executive director. The committee in charge of arrangements is: Mrs. Nelson T. Johnson, chairman; Mrs. Frank R. McCoy; Mrs. Woodbury Willoughby; Mrs. Robert Parke; Mrs. Edwin G. Nourse; Mrs. Paul Opperman; Mrs. Karl Berns; Mrs. Sidney Morgan; Mrs. W. Ridgely Chapline; Mrs. Richard Fyfe Boyce.

REHOBOTH

day evening given by two Washington couples, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wilkins, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Gregory J. Aires, at the Park ave. cottage being occupied by the Wilkins. Approximately 125 guests of the couples arrived in picturesque beach togs of all descriptions.

Miss Moran Married

A wedding this afternoon of wide interest throughout Delaware, Maryland and the District of Columbia was that of Miss Nancy Eliot Moran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Moran of Bethesda, Md., and Daniel G. Conant, jr., which took place at 4 o'clock in All Saints' Episcopal Church at Bethesda. The nuptials were performed by the rector, the Rev. Charles W. Lowry. The Conants made their home in Washington when Mr. Conant, senior, was secretary to Delaware's former U. S. Senator James M. Tunnell. The Conants now make their home at Rehoboth.

Mr. Moran gave his daughter in marriage, and the bride's sister, Miss Leila Moran, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Dixie Willison and Miss Robin Buck. Mr. Conant's best man was his brother-in-law, Mr. Richard King of Washington, and ushers were Mr. Wilford Payne and Mr. Lewis Yerkes, both of Chestertown, Md. The bride and groom are both graduates of Washington College at Chestertown, where the couple will make their home after October 1.

Colonel and Mrs. F. Granville Munson of Washington spent the Labor Day holidays here with their daughter and son-in-law.

Tonight several hundred members of the Lewes Yacht Club took over the Rehoboth Country Club for their annual dinner dance and awarding of trophies and prizes won by the yachtsmen in the 1948 summer racing season in the Delaware Breakwater. New officers elected this week were presented. The new commodore is Lawrence B. Knapp of Nassau, new Lewes, who has been serving several years as racing committee chairman.

Curtain Rises Today on 13 Homes of '48'

By Conrad P. Harness

LIKE to look at brand new furnished houses? Have some time on your hands this afternoon? Then, turn to page 3, clip out the map, fill up the buggy with gas and you're all set for the time of your life!

The Washington Post and 26 business concerns will open 13 beautiful model homes for public inspection today at 12:30. Everything's free and you can browze around to your heart's desire. For your added enjoyment, each house will have a printed brochure which you can take and ponder over when you reach home. It gives a detailed description of the home and its furnishings.

This event is the long-awaited opening of the "Homes of '48" which starts today for a four-week showing ending October 10. Thirteen homes located in the District, Maryland and Virginia will be open today from 12:30 until 9 p. m. On week days they will open their doors at 2 p. m., close at 9 p. m. Sunday visiting hours, other than today, are from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m.

Prices of the homes range from a low of $13,250 for a two-story Colonial brick rambler in Wheaton, Md., and a modern California bungalow with radiant heating in Takoma Park, Md., to a luxurious $37,500 Georgian Colonial home in the Silver Valley area. Prices quoted do not include furnishings. Other home prices include: $16,950, $20,000, $19,650, $15,500, $16,000, $22,000, $17,000, $22,950, $31,000 and $14,950.

No Electronic Dream Houses

THE idea behind this mass exhibition of new furnished residences is to give the public an opportunity to see for themselves what is available in homes and furnishings in 1948. While each home is up-to-date in every respect and postwar architectural innovations are abundant, none of the "Homes of '48" fall into the category of twenty-first century, electronic dream houses. No photo-electric shingled roofs to capture the sun's energy, no push-button windows, etc. Just 13 highly attractive, well planned and livable homes, furnished with the comfort and pocketbook of the prospective buyer in mind.

Direction Maps

SEE PAGE 3 of this section for a map of the Metropolitan Washington Area showing the location, and traffic directions, to each of the "Homes of '48". The directions also list the nearest bus or streetcar routes. A large envelope with this same map printed on the outside cover is available free at each exhibit home. The large envelope is the perfect thing in which to carry all the brochures and other literature available ath the homes. Take it home and reenjoy your visit in the comfort of your front room easy chair!

The final touches to the homes were completed only yesterday. Construction crews and interior decorators worked 'round the clock most of the week in bringing their homes up to the present state of perfection. Although work on the homes began as far back as six months ago, the special building materials and planning which went into the homes took a longer construction period than normally is required. It was a close race, but the 13 builders and 13 furniture dealers in the exhibition won, with a few hours to spare.

The exhibition will appeal to everyone. If you're even remotely interested in buying a new home, you'll find 13 temptations to your budget. If you plan to remodel or add to your present home, you'll gain a wealth of ideas from a tour of all "Homes of '48".

The exquisite furnishings and interior decorative motifs are a story in themselves. (See Peggy Preston's story below. Ed's note.) Many furniture stores sent their buyers on special buying trips to bring back the latest creations.

Just Write a Check

AS REVEALED in previous articles in The Washington Post, visitors will be spared the maddening: "Sorry, this was built for display purposes only and no more are available." Or, "This is just a sample model from the factory. Production is expected to start next year, but we'll gladly put you on our list." There'll be none of that! Both homes and interior furnishings will be representative of what the buyer can actually purchase in Washington in 1948. Moreover, the wide variety of architectural styles and furnishings offer visitors a wide selection from which to choose.

Architecturally, the homes range from California modern to authentic Alexandria Colonial, plus Monterey Modern, Williamsburg Colonial and other styles. Geographically, the homes are located: District, three; Alexandria, one; Fairfax County, one; Arlington County, Va., one; Montgomery County, four; Prince Georges County, Md., three.

Visitors are asked not to "jump the gun" and try to visit the homes before the 12:30 opening time. All homes will open simultaneously. Some builders and furniture dealers have planned simple ribbon-cutting ceremonies to herald their homes debut.

The long awaited housing event will officially get under way today at 12:30, following a radio broadcast over Station WINX from 12:05 to 12:30. Participating will be Leon Chatelain, president of the Washington Board of Trade; Clarence W. Gosnell, president of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington; Mrs. Robert J. Dannemiller, president, Chevy Chase Woman's Club; and Mrs. Kyle Booth, Virginia State president of the National Society of Pen Women and past president of the Alexandria Woman's Club. Managing Editor James R. Wiggins will represent The Washington Post.

ALL ready for public inspection is this lovely Williamsburg Colonial home built by Cambridge Construction Co. in Alta Vista Terrace, in Bethesda, Md. The P. J. Nee Co. furnished the three-bedroom, two-bath residence. Home features a compartmented bath, cedar closet, bedroom or den downstairs, screened porch, scores of built-in storage areas and other "extras." All 13 homes in the housing show open simultaneously today at 12:30. You're invited!

Revue Is Showcase for New Products

THE "Homes of '48" are more compact, brighter and easily run than their predecessors. A tour of the 13 exhibit homes in the "Homes of '48" housinging revue reveals that builders are well aware of public demands for architectural innovations, labor-saving devices, well-planned storage areas, built-in items and other aids to easy living.

Dwellings must be more easy to manage in order to satisfy Washington housewives who can't count on servants for the same help their mothers had. The new homes must be brighter and more livable because more families, motivated by such home entertainment developments as television, will spend more time at home.

Builders Listen to Public

HOME BUYERS, the real force behind home building trends, are voicing demands for the following seven improvements, according to Herman O. Walther, former president of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers:

1. Larger living rooms.
2. More than one bathroom, with tile preferred.
3. A basement for play and storage spaces.
4. Functionally planned kitchens, enabling housewives to economize motion.
5. More and larger windows.
6. Insulation and automatic heating.
7. Attached garage.

These factors, together with such modern work-savers as automatic washing machines, dishwashers, garbage disposal units, plus kitchen and bathroom walls and floors of easily cleaned materials such as tile or linoleum, will help lighten the housewife's burden.

Every house in the "Homes of '48" exhibition offers a wide variety of attractions. Careful construction, best grade of materials, copper piping, drain tile around the foundations, insulation and waterproofing are only a few of the conventional building factors.

It's the unconventional items which furnish the "window-dressing" and will probably catch the public eye immediately.

For example, the Sidney Weinberg & Sons-Hecht Co. house boasts a loudspeaker in every room, all connected with the living room radio-phonograph. Your favorite radio program can be tuned in with a flick of the switch on the kitchen loudspeaker while you're raiding the icebox.

If you like to bathe leisurely and catch an act or two of an opera at the same time, then place a stack of records on the phonograph and the music will be relayed to the bathroom loudspeaker. Clever?

Two of the homes have something special in the way of bathrooms. The latter is definitely the one room that evidently doesn't rate too high with most builders and architects. They provide for the minimum essentials, tile it up beautifully and let it go at that. Not so, Mr. Weinberg and Cambridge Construction Co.

The latter has a new treatment of the upstairs bathroom. It is separated into three compartments, all in the same room, however. At the right is the tub, center has the sink and two tiers of built-in shelving, and at left is the bowl. A 5-inch tile wall separate each compartment, with an open areaway joining all three units.

Take a Tip From Hollywood

WEINBERG & SONS has gone one step further. The bathroom in their home is in two parts, connected by a door. In one unit is the bowl. The other section, "L" shaped, has a tub and sink. Thus, two persons can use the combined bath at the same time. The system has been in use in Europe for decades.

The Aldon Construction Co. features a Hollywood-styled glass door in its shower stall in the bath off the master bedroom.

Camalier & Crosby have installed electric heaters in the walls of both of their upstairs baths to ward off those frosty winter days.

Steel beam construction, with heavy steel beams at the basement ceiling supporting the house, is nothing new. However, the Samuel Eig-Julius Lansburgh house has gone one step further.

Instead of wood joists, those heavy timbers upon which a house rests, steel joists into which nails can be driven have been used.

Housewives will find no complaints with the large closets in the homes. A good example of closet storage area can be found in the Cafritz-Peerless Modern home. A very large "walk-in" closet is provided in the master bedroom, with clothes poles on each side of the closet and coat storage in between. Metal sliding doors are use in both bedroom closets. No more doors to get in the way when you're placing furniture.

Any discussion of closets must include one of the two in the master bedroom of the Cambridge Construction Co.-P. J. Nee house in Alta Vista Terrace, Md. Completely lined with cedar, it's the perfect place for storage of fine woolens. Moths steer clear of this spot, never fear!

Dishwashers, clothes washers, garbage disposal units and kitchen exhaust fans are included in several homes. Some clothes washers are in the kitchen, others in the utility room or basement. Every home has laundry tubs.

Interesting Basements

THE Paul Stone-Wm. E. Miller Co. home has a slightly different style of automatic dishwasher. Their's operates on water pressure alone, instead of a circular motion of the water.

Notice how the majority of the builders have taken the curse off their unfinished basements by brightening them up with whitewash, white paint or white water-proofing compound. Luria Bros.-House & Herrmann have finished off a basement recreation room with celotex in the ceiling. The Kraft Builders, Inc.-Malcolm Scates home has a television set in the basement recreation room.

Cafritz Construction Co. has provided a separate room in the basement which can be used for a cool work shop, dark room, storage area or what-have-you.

Here are other things to watch for when you make your tour:

The roof overhang of the Carl M. Freeman-Manning Modern Home which lets in the high winter sun, keeps out the hot summer rays . . . radiant heat controls by which the owner can keep each room at a different temperature if desired . . . unique flower boxes on the outsides of several homes . . . clever use of glass block . . . rubber tile on the kitchen floor . . . lighted what-not shelves . . . lovely mirrors over the mantels . . . "Magic-mirror" units in the front door which allow the housewife to view her callers while visitors see only a mirror.

Housing Display Is Rich in Decorating Tips

By Peggy Preston

IT WAS MOVING "DAY" all week long for the interior decorators of the "Homes of '48."

And what a moving day—as full of excitement and last-minute changes as the hours preceding the opening of a gigantic stage revue. Countless problems confronted the harassed decorators in their rush to finish by deadline time, set for midnight Saturday. For a time it looked as though they would never make it. But finish they did, with everyone a winner in the race.

Visitors who stop in to leisurely inspect these 10 completely furnished homes today will find it hard to believe that only yesterday some of them were vacant and bare, others only partially decorated. However, anyone who has ever undertaken to furnish and decorate a new house will have an idea of the trials and tribulations of the job.

First, there was the matter of coordinating the activities of both builders and decorators. More often, the timetable was discarded for speed's sake. Lovely pink gray carpeting was being laid in one living room, while painters and carpenters trod over it to complete their work in another room. Floors were being varnished as an emergency corps of painters gave the walls of a dining room a new coat of color.

It Was Hectic, Folks

WALL AND CEILING fixtures frequently arrived too late. Or, as often as not, they proved the wrong type for the furnishings. Fabrics were sometimes disappointing, had to be returned and changed for another color or texture.

Frantic decorators discovered at the last minute that certain pieces of furniture, so perfect in blueprint form, were not what they had intended for a certain corner. Substitutions had to be found—but fast.

Outside, meanwhile, the tractors and bulldozers raced on to shape up the lawn. Landscape men waited to give the finishing touches to trees, shrubs and plants. Workmen toiled over locks, awnings or screens.

But it all had a happy ending. Today the "Homes of '48" are spic and span for your inspection. Each piece of furniture is in its proper place; every curtain hung and rug laid.

Dining tables are set with china, silver and linen. Shower curtains are up in each bathroom. Books, flowers, pretty accessories are arranged to suit the artist's taste. The homes are ready to receive your critical inspection.

Bring Pencils, Ladies

FROM THE WOMAN'S viewpoint, the homes have some exciting decorating tips to offer. There are wonderful new color combinations to see; imaginative furniture arrangements, and delightful accessories such as lamps, figurenes, wall brackets, bookcases, etc. All furnishings are from the local business firms sponsoring the project, and are available in their shops.

Every type and period of home furnishings has been employed, ranging from the traditional to the modern. Many decorators have combined modern with a certain period, such as Regency, Colonial, California or Chinese.

For sheer elegance, in the Regency-Chippendale-Modern manner, the house decorated by Mazor masterpieces is one of the outstanding. Built by Camalier & Crosby, it stands on a slight rise of land at the corner of Turner lane, off Western ave., in Chevy Chase. An attractive red brick structure, it has slate blue shutters to match its shingled roof, and a spacious screened-in sun porch, with sun deck above.

Wilbert, the decorator, has splashed modern color ideas around with a lavish hand, yet kept the theme of a dignified Regency residence. The colors carried throughout the house are chartreuse, red, gray and green, in a variety of tones. Silver and green striped wallpaper is used in the entrance hall, the living-room walls are painted a deep shade of elephant gray.

The decorator has used lipstick red on a beautiful Regency sofa, draped velvet in the same shade on the skirts of a pair of gray mohair chairs before the fireplace. Green is prominent on a lounge chair, while chartreuse leather covers another, matching the draperies. Wood throughout the room is dark, contrasting well with the brilliant colors.

Furniture on a Budget

AN ADDED ATTRACTION in this home is a little den, or library, situated just off a landing on the stairs. Here Wilbert has used modern furniture and placed it against a black leather tufted wall.

The master bedroom is done in French provincial style with pieces of furniture done in antique white and silver. Twin beds are against a dual headboard, tufted in bottle green velvet.

Young couples with a wary eye on their pocketbooks will want to visit the house built by Sam Eig at 2607 East-West highway. There the Julius Lansburgh Co. has done an excellent job of low-cost decorating.

"This is a budget house," explained Robert Viancour, the decorator. "We want to show that it is possible to furnish tastefully your home without spending more than 10 per cent of the building costs."

A large living room and a dining room are separaed by a half wall in this residence, and the color scheme is the same for both. Furniture throughout is modern, made of limed oak, which is easy to keep clean as well as pretty to look at.

Mrs. Juanita Spearman, in charge of the draperies, explained that the gay, colorful, modern chintz drapes could be purchased for around $1.70 and $2.25 a yard. She has put these fabrics everywhere in the house, giving all the rooms a considerable amount of charm.

Modern Styles Popular

THE TWO BEDROOMS on the second floor are augmented by a smaller room which could be used for a den, nursery, sewing room or guest room. Mr. Viancour has chosen to make it a combination of all of these. He has put a studio couch at one end and covered it with soft gray. There is a limed-oak chest, an occasional chair and space still remains for a crib or extra bed.

There are several interiors done in the modern fashion. One is the Morris Cafritz house at 812 Crittenden st. ne., decorated by Peerless. Another is the home built by the Aldon Construction Co. at 13th and Aspen sts. nw., and decorated by Milton Rossler.

You, as a guest of The Washington Post and the 26 participating business firms, are most cordially invited to explore each of the homes to your heart's content. This exhibit is in no way restricted to prospective home buyers. Everyone is welcome. You'll find items to interest every member of the family. The numerous decorative schemes, floor plans, furnishings, built-in items, etc., will stimulate

AN important accessory in any room is a reading lamp and Milton Rossler uses this distinctive sample in the house he decorated at 13th and Aspen streets nw., for the "Homes of '48." Twin stems rise from a base which holds the figure of a black panther. The beige silk shade which captures the attention of Mrs. O. H. Aylor, jr., is edged with velvet figured in a leopard pattern. Home was built by the Aldon Construction Co.

Brilliant Motifs

'Homes of '48' Show Novel Coloration

YOU see a lot more color in today's modern homes, such as the 13 on display in the "Homes of '48" exhibition, than grandma ever dared imagine, says Practical Builder, authoritative trade journal whose local representatives inspected the model homes this week.

Practical Builder had this to say about modern trends in home building:

"The field has not exhausted many possibilities still untouched by innovations in decoration or brilliance. Bright tile and porcelain fixtures have livened up bathrooms and kitchens, while costume furnishings and wall coverings have made other rooms more pleasant and livable than when parlors were dusty green creations in uncomfortable mohair and unyielding 'mission' oak.

Plywood Employed

"Some of the latest ideas are found in the plywood industry where this product has taken on the semblance of alligator, lizard or snakeskin, various leather grains and unusual grooved patterns. Painted in any desired color, this textured wood gives an arresting appearance wherever used.

"Upholstering built-in or standard furniture is easy with new, long-lasting plastic that is stainproof, washable, flexible and noninflammable. Its wide variety of beautiful sunproof colors do not fade or become dull, and it is resistant to scuffing, cracking and chipping. Used to upholster porch or terrace seats, it adds a bright spot to your landscape and can be matched by new plastic screening in a full range of bright colors.

"To make basement, terrace, porch or sunroom floors more colorful without using paints or covering, build them in color that does not wash out or fade. This low-cost, clean aggregate is easy to handle, ready to use and merely added to concrete mix as floor is poured or resurfaced.

Tints for Outdoors

"And while it is customary to paint trellis and arbor decorations in the garden or lawn a fresh, ordinary white, they are just as attractive when tinted in gay colors that harmonize with the blossoms they carry.

"Use color lavishly in and around your home for greater pleasure, but by all means plan it carefully so that it is complementary and easy to live with. The whole effect can be destroyed by careless combinations of hues that disagree with one another and their general surroundings."

Tile Output Mounts During First Half

New York—Output of ceramic wall and floor tile for the first half of this year was 24 per cent greater than in the same period last year, the Tile Council of America announced yesterday.

Production by the Nation's tile makers for the first six months of 1948 was 50,421,000 square feet, 9,743,000 more than in the first half of 1947. June manufacture totaled 8,630,000 square feet.

Although the current tile production rate is at record levels, more than 10 per cent over prewar high, manufacturers are still hard pressed to meet demand, the tile council disclosed.

Umbrella Department

If umbrellas, canes and sticks are always underfoot, an "umbrella department" is a godsend. Build a simple rack on the inside of the hall closet door and paint it to match the woodwork. This will save temper, shins and give you a comfortable feeling about rainy days.

Loan Leagues Make Big Gain In Money Put in New Homes

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 11.—More money was channeled into the construction of new homes in the first half of 1948 by the Nation's savings associations than in any corresponding period on record, the United States Savings and Loan League said today.

The average loan was $4560, an indication of the prevalence of low-priced home construction financing.

The trade organization for more than 3650 savings and loan associations and cooperative banks, the league reported that 115,000 mortgage loans totaling $523,000,000 were made for new homes from the first of the year to June 30. This represented a sharp upward climb of 40 per cent from the 82,000 new units financed by the associations during the first half of 1947.

Conversely, loans financing existing dwellings continued to run below last year. The emphasis on new construction loans trimmed the available funds for financing existing homes so that only 271,000 mortgages were made for that purpose during the first half of this year, a decrease of 8 per cent from 1947's first six months.

Ralph M. Smith, West Somerville, Mass., league president, said "availability of more houses is the only effective cure for the high price of homes. The league has been urging its members to concentrate their lending on new homes priced between $4000 and $10,000."

Dividend for Uncle

On behalf of more than 600,000 farmer borrowers from Federal Farm Mortgage Corp. in 14 years, Gov. I. W. Duggan of the Farm Credit Administration in July took a check for 40 million dollars over to the Treasury as a dividend on Government stock in FFMC. Besides this, the Government has recovered its original investment of 200 million dollars, and FFMC has on hand a surplus of 83 million dollars.

Exhibit Homes Show 20 Years of Housing Progress

THE new crop of model homes, as typified by those on view in the "Homes of '48" exhibition of new furnished houses which opened today for a four-week showing, are a far cry from their elders of, say, 1928.

We've been leafing through books showing the model homes of 1929 and 1930. The prewar models resemble their postwar offspring like Rita Hayworth does "Miss America of 1928." Both fall under the title of "whistle bait."

But, there seems to be a new architectural outlook. The pen and pencil boys are out to make every square foot of living area just that--"livable." At the same time they're cost-conscious. Today's model homes are mostly in the middle income bracket whereas a goodly percentage of the 1930 choices looked like it would require a race track tycoon to foot the bills. Vast four-bedroom, three-bath homes were common. The price tags, when allowances for the inflated dollar were made, ran far higher than those of today.

A typical description of a 1930 model home reads as follows: "The house, which is in the $25,000 (equal to $55,000 on today's market. Ed.'s note) price range, shows the influence of the eighteenth century English countryside home. It is of the center-entrance plan, with a vestibule placed at the juncture of the two main wings at the front."

For Fat Wallets Only

"FROM the vestibule one steps into the stair hall, from which a circular stairway rises to the upper floor. A large, rounded oriel window lights the living room from the frontal facade. The second floor has four bedrooms, two baths, two clothes closets and storage space.

"A double driveway runs direct from street to the rear of the house connecting with two separate garages built into the basement."

The above three paragraphs throw off an air of expensive elegance, hoped for by many, unobtainable to most. And that's where one of the big differences arises between model homes of '28 and '48. A man with a $6000 yearly income can do something about his dream house today. The same relative salary in '28 would not have purchased peanuts on the model home market.

Mass exhibition of new furnished homes have, of necessity, always featured homes whose price tags were usually out of reach of low income families. Builders must buy expensive rugs and draperies for such a showing; furniture stores need a lot of room to display their wares. They shy away from small, low cost homes as being economically impossible ventures.

However, the current "Homes of '48" exhibition lists homes as low as $13,250. One such home boasts radiant heating, 100 square feet of window-walls, a terrace, cabinet-walls in the bedrooms, an electric clothes washer, etc. For the well-heeled, other homes are available in the $25,000 to $37,000 class.

Wired for Sound!

ONE of the large differences between the '28 and '48 homes is in the heating plant. Most of the '28 prize winners used coal and oil. Nearly all of the current crop are gas-fired hot-air or radiant heat. The latter, of course, was practically unknown in the United States before 1938.

The use of glass is another comparison. The homes of '48 have used glass both as a structural material and as an aid to better living. For example, the Paul Stone-William E. Miller Furniture Co. house in Hillcrest Gardens, Md., has an entire window wall of 84 square feet of glass in the dining room, overlooking the front yard.

Another huge picture window in the Stone house dominates the living room. Walls of the bathroom at the S. Weinberg & Sons-Hecht Co. house are faced with Carrarra glass, with clever use of glass block elsewhere.

The "Homes of '48" are proud of their labor-saving devices. The young couples purchasing a home in 1928 were not exposed to such temptations as garbage-disposal units, automatic dishwashers and clotheswashers, television sets, etc.

There seem to be more built-in features in the class of '48. Builders have gone wild over sliding closet doors, built-in shoe racks, storage areas, bookcases, telephone niches, and other built-in items.

And what model home of 30 years ago was wired for sound? One of the current crop boasts loudspeakers in each room, all connected to the radio in the living room. Thus there's entertainment for mother while she's cooking breakfast, for dad while he's shaving, and for the kids while dressing for school—all available at the flip of a switch in each room!

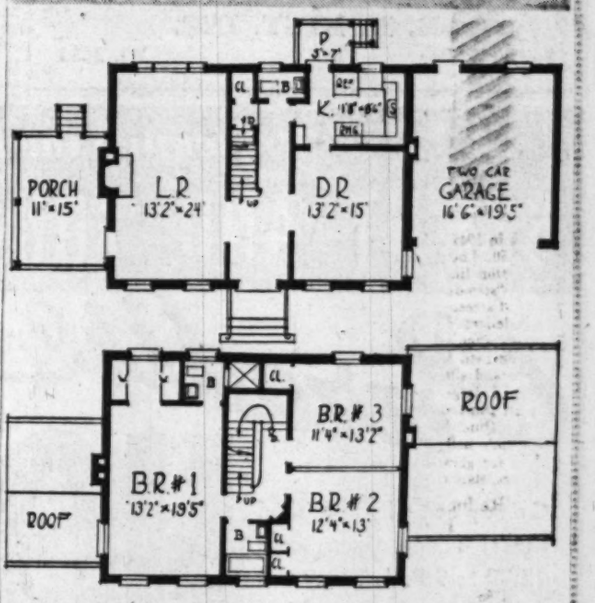
The Better Things in Life



FOR the family who can afford the better things in life, this Georgian Colonial two-story brick residence offers a variety of architectural good deeds. The 13x24-foot livingroom boasts a large picture window overlooking the rear gardens and opens into a large screened side porch. Three bedrooms and two baths comprise the second floor. The master bedroom has its own complete bath, plus a vast storage area as shown in the floor plan. Not shown is a third floor attic area which can be used as a den, office, play room, extra bedrooms, or what have you. Like the plan? You can see it on display today through October 10. It's one of the "Homes of '48", sponsored by The Washington Post and participating business firms. Built by the W. C. and A. N. Miller Development Co. and furnished by Woodward & Lothrop, it's located at 3712 48th st. nw., in the Spring Valley section

No Accidents, Please, D. C. Police Request

Inspector Arthur E. Miller, head of the Metropolitan Police traffic division, has this advice for motorists who view the "Homes of '48" exhibition:

Park parallel to the curb or highway allowing enough room for other motorists to leave their parking space. Lock the car when you leave it. Needless to say, observe parking and traffic regulations.

Home Is Electrical Paradise on $9 Per Month

By Judy Spivak

THE 13 brand-new furnished homes in the "Homes of '48" exhibit, opening today, are crammed with labor-saving gas and electrical devices, including dishwashers, ironers, garbage disposal units, and washing machines. And all are remarkably cheap to operate.

Take, for example, an automatic dishwasher. Equipped with a six-horsepower motor, it costs a mere 25 cents a month to operate, allowing for a full hour's use each day. If there's a heating coil to dry the dishes, too, the charge may go up to 50 cents per month.

A 1500-watt automatic ironer, in use 2 hours each week costs the housewife about 50 cents a month. That's about the charge for her ordinary hand iron, operated 5 hours a week.

$1 Per Month for Dryer

AN AUTOMATIC clothes dryer, whose six-horsepower motor uses about 4000 watts of electricity, dries two loads of clothes a week for a total charge of about $1 a month. A 140-watt washing machine, with no drying unit attached, costs less than $25 per month to operate, on a once-a-week basis.

The garbage disposal unit, which swallows up all refuse except for large bones, takes approximately 5? cents a month of electricity.

An 8-inch kitchen exhaust fan, used 12 hours every single day, comes to about 50 cents a month for operation. Actually, with clean modern cooking stoves, the fan will probably be turned on only to expel cooking odors and will scarcely eat up 25 cents worth of electricity each month.

A four-burner gas or electric range, used morning and evening, averages $1.25 a month to operate, though the cost will vary either way, depending on the season, and amount of cooking done.

$9 per Month for All

AN ELECTRIC refrigerator, with an average 6 to 8 feet of cubic space, costs just about 60 cents a month to operate, if kept at a normal 50 degrees Fahrenheit. Gas refrigerators use approximately $2 of gas a month.

Electricity for a small bedside radio, kept going 8 full hours a day, costs a mere 25 cents per month of entertainment. A larger standing model radio, with automatic phonograph attached, will provide the same 8 hours of entertainment for 75 cents.

A television set, used 6 hours every single day, eats up only about $1.35 worth of electricity per month.

Total cost of all this electrical and gas equipment, plus an extra $1.50 thrown in for the lights, should keep the monthly gas and electricity bills at about $9.

Low Income No Bar to Home Ownership, Builder Declares

The notion that home ownership is confined to families with high income is disproved by factual data, says Frank W. Cortright, executive vice president of the National Association of Home Builders.

Home ownership, as a result of the progress and production achieved by private home builders is now largely a matter of desire, rather than size of annual income, Cortright declares. Citing Bureau of Census figures for nonfarm families with annual incomes of less than $5000. About half of these families had incomes of less than $3000 per year.

"Further evidence," says Cortright, "that home ownership versus renting is now largely a matter of choice is the fact that we find similar proportions of home owners and tenants in various low and middle income groups. For example, among families receiving from $500 to $999 year 48.2 per cent owned their homes and 51.8 per cent rented. In the group earning from $3000 to $3499 the balance was exactly fifty-fifty."

Home ownership generally is on the increase. Seven per cent of all families in the $3000-$4999 bracket purchased new homes in 1947 as against 6 per cent in the group above $5000 per year.

"As a matter of fact," Cortright said, "according to Department of Commerce data, as much money was spent in 1947 for cosmetics, tobacco and alcoholic beverages as for residential rent, including the rental value of owner-occupied dwellings."

Consumer Goods Pinch Predicted By Manufacturer

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—A new pinch in supply of consumer hardgoods was predicted today unless the Nation's steelmaking capacity is increased.

John Hurley, president of Thor Corp., Chicago producer of home laundry appliances, said allocations of already short steel to foreign aid and United States rearmament, without expanding capacity, "will put us right back into the sellers' market from which we have just emerged."

He said that Thor and other long-established makers are unable currently to meet customers' demands, with the result that "name" products are being black-marketed in many sections. New steel curtailments would further complicate manufacturers' efforts to stamp out this condition, he said.

Attic to Basement

'Homes of '48' Reflect Family Life Changes

THE NEW "Homes of '48" and those of 30 years ago are almost as different in interior design as the modern automobile and the surrey with the fringe on top.

Even a brief inspection of the 13 model homes demonstrates how profoundly design has changed to keep pace with changes in family living habits.

Gone, for example, in the majority of new homes, is the dining room. It's been combined in one way or another with the living room or the kitchen, so that space once given to it can receive more use. The basement is gone, too, in one house, to be replaced by the utility room.

Today's accents are on working comfort for the housewife, on cleanliness and ease of cleaning, and on outdoor living.

Kitchen design, for instance, has been quietly revolutionized with the passing of the "hired girl" and the servant. Today's housewife is well aware that most of her 60 hours a week of home-making activity are spent in the kitchen. Therefore she wants it as comfortable and practical as possible, so that such features as good design, easily cleaned tile walls and electric dish washers are a "must" in modern kitchens.

The modern accent on cleanliness is strongly reflected in all 13 of the homes in the Post-sponsored "Homes of '48" exhibition of new furnished homes.

Tiled showers are now considered a necessity; 30 years ago they were found in very few homes. And the larger new homes have not only their tiled shower or bath, but also a ground-floor powder room, for both family and guest use.

Greater emphasis on outdoor living has markedly affected the design of today's homes. Picture windows now bring the outdoors inside. Terraces or patios are integrated with modern houses so that meals can be served conveniently in the open air. And today's back yards serve not only for a garden but often for a family living area, where sun bathing can be indulged in and a barbecue built for casual picnics and wiener roasts.

California Plant Yields Oil From Shale

By Ralph Dighton

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 11 (AP).—Synthetic oil is here—and a full-fledged industry, drawing its raw product from billions of tons of shale underlying the mountains of the West, is ready to be born.

The only thing that keeps the United States from tapping a 200-billion-barrel reserve of synthetic crude is the need for it. That may emerge any day in a rearming world.

A radically new principle had to be devised to produce synthetic oil from oil shale. Only an engineer would understand the details, but essentially the new principle is this:

A huge vat "cooks" the shale at high temperature. The resulting hot vapors, instead of being allowed to escape, are utilized in heating new batches of shale as they enter the vat. Through this double-use of heat energy, temperatures are kept at a minimum. The shale oil emerges cool enough to be fed directly into a pipeline without further cooling.

The process has been tested over a long period at nearby Wilmington, Calif., by the Union Oil Co. A larger plant, capable of turning out synthetic oil in commercial quantities, will be erected soon by the company in Colorado, where shale is available in great amounts.

Although it is not petroleum, several of the products derived from petroleum, including gasoline, can be derived from shale oil.

Shale oil today can be produced at about twice the cost of natural oil. Rising petroleum costs are expected to close this gap partially. In the event of an emergency, Government subsidy might absorb the rest of the difference, if improved techniques have not already done so.

Real Estate Boom In West Slows Down

San Francisco, Sept. 11 (AP).—Federal Reserve Bank reports indicate a slowing down in the Far Western real estate boom.

The San Francisco Reserve Bank reported that the loan total as of September 1 for the seven leading cities of the twelfth district was $2,047,000,000. This was still 393 million dollars over a year ago.

The loan totals for Portland, Seattle and Spokane on September 1 were unchanged from August 4; Salt Lake City's total declined one million dollars, San Francisco's increased six million dollars, Los Angeles was up two million dollars and Oakland was up one million dollars.

DC Television Possible

Television has been extended to those whose electric service happens to be of the DC variety. Turning the trick are special converters, now available. They are described as operating with a new-type automatic remote starting system and require no special wiring.

Gadget Saves Brakes

A new electric gadget for the automobile is a dashboard signal light designed to prevent wear and tear on brakes. When the car's ignition is turned on the light goes on, if the hand-brake is set. It stays on until the brake is released.

Southeast Leads All District in August Building

An overwhelming liking for brick construction over frame, a boom in residential construction in the Southeast section of the District and new construction, although small in dollar value, in in the Southwest were the chief points of interest in the August report of building operations in Washington.

District Building Inspector Robert Davis' report showed that last month's building activity was $4,161,665, a gain of $675,505 over July totals.

Permits were issued for erection of 108 brick residences, as compared with 2 frame, 16 apartment buildings to house 235 families and 28 homes were razed.

The Southeast led other areas in dollar value with $1,041,500; Northeast, $383,000; Northwest, $935,620, and Southwest, $332,700. New living units by section included: Northeast, 20; Southeast, 249; Northwest, 33, and Southwest, 43.

Cement Mills Lag Behind U. S. Demand

New York, Sept. 11.—Although cement production is at a record high, the mills cannot keep up with the cement demand of the Nation, Business Week reports.

An article in the current issue states that the chief cause of the shortage is the big rise in the number of small construction and repair jobs.

Public Invited to See for Themselves

Builders Using Glass Widely In New Furnished Houses

WIDE picture windows, lovely mirrors over fireplace mantels, windowwalls and glass block are just a few of the uses of glass by builders participating in the "Homes of '48" exhibition of new furnished houses which starts today at 12:30 and ends October 10.

The public is invited to see for themselves how glass of greatly improved strength and quality has been put to use. For instance, the Carl M. Freeman house in Hillwood Manor, off New Hampshire ave. extended, has a 100 square feet of windowwalls!

Kraft Builders, Inc., and Malcolm Scates Furniture Co. have combined to present a home boasting a vast expanse of smoked mirrors extending from ceiling to floor around the front room fireplace. And observe the use of glass block in the kitchen of Cambridge Construction Co.'s house in Alta Vista ter., Bethesda, Md.

Manufacture of such glass is the result of intensive technical research conducted by manufacturers in recent years, Melvin H. Baker, chairman of the construction industry information committee, said yesterday.

"Research has produced tempered plate glass which has five to six times the strength of standard plate glass, while improved polishing methods have resulted in plate glass with truer surfaces, greater strength, and reduced cost," Mr. Baker said.

"Sheet window glass also has gained truer surfaces and much less distortion of vision, together with increased strength, as a result of the industry's continuing research studies. Closer color control has been achieved in structural glass, and special glass now is produced for the purpose of absorbing heat, transmitting ultraviolet light, and other unusual requirements.

"Among the completely new glass products of recent years are double window panes, structural glass block, and the many uses of glass fibers.

"In fiber form, glass is used in several forms for insulating homes and also is used for cold storage and electrical insulation. It also is made into noncombustible draperies for theaters and other public buildings.

"Before glass block could be placed on the market it was necessary to develop and test special production machinery and to prepare optical designs for the block which would distribute the light transmitted by the block so as to meet various requirements, ranging from complete transparency to varying degrees of distortion designed to obscure vision.

"One important research problem in double window panes, which provide insulation in a single sash, was the perfection of a lightweight, durable, and inexpensive seal which would permanently retain a layer of dry-filtered air between the two sheets of glass.

Scientist Cites Varied Uses of Waste Wood

By Alton L. Blakeslee

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 (AP).—A tree to Dr. Robert S. Aries is a good drink of whisky, nylon stockings, an ink-remover and food on the table.

With a little chemical magic, these are new things that can be made from wood. What's more, they all can be produced from the wastes when wood is turned into lumber or into pulp for paper.

Dr. Aries, a consulting chemical engineer and research associate at the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, has developed methods of doing these things, and more.

One process will make 50 gallons of good ethyl (drinking) alcohol from a ton of sawdust, he says. Each gallon would cost only one-third as much as a gallon of alcohol from grain.

Drinkers couldn't tell the difference, he declares.

The nylon stockings would come from furfural, a chemical used not only in making the stockings, but plastics, insecticides, and other products and in refining petroleum. Most of the 30,000 tons of furfural used annually are derived now from oat hulls and corn cobs.

Dr. Aries has a process to make furfural from certain sugars in wood. Two pulp mills in England and Italy now are using the process, and American companies are interested, he added.

Tree bark is one of the big wastes at saw and pulp mills. Dr. Aries has a new, ingenious use for the bark. From it he extracts a chemical that can take the ink out of newsprint. The de-inking is a big and important business due to the high cost and big demand for paper. The bark can save trees by meeting some of the demand for paper.

Display Is Rich in Decorating Hints

everybody's interest in better homes for better living.

Geoffrey Gunther, decorator for Peerless, has kept the color of the walls a quiet, neutral gray and let the spotlight fall on his dramatic colors. Furniture is oak, painted either ebony mist—a deep gray black, or green mist. A sectional love seat is covered with red fabric, which blends with other shades of red in the room.

Chartreuse, gold, green and royal blue are other colors that flash throughout this attractive house. Green plants are in evidence everywhere and sprout up in unexpected places. One plant adorns an end of the radio, growing from a tiny metal plate imbedded in the top of the fixture.

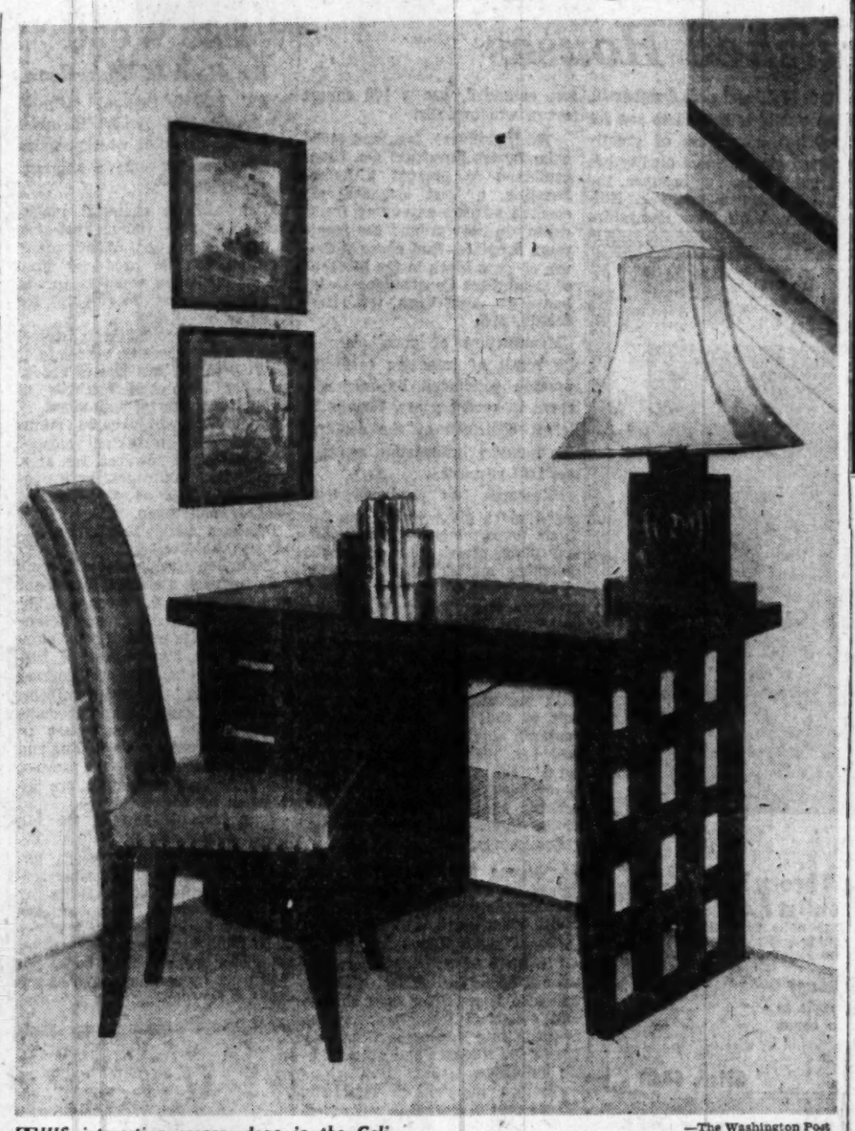
Attractive figurines and lamps are an important part of the decorative scheme. All have a Chinese theme and match an unusual coffee table of ebony mist, with top of light green tooled leather.

The bedrooms are done in a modern manner, with the idea of using vivid colors against a neutral wall again carried out. Mr. Gunther has furnished the smallest bedroom as a den, complete with little portable bar. Colors are Chinese red and black.

Milton Rossler has given some unusual touches to the house which overlooks a portion of the Walter Reed Memorial Hospital grounds. Here, too, the favorite color scheme is chartreuse, red, gray and green. He, however, has used blond wood for cabinets, tables, etc., and painted the walls a deep shade of gray. One end of the livingroom wall is splashed with a Chinese red for contrast.

He uses a pastel green carpeting throughout the lower rooms and covered a deep, wide couch in chartreuse, two chairs in Chinese red. Vases, lamps, etc., are in tone with the decorative motif which is slightly Oriental in tone.

Pale gray glass curtains cover the long, wide windows in the living room, giving the room a feeling of space and light. It is also an uncluttered room, with each piece of furniture and every accessory possessing a character all its own.



THIS interesting corner, done in the California-Modern theme, is from the Morris Cafritz house at 821 Crittenden st. ne. Geoffrey Gunther, decorator for Peerless Modern, selected the dark mist green desk as a perfect contrast piece against the neutral gray of the walls and rug. Lamp has a coral red base, a color that is repeated in the prints which hang on the side wall

Decorating Hints

Try Furniture on Mentally Before Buying for Home

By Ann Pringle

NO smart salesgirl tries to sell a woman a coat and two dresses to match just because that's what the last customer bought. But for years the young couple starting housekeeping was advised to buy a three-piece "suite," a sofa with two club chairs, all covered in the same fabric, or maybe in a solid and stripe combination. Every living room had them, just as every hall had a hatrack, every dining room a china closet.

We've outgrown those shibboleths, you say. But look around. How many living rooms do you know that don't boast a sofa large enough to seat three people? But have you ever seen three people, seated side by side against a wall, carry on a conversation in comfort? Two lean forward to converse in front of the third, or one leans forward while the others talk behind his back. The sofa looks fine when there's no one in the room. But is that what people buy furniture for?

AND what about tip-top tables that sit in foyers, their tipped tops doing nothing but making dust marks on the walls. Or tables with lamps growing out of them, the lamp too high for reading, the table too small to put anything on because its center surface is broken by the lamp shaft? Hatracks and china closets made more sense.

Any of these items may serve a specific purpose in a specific home. But lots of homes have them simply because the owners saw them in lots of other homes.

You try on clothes before you buy them. Wouldn't it be smart to try on furniture, mentally, before you buy it? Figure out what you'll use it for, and ask yourself if something else wouldn't serve the same use better. Your home, when you finish with it, probably won't look like everybody else's, but then, do you really want it to?

Landscaping Hints for 'Homes of '48'

The builder has taken care of careful construction techniques in the "Homes of 48." Skilled decorators have made the interiors a fairyland of decorating tips. But what about the landscaping of the lots? We asked our garden expert, James H. Beattie: "What plantings do you recommend to bring out the full beauty of a new home?" Here's his answer:

By James H. Beattie

EVERY queen should have a crown. And plantings of simplicity and quality will serve that purpose for the 17 new houses in the "Homes of '48." The builder gives the buyer a start in the way of a few selected shrubs, a sodded lawn and cement walks, but it's up to the homeowner to take it from there.

With just a few well-chosen, properly placed shrubs and trees, the entire character of a new house is changed into a thing of beauty.

It's a common mistake to plant poorly adapted material and to crowd the shrubs and trees too closely. Washington is filled with homes whose beauty is lost in a jungle of trees and shrubs. One should look ahead a few years to the time when the trees have grown to a considerable size.

A fine turf is the first and most important part of the home yard beautification program. Yards around the Houses of 1948 have been seeded or sodded. They present excellent opportunities for the growing of a lawn. The fairly heavy-textured soil that prevails around these houses is very favorable for the growing of grass, and September is an excellent time to place sod or sow grass seed. No matter how fertile the soil, it will pay to fertilize and prepare it with the most exacting care.

Save Trees Where Possible

A home without a shade tree or two is lacking in completeness. Fortunately, many yards around the new houses of today already have trees growing on the building site. This is most fortunate because it requires a long time to grow a worth-while shade tree to a really useful size.

Most persons prefer to plant the large growing shade trees along the sides or toward the rear of the yard leaving the front open. Kinds? The best ones are not particularly fast growers.

The oaks are among the best, with the white oak, the scarlet oak and the willow oak near the top of their kind. The American elm ranks high in preference for home yards. Unfortunately its future is clouded in uncertainty because of the Dutch elm disease.

For small yards, the dogwood and the flowering crabs are very good. They provide blooms in spring and attractive fruits in autumn. The holly, while of slow growth, makes a very attractive tree. If a pine is desired, the Austrian pine or the hemlock are excellent choices but they need a lot of room and are hardly adapted to small lots.

Take Your Choice

THERE'S a wealth of fine shrub material that is well suited to homesites around our modern houses. For foundation plantings around the base of the house the low growing junipers, the yews, the broadleaf hydrangeas, the low growing spiraea, the azaleas and many others are excellent choices.

For the sides and the rear of the yard there is an even larger list from which to choose. The azaleas, the cornels, the deutzias, the forsythias, the hydrangeas, the loniceras, the mock-orange, the spireas, the syringas and the viburnums all rank high in desirability.

The home built by Ralph Construction Co. in Wheaton Hills, Md., is particularly interesting in that it is not only a very fine house, but it also has a yard with excellent possibilities for improvement. The two-story colonial style gives the appearance of height. Some simple foundation plantings and a background of some trees and shrubbery would change the picture very much.

The grading already performed shows an excellent type of soil that would support a good lawn.

The establishment of a lawn is the first and most important step in the yard improvement program at such a site. After the sodding or seeding of the lawn the planting of a limited number of carefully selected shrubs and a tree or two will establish the foundation of a simple, low-cost, easily maintained planting program.

Low Plantings Suggested

THE foundation plantings, that is, those around the base of the house, are of first importance. A small cluster of low-growing junipers, yews, spireas or viburnums at the corners and on each side of the steps with big leaf hydrangeas, azaleas, dwarf spireas or other low plants in the spaces between the corner clumps will add dignity and beauty to homes of this type. It is especially desirable to avoid using tall-growing plants like the common arbor-vitae and the Norway spruce closely adjacent to such houses.

By planting along the lot borders with higher growing shrubs and small trees the house will become the center of the picture. The dogwoods, the flowering crabs, the lilacs and many others fit in well for this purpose.

At least one or two shade trees are needed and they should be back of the house line. A red maple would be an excellent choice. For that particular location a weeping willow would be fine. It has the advantage of being a rapid grower.

Nursery grown planting stock is usually most economical in the long run. Trees lifted in the woods sometimes cost less at the start, but unless moved while very small the chances of their living are not good. Dogwoods and oaks if moved while very small seem to do well, but it is necessary to wait for a long time before they reach a significant size.

Someone is wondering why fruit trees have not been suggested for the rear yard. The care required to keep them healthy seldom justifies the effort. There is a real place for a small garden in the back yard of the Wheaton Hills house. There is ample room there for play space, a shade tree or two and a garden.

Plantings and landscaping of two-story homes such as the one at 11512 Grandview ave., Wheaton Hills, Md., built by Ralph Construction Co., should emphasize low growing junipers, yews, spireas or viburnums at the corners, recommends our garden expert. The lovely residence is one of 13 on display today through October 10 in the "Homes of '48" exhibition of new furnished houses. This house is furnished by National Furniture Company

Plants to Hide Ruins in Berlin

Berlin (AP).—Berlin's city planners—tired of looking at acres of bomb ruins and mountains of rubble more than three years after the war—are going to plant greenery on the rubble piles.

Official estimates on how long it would take to clear away Berlin's ruins, with present limitations on manpower and machinery, range from 20 to 40 years. And more ruins are being made every month by Allied demolition squads who go around town blowing up air raid shelters and other installations which are classified as "fortifications" prohibited under inter-Allied agreements for Germany's demilitarization.

Berlin's department for parks and garden planting said rubble heaps which cannot be removed for lack of labor, machinery and trucks will be planted over.

Need Fire Prevention

There are more than 17,500 barn fires annually.

Termites Threaten Palace in Honolulu

Honolulu, Sept. 11 (AP).—Termites are gnawing away at the only royal palace Americans have. But, to restore the regal splendor of Iolani palace in midtown Honolulu, repair crews are digging out the insects. And the crews are replacing bug-eaten wood in the building's six-towers.

When Hawaii was a kingdom, King Kalakaua and Queen Liliuokalani reigned from the 66-year-old palace. Their throne room is deserted now. The rest of the looming, gray building houses the governor's territorial offices. Palace grounds are jammed with barracks which spread over the lawns during the war. The United States' flag has fluttered over Hawaii's palace since it was hoisted there 50 years ago this summer.

New Yorkers, Attention!

The name "Empire State" applied to New York dates back to 1784 when George Washington, after a tour of the State's harbors, waterways and fertile acres, called New York the Seat of Empire.

Fire Cuts Farm Profits

Mayflower Hotel Face-Lifting Job About Finished

The face-lifting program underway at the Mayflower Hotel to make it one of the Nation's best dressed hostelries is just about completed, C. J. Mack, general manager, said yesterday.

Chicago, New York and local designers and contractors were called in to brighten up the Connecticut ave. landmark. Included in the extensive alterations are the grand ballroom, the promenade, presidential dining room, coffee shop and other sections. The lounge was completely rejuvenated last year and the Town and Country Room was unveiled last spring.

In the new motif the original gold leaf adornments throughout the hotel have been replaced by lighter and brighter woodwork. Still to come are a complete air-conditioning system, new elevators and kitchen equipment.

A Moving Teacher

Mercer, Mo. (AP).—Mrs. Merle McIntosh, rural school teacher and mother of 13 children, has solved her housing problem. Mrs. McIntosh recently purchased a house, constructed so that it can be transported easily by truck. When she moves from one school to another, she merely has the house loaded on a truck and moved to a spot near the school grounds.

Man, 79, Builds Five-Room House In 12-Hour Shifts

Durango, Colo., Sept. 11 (AP).—Seventy-nine-year-old Tom Pierce has "worked hard" all his life, so doesn't mind working 12 hours daily building a new brick house. Pierce is putting up a five-room brick residence. "I've had the brick and lumber stored for two or three years and so I decided to go ahead and use it because of the shortage of houses," he said.

"I work two shifts on it—one in the morning and one in the afternoon." He is assisted by his daughter, whom he described as "the only woman bricklayer in the country." In the first 60 days of construction they erected the brick walls and laid the ceiling joists.

"No, I don't know when the house will be completed," Pierce said. "But I guess we'll be done with it when it's finished,' he grinned.

Physician, Heal Thyself!

Pratt, Kans. (AP).—City Water Superintendent Alar Mawdsley was asked to go to Topeka recently to address the Kansas League of Municipalities on the subject "Care and Maintenance of Water Tanks." While he was in Topeka waiting to address the delegates, he received a phone call from home informing him that one of the city's water tanks had overflowed, damaging residences in the area.

Russia Plans Homes for Rural Teachers

Moscow (AP).—The Council of Ministers, announcing a home-building program for rural teachers, said within the next three years 35,322 homes will be built in the Russian Federation. The local Soviets which are to carry out the program are now selecting projects of one, two, three and four family cottages for the village school teachers, and setting aside garden allotments with slightly over half an acre for each family.

Rat-Killing Expert Uses Sly Tricks

VANCOUVER, B. C., Sept. 11 (AP).—James G. Anderson lures rats to extinction with cunning alone.

"If you know rat psychology," said the rodent-wrecker, "you can't miss."

The secret, he says, is that rats are cowards.

One day a few months ago, Anderson and a recording engineer caught 50 rodents in a rat roundup in a Vancouver warehouse. They poked and prodded the prisoners till they began to squeal. Then they recorded their cries.

The amplified recording was played back in the warehouse. Terrified rats stampeded from the building.

This is the chase'-em-away technique. But then Anderson came up with an even more diabolic device.

He and the engineer trapped a lady rat and recorded her lonesome wail. They took the record to another warehouse and turned it on full blast. Gentleman rats came rushing from their ratholes to their doom.

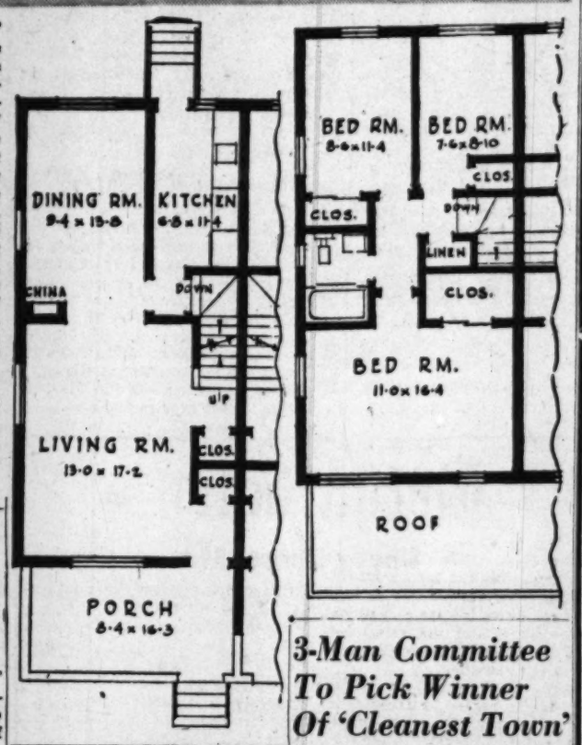
Anderson shoots trapped rats with a special pistol.

He inherits his talent from his father, John Anderson, a rodent-exterminator before him. James runs a pest-exterminating business, but specializes in rodents.

Given 50 men, James thinks he can clean every last rat out of Vancouver.

Planned for Compactness and Livability

Like an attached residence? This unique structure houses three separate family units, with six rooms including three bedrooms in each unit. The downstairs features a large 13 by 17 foot living room with picture window and a 9 by 14 foot dining room. A floor-to-ceiling built-in china cabinet separates the dining and living room. Three bedrooms and bath are upstairs. Large closets boast steel sliding doors. The builder, Cafritz Construction Co., has also included a large covered front porch for those lazy outdoor days. The lower section of the home is built of field stone, the rest is brick. You can inspect this home today through October 10 at 821 Crittenden st. nw. It's one of the 13 houses in the "Homes of '48" exhibition sponsored by the Washington Post



Expert Advice

Here's Method to Maintain Glossy, But Non-Skid Floors

FLOORS in the 13 exhibit houses in the four-week "Homes of '48" showing, which opened today, are so beautiful that The Washington Post asked the builders: "How come?" Several referred us to the E. L. Bruce Co. of Memphis, one of the largest manufacturers of hardwood flooring in the world.

The Bruce Co. gave us a two-page answer. Stripped of its big words, Bruce said hardwood floors need two things to make them a source of pride to their owners: Good quality to begin with, and careful maintenance.

Wax should be applied in a very thin layer and the strokes should be directed with the grain, said Bruce. "Most of the falls that occur on slippery floors are due to improperly applied wax," the firm added. "If wax is put on in a thick coat, it never dries all the way and remains slick."

"Solvent waxes—both paste and liquid—require buffing. And though the average housewife cannot afford an expensive electric polisher she still does not have to do the job on her hands and knees. There is an inexpensive, long-handled device on the market with which the housewife can clean, wax and polish her floors standing up.

"The solvent waxes are for wood and linoleum and should never be used on rubber or asphalt tile. Emulsion waxes which contain water are self-polishing. These are harmful to wood floors. They are recommended for rubber and asphalt tile and are widely used for linoleum, although floor authorities prefer solvent waxes for linoleum.

"A popular waterless floor cleaner, perfected by a large flooring manufacturer, waxes as it cleans, leaving a thin coating of wax that easily buffs to a non-slippery natural sheen making additional waxing unnecessary. This cleaner has very high acceptance in homes where there are children or old people because the wax film is so thin that it reduces the likelihood of slipping.

"Floor scrubbing which was a requisite of good housekeeping in grandma's day is now recognized as being very injurious. Water and strong soaps dissolve the natural oils, leaving wood floors with a splintery surface and dries out composition floors till they age and crack all too soon. Many housewives began to use oil mops to prevent this, but experience soon showed that the oil served only as a dust-catcher.

"Waxed floors came into popularity because of the general dissatisfaction with oil mops. When a floor is properly waxed, its life is extended, its appearance is improved and the work of maintaining it is reduced appreciably since the dust and dirt remain on the surface instead of being embedded in the floor.

"Water or other fluids spilled on a waxed surface should be wiped up immediately to avoid white spots. Dust should be wiped up with a cloth or dry cotton mop since broom bristles wear off wax as fast as walking does.

"Doorways, traffic lanes and kitchen work paths require frequent attention, but with reasonable care the rest of the floors need not be waxed more than three or four times a year.

"The practice of waxing floors began in France at the beginning of the sixteenth century when a soft, unsatisfactory wax was manufactured from beeswax. The idea did not spread very rapidly until the advantages of blending waxes were discovered. Now a whole family of waxes with specialized uses has been developed. Carnauba, product of a Brazilian palm, is the most highly prized ingredient of fine waxes."

1,086,200 Acres Go To Polish Peasants

Warsaw, Poland (AP).—A total of 1,086,200 acres of farmlands which once were a part of great estates have been allocated to Polish peasants in the western territories. Stanislaw Tkaczow, vice minister of agriculture, says 493,200 peasants are now making their homes on this land. In central Poland, he told the newspaper Trybuna Wolnosci, 2,500,000 acres have been parcelled out to 402,524 peasant families.

Since Poland adopted a land reform law in 1945, more than 14 million acres have been allocated to peasants.

3-Man Committee To Pick Winner Of 'Cleanest Town'

Secretary of the Interior Julius A. Krug, Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer, and President Earl O. Shreve of the United States Chamber of Commerce will serve on a three-member committee to select the winner in the National Cleanest Town Contest.

The contest is sponsored annually by the National Clean Up, Paint Up, Fix Up Bureau, of Washington, as a public service to encourage communities to improve their local clean up, paint up, fix up programs and to give national recognition to those communities showing the best results in community development.

Cities entering the contest have until October 1 to submit exhibits of their local programs to the national bureau. These exhibits consist of scrapbooks containing records, newspaper clippings, photographs and reports of results attained in the community.

Austrians Save On U. S. Smokes

VIENNA (AP).—What may be one of the world's strangest black markets is operating in Vienna, where Americans can buy American cigarettes cheaper than the home product. Austrian cigarettes, smaller than the American model and with a taste resembling burning shoe leather, are pegged at 10 and 12 Austrian schillings ($1 and $1.20) per pack of 20. Popular American brands are available almost everywhere at 8 to 10 schillings (80c to $1) per pack.

There are two types of rationed Austrian cigarettes which are cheaper than the others. Only in sheer desperation, however, would an Austrian be caught smoking one.

A reconstruction tax accounts for 50 per cent of the price of the Austrian brands. The government has rejected pleas of the dealers to lower the tax. And thus far no black market operator has agreed to pay it.

Small Fry Suffer

Realty Roundup

THERE are approximately 3000 unsold new homes in the metropolitan Washington area, according to a study by the Washington Business Review, which terms the figure a "normal and apparently healthy condition." The publication added that the 3000 on hand was a comparatively small number since new homes are selling at the rate of approximately 600 per month.

"As long as houses are moving as fast as they are now in relation to the number being built, the market is sound," it added. The review arrived at its figure of 3000 in the following manner:

"In the 24-month period of July 1, 1946, to June 30, 1948, 4488 individual homes were started in the District. During the same time, 2900 were sold. The sales equaled 64.5 per cent of the number of starts. If sales in the outside metropolitan area were at the same ratio, that is, for each 100 houses started, 64.5 per cent were sold, it means that during this two-year period ending June 30, 1948, around 10,000 houses were sold."

This would leave a balance on hand of around 5300 which, together with those on hand in the District, namely 1211, make about 6500 houses that are on the market today in the entire area. However, since this figure is based on a four months' completion date, a rarity today, a readjustment of figures to allow for an 8-to-10-month building time gives a total of approximately 3000 homes.

FRED E. HENDERSON, special assistant to the chairman of the National Security Resources Board in charge of industry relocation problems, will address members of the Washington Building Congress Monday at the Mayflower. Since the construction industry would be one of the first to feel the results of any large decentralization policy, the talk will be of great interest to members.

The NSRB is one of the most active agencies in Washington at present. It is charged with the responsibility for the mobilization of private as well as public resources in case of national emergency, and the safeguarding of essential materials, services and activities.

Any recommendations of the board with regard to decentralization of strategic functions of government and industry could have an important effect on the development of this city.

Bates & Rogers Construction Corp. of Chicago has opened a branch office here in the Washington Building with D. W. Beman, sr., in charge. The office will handle contacts dealing with Government engineering and construction projects. The firm built bridges and portions of the Alcan hwy., part of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge and other large projects.

Thomas H. Urdahl, air conditioning consulting engineer, was recently selected by the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers to give a series of talks on air-conditioning problems in New Orleans, Shreveport, Houston, Dallas and Kansas City. His work here has covered several hundred homes and industrial projects, plus the Washington Cathedral and United States Chamber of Commerce Building.

HEADLINES, the weekly news letter of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, had this to say about the proposed sale of the swank 194-unit Broadmoor Apartments to a cooperative group:

"Political rent control seeks to convince tenants that they should enjoy a vested interest in property worked for, saved for, and paid for by somebody else. How well it succeeds in this was demonstrated recently when owners of a Washington, D. C., apartment building offered the property for sale under a cooperative apartment plan.

"Tenants, who were not interested in buying a home in the cooperative, in effect denied the right of the owners to so dispose of their property, protesting 'I had hoped to spend the rest of my days here . . . I have seen a lot of happiness and sorrow here . . . It has been home to me . . . We don't want to own any property.'"

APPOINTMENT of Walter E. McArthur as Eastern regional manager for the Nelson Stud Welding Division of Morton-Gregory Corp., Lorain, Ohio, has been announced. Jack Godley continues as field engineer for Nelson Stud Welding in the Washington area.

Not Just Four Walls

Today's House Is Complex, Built for Comfort

A BUILDING is no longer four walls and a roof. It is a highly complex mechanical facility.

So says the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau in calling attention to the important contribution of the plumbing and heating industries to the success of the "Homes of '48" exhibition which opened today, sponsored by The Washington Post and 26 participating building firms.

Hidden behind the walls and under the floors of every modern building is a maze of piping. Comparable to the veins and arteries of the body, his piping brings hot and cold water to every plumbing fixture and removes waste water, safely and efficiently.

While the concealed part of the plumbing is as important as the visible part, it is in the plumbing fixtures that the industry has made the most notable strides in recent years.

Colorful, smart, and glamorous, modern plumbing fixtures combine beauty and utility to a high degree. Yet the beauty is more than skin deep. The research activities carried on by nationally known manufacturers has brought forth constant improvement in the durability as well as the styling of plumbing fixtures.

Equally significant are the improvements that have been made in water heaters, water softeners, showers, laundry equipment, and plumbing accessories.

Modern automatic water heaters will deliver water safely and economically at any desired temperature.

Great strides have been made in the heating industry to provide automatic heating with any type of fuel—coal, oil and gas.

Panel heating by means of coils of pipes imbedded in the floors or ceilings has caught popular fancy.

Radiant baseboards are one of the newest and most interesting developments in the heating industry. The radiant baseboard is a hollow cast iron unit through which hot water is circulated. The unit warms the walls on which it is installed and also the floors and thus produces a high degree of comfort.

Radiant heating by means of panels or radiant baseboards has solved the problem of heating the basementless house. Either method will produce warm floors.

Radiators and convectors have been restyled and redesigned for better appearance and greater heating efficiency. Modern radiators take only 40 per cent as much space as their more bulky predecessors.

Advances in the design of equipment have been paralleled by equally significant developments in installation technique and in the testing and rating of boilers under the sponsorships of the Institute of Boiler and Radiator Manufacturers and the Steel Boiler Institute.

Builder, Spare That Tree!

HOME planner or builder, spare that tree!

Like everything else, tree values are up, and you may be destroying a rich asset if you remove or unwittingly damage shade or ornamental trees on the homesite.

That's the advice sounded by B. L. Brittain, New England area manager of the Davey Tree Expert Co., who offers a four-point program to save valuable trees.

1. Call in a tree expert to examine the trees and determine which are worth saving.

2. Let him advise on the strategic location of the house in relation to the most valuable trees.

3. Have him make periodic inspections during actual construction to prevent tree loss or serious injury through grading, improper fills or excess cutting of roots. Improper fill may suffocate a tree and extensive root destruction may cut off its food supply.

4. Heed his advice on where a tree might be moved when building or driveway placements interfere.

"Too many people," states Brittain, "don't realize that it takes 50 or more years for a valuable shade or ornamental tree such as an oak, hard maple or elm to attain mature beauty. Each year, millions of dollars worth of shade trees are destroyed because of lack of knowledge of their worth by home planners. Today's tree values are such that it is good economy for the home owner to consult the expert before and during construction."

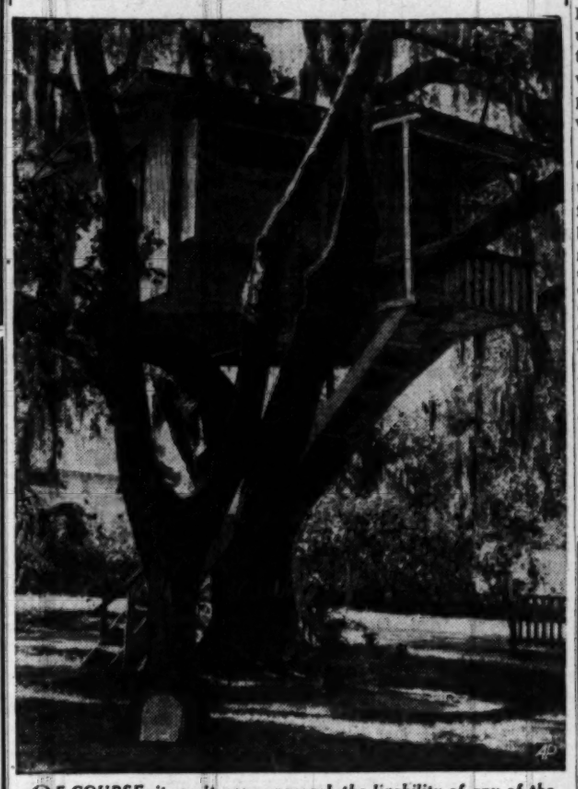
A Bird of a House Is Built in a Tree



OF COURSE, it won't even approach the livability of any of the 13 houses in The Washington Post's "Homes of '48" exhibition, but here's one you can rent right in the midst of the housing shortage. It's up a tree in Bradenton, Fla., has electric lights and running water. It was built in 1927 by Dr. E. E. Moore, who lived in it with his family until he died. The new owner wants to rent the tree house, because he lives in a house on the ground

Bedroom Requires Extra Planning For Daytime Use

Bedrooms should provide day-long use and be more than mere sleeping quarters. The bed need not dominate the room, for comfortable, attractive bed-couches, bed-sofas and even bed-chairs come in many styles. The room can thus function as bedroom by night and sitting-room by day.

A built-in desk with sewing machine folding into one and is useful in such a room. This saves space, yet performs two widely varied duties. Built-in bookshelves further stamp the room as one in which no daytime activity seems out of place. For extra privacy, hinged doors sliding in a ceiling track can shut off one end of the room.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q. The wooden floor of our porch is starting to rot, and we put it in only about six years ago. Should it fail so soon?

A. If there is adequate ventilation under the porch and no evidence of termites, and if you have kept the top surface painted, the floor should last considerably more than six years. Check these three items and see if one of the three is not to blame. If the first or second is the trouble, you had better get expert advice.

Q. The mortar between the bricks in the back of our fireplace is falling out. I can't understand it, for it is all fire clay. What can I do about it?

A. It would be advisable to have the joints raked out as deep as possible and have a good portland cement mortar inserted.

Q. We live in the country, where the question of garbage removal is a serious one. Are those home incinerators practical, and don't they give off an unpleasant odor?

A. They are perfectly practical, and if all the trash from the house is burned with the garbage, the odor, except on very heavy days, should not be noticed. Even then it is not really objectionable.

Q. Is it possible to replace the present doorknobs on my doors with new ones without having the whole lock changed?

A. In all probability the present knobs are on stock spindles and all that will be necessary is to unscrew the knobs and screw the new ones on. Some spindles are threaded at the ends and set screws are used to hold the knobs tight; others have screw holes to receive the screw that holds the knob in place. In either case you can undoubtedly get knobs to fit.

Q. Are these new bright metal sinks practical for the kitchen?

A. Yes; they are. They can stand a good deal of abuse, are easy on china and glass, and are not affected by acids.

Berliners Prepare For Winter Cold

Berlin, Sept. 11 (AP).—In midsummer heat thousands of Germans here are scouring Berlin's suburban forests for trunks and twigs to haul home for firewood. Last winter many Germans burned pieces of their furniture to keep warm in bomb-damaged lodgings.

The next winter, if German Communist threats hold good and unless the Russians relent will be for Berliners the "winter of the blockade," just as this is the "summer of the blockade." Even in midsummer inability to fly in sufficient coal has forced drastic cuts of electricity and crippling of western Berlin's industry and commerce.

The Berlin crisis may be settled by four power negotiation and the blockade lifted before winter comes. But the Communist press now hurls daily jibes at western Berliners: "Can the American fliers feed you through storm and sleet? Will you sit in the cold, dark homes and your children in unheated schools this winter?

Texan Applies Rake Idea to Save Top Soil

AMARILLO, Tex., Sept. 11.—The sight of clouds of good earth blowing away on the winds brought the idea for a plow to save a precious topsoil.

This topsoil, or humus, contains plant food and, according to soil conservationists, "is the 6 inches of earth between humanity and the desert."

A Texas Panhandle farmer turned industrialist, W. T. "Bill" Graham, decided in 1938 that the commonly known mole-board plow was helping create the dust bowl.

The home gardener may get an idea of how Graham's chisel type plow works by pulling a rake through the soil. The mole-board plow is illustrated by pulling a hoe through the soil.

Today his chisel-type plow is being used in many sections of the United States, Canada and Mexico. Graham says that during 1948 about 100,000 of his plows will be produced in two Graham-Hoeme factories here and in Pueblo, Colo.

'Atomic Tomatoes' a Byproduct of Research

By Frank Carey
Associated Press Science Reporter

RADIOACTIVE tomatoes, lemons, pineapples, corn and sugar . . .

Radioactive poultry feed, ducklings, hatching eggs, fertilizers, cattle fodder . . .

Hold it, Mr. and Mrs. Householder and Mr. and Mrs. Farmer!

Such items of the Atomic Age are in existence, but you can't buy them at your chain store or farm supply house. They are some of the many research tools that science is using in its quest to produce more and better food products.

Isotopes—radioactive by-products of A-bomb development—are counterparts of regular elements that help or hinder plant and animal growth. They give off rays which make it possible to study what happens to the regular element in the plant or animal system. They can be followed or "traced" by the signals they give out.

Plants Breathe It

THE scientists cause plants to "breathe in" radioactive carbon in the same way they take in carbon from the atmosphere. Researchers use radioactive forms of zinc, copper and manganese to study how such elements are drawn from the soil. They put radio phosphorus into fertilizers to study how the ordinary phosphorus of the fertilizer is utilized by the plant.

They're using radioactive molybdenum, cobalt, copper and phosphorus to investigate the effect of these soil elements on the health of farm animals.

They're "tagging" viruses, bacteria and harmful insects with radio isotopes in order to increase man's understanding of how diseases and pests attack crops and livestock. They're using isotopes to study the effects of insecticides and fungicides such as sulphur and DDT.

Research with isotopes has not yet brought larger food yields or super-duper fertilizers. Nor has it enabled the farmer to produce blue-ribbon stock at will. But, says the Atomic Energy Commission, give the isotopes time—they haven't been on the job very long.

"Man's oldest industry (agriculture) will be assisted by his newest," says the commission in its latest report to Congress.

Isotopes have been available for research about two years. The first year's agricultural research, says the commission, "raised more questions than it answered, suggesting a multitude of new projects."

Today more than 70 research projects are under way in 26 laboratories and agricultural experiment stations.

Nature's Factories

WHY spend time and money studying how plants utilize carbon from the atmosphere? That's one of nature's biggest secrets. It involves the wonderful process of "photosynthesis" by which plants take the carbon and "manufacture" starches and sugars—food for man and beast.

If the process ever could be duplicated in the laboratory, there never would be any food shortages.

But science has more immediate objectives:

"Some of the discoveries," says the AEC, "will eventually find use in the development of plant strains which yield more heavily or produce more exactly the feed materials desired for better and faster growth of animals."

Researchers at the University of Texas already have found indications of what foods are formed first in certain plants. They say:

"Some of these facts will enable us to choose plants which will produce energy-rich chemical compounds in their first or early stages of growth. This is especially important in the case of range grasses."

How about those radioactive tomatoes and such? What good are they?

The American Smelting and Refining Co., Salt Lake City, has produced radioactive tomatoes by feeding radiosulphur to the growing plants. The idea was to find where sulphur is concentrated in a tomato. It concentrates in the seeds.

Chicken 'Tracing'

RESEARCHERS at the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station found that phosphorus concentrated in the young kernels of corn. They used this radioactive corn as a poultry feed to study the distribution of phosphorus in the chicken's system.

"Such work," says the AEC, "is certain to reveal how to get more plant growth—more food and feed—from the 15 million tons of fertilizer upon which the American farmer spends a half billion dollars every year."

University of Hawaii researchers are using radioiron to study the physiology of the pineapple plant. At the University of California's citrus experiment station, experimenters are dusting radiosulphur on lemons in efforts to make sulphur—a widely used fertilizer—safe for plants in hot weather.

GENERAL ELECTRIC kitchen equipment is the outstanding choice of Washington builders

More and more modern builders are realizing that the kitchen is the busiest room in the house. It's the room where mother spends most of her time; where father is often in the way—tossing his favorite salad or cleaning the fish he caught. The children gather in the kitchen for between-meal snacks and the grocery boy chooses it as the spot to leave his packages. In fact, the kitchen is the heart of the home.

With this in mind, Washington builders are selecting GENERAL ELECTRIC kitchen equipment for modern homes. They find GE adaptability and economy the answer to all modern needs. They know that GE dependability is a proven and accepted fact.

Refrigeration
GE "Spacemaker" refrigerators are luxurious, offering the last word in food preservation, more refrigerator space and the GE heremetically sealed unit—famous for dependability.

Cooking
The most modern features are incorporated in all GE electric ranges. Some models have built-in combination speed and pressure cookers and "telecook" lights which indicate the speed and cooking position with colored lights.

Dish Washing
The GE electric dishwasher does the hard part of washing dishes electrically—automatically. Washes, rinses and air-dries dishes with one simple operation.

Disposall
A GE product, indispensable in the modern kitchen. Disposes of all food waste instantly, automatically, with a simple twist of the wrist.

THE Garba-vator, pictured below, appears to us to be a clever and sanitary answer to the question of what to do until the garbage man comes. The upper unit, which holds the container, will rotate so that the Garba-vator may be installed over picket fences, hedges, ashpits or other obstructions, to swing into position for convenient collection and then back again. The unit boasts a length of chain which may be bolted to the container lid to prevent loss of lid by wind or theft. The supporting post can be installed either in the ground or set in concrete. Height of the unit is adjustable to 42 inches and will accommodate garbage cans up to 16 inches in diameter. The unit is sold without container. The Garba-vator is advertised as tip-proof, dog-proof, rat-proof, wind-proof and kid-proof. No moisture can enter the bottom of the can, a feature which prevents rust and adds years to the life of the container. The unit has been approved as a sanitation device by the sanitation department of the city and county of Denver, Colo., home of the manufacturer, Highland Industries, Inc., 2225 S. Delaware st., Denver. There are no local sales outlets as yet.

Disaster Bares A Black Market

COPENHAGEN (AP).—The "Kjoebenhavn" disaster in June has given the Copenhagen police a clew to the cracking of a big black market gang.

The steamer "Kjoebenhavn" struck a mine on its way from Copenhagen to Aalborg, Jutland. It sank to the bottom with several hundred passengers, and divers went down to recover the bodies.

During police questioning later, a black market operator in Copenhagen revealed that several of his "colleagues" were afraid that the divers would find some trunks with ration cards on the vessel. The ration cards were destined for the black market in Aalborg, he said.

Police have arrested one black market operator in Copenhagen who confessed that he sent 10,000 sugar coupons to a "colleague" in Aalborg. The police are making further investigations, and it is generally expected that a number of arrests are still to be made.

Modern Methods Could Aid Oriental Crop

Manila, Sept. 11 (AP).—Use of modern methods will make ramie the Orient's most valuable crop per acre, an American technician said here. Ramie, or China grass, is an important crop in Southeast Asia but technical difficulties have prevented any important expansion in acreage of the fiber. Fred H. Nissle, ramie consultant to the National Development Co., said Filipino farmers could realize large profits if they could use all the byproducts of ramie.

Utilization of such byproducts requires institution of large-scale processing plants, said Nissle, who is vice president of the Florida Ramie Products, Inc. Another difficult problem is to remove the natural gum from the ramie fibers. Nissle says this problem has been solved in Florida while other experiments are under way in Japan.

Tall Evergreen Hedge Insures Privacy

By Henry B. Aul

THE TALL evergreen hedge fits right into the requirements for inclosure of modern home grounds. A trimmed hedge, more practical than ever before because of excellent motor-driven hedge shears, will give a maximum amount of privacy in the garden or on the terrace for the limited amount of space it occupies. Evergreen foliage, attractive the year around, forms an ornamental background for plants, plantings and architectural features and an effective screen around service sections of the grounds.

It is not too soon to start making plants for late summer and fall planting of evergreens. By September new growth has hardened enough to permit digging the plants with balls of earth around the roots.

In hedge plantings, well rotted or dried manure spaded into the bottoms of the planting holes or the trench will give the plants a foundation for growth. Bone meal may be used if manure is unavailable. The best top soil should be firmed around the roots and watered in. Each spring a side dressing of complete plant food at the rate of 5 or 10 pounds a 100 feet of hedge will keep the plants growing actively.

Juniper Hedge Suggested

JUNIPERS are well suited to the tall evergreen hedge, for they will stand a considerable sweep of wind and they like an open, sunny location. They do not thrive in shade. They are found growing naturally on dry, rock-strewn hillsides; also in low, sandy land approaching marsh conditions.

By careful pruning or shearing of any extra-long side growths most of the columnar junipers can be kept as narrow spires adaptable to limited growing areas. Regardless of the size planted, they should not be spaced closer than 18 inches in the hedge row; 24 or 30 inches will give them a better chance for development.

Among the dozen or more species or varieties of proved worth for hedge planting, the red cedar (Juniperus virginiana) is best known. It has a good green foliage and gray berries.

Cannart's juniper (J. v. canarti) has a form similar to red cedar but is denser in growth, with a deeper green color. It grows as high as 25 feet, if permitted, and requires little trimming.

The columnar Chinese juniper (J. chinensis columnaris) has a much lighter, gray-green foliage. It makes a rapid and slender but compact growth if trimmed yearly.

Number of Yews Available

There are a number of different yew or taxus well-adapted to forming an evergreen hedge of medium to tall stature. They endure shade well and respond to shearing or trimming. The upright Japanese yew (Taxus cuspidata capitata) is a tall pyramidal plant that can be expected to reach an ultimate height of 15 to 20 feet unless restrained. It retains good foliage to the bottom of the plant and in a hedge can be sheared to a perfect wall-like formal shape so thick as to be impenetrable.

Hicks yew (T. media hicksi) is columnar in habit of growth and will attain a height of 6 to 8 feet. Being a compact grower, it requires little shearing along the sides to make a narrow hedge, which may be kept at any desired height.

Hatfield yew (T. media hatfieldi) resembles Hicks yew but has rugged side branches which give it a slightly more conical than columnar shape. It grows naturally to a height of 12 to 15 feet.

Tall Hedge Insures Privacy

hedge can be formed from either the Canada or Carolina hemlock. Both are upright, pyramidal-shaped plants that will grow in sun or partial shade. The Carolina is the slower, more compact growing. Hemlocks grow naturally in groups and merge easily into one another when they are planted close together. Where space is limited and they are planted in a hedge to be kept clipped to a desired height, it is not practical to restrain this height to less than 4 feet, and a height of 5 or 6 feet is better.

Tall, broad growing hedges should not crowd the property line, sidewalk or curb. The distance to allow will depend on the height to which the hedge is to be grown. One to be developed to a height of 6 feet should be set in from the property line, walk or curb, at least 30 inches. If it is to be developed to 10 feet, set it in 3 feet or more.

If small sizes are being planted, they may be spaced 18 to 36 inches apart, depending on how fast the gardener requires a solid hedge. Large sizes being planted for immediate effect generally are spaced at least 3 feet apart.

Tall growing evergreens planted in a hedge are sheared just as new growth is starting in the spring and again when new growth has about stopped in late July or early August. Shearing, which shortens but causes subsequent growth to become thicker, is used on hedge plantings.

The best shape for the tall hedge, in cross section, is a column or cone slightly wider at the bottom than at the top and rounded over the top. This permits the sun or light to reach and nurture the lowest foliage. The narrow top lessens the possibility of heavy snow crushing the hedge.

Only 6108 Czech Plants 'Private'

PRAGUE (AP).—Out of a total of 19,390 industrial units in Czechoslovakia, only 6108 remain under private ownership, the state bureau of statistics has reported. Out of the 13,282 publicly held units, some 3500 are in industries that have been nationalized. The remainder have been confiscated by the state from former German owners, persons convicted of treason and persons convicted of wartime collaboration. Most of these are expected to be nationalized.

The metallurgy industry represents the largest number of industrial units, with 2098, of which all but 603 have been nationalized. In the food industry, 1856 units were listed, with 504 still privately owned. The textile industry had 1572 units with 449 in private hands. The building industry has been 80 per cent nationalized, the builders magazine Stavime has reported.

Progress in Greek Agricultural Program Noted

Athens, Sept. 11 (AP).—Rapid progress has been made in most of the agricultural rehabilitation projects planned by the American mission for aid to Greece, now underway. Agricultural officials say the program is "bound to brighten materially the farm outlook for Greece."

Greece has never been able to produce enough food for the needs of its people. Greek farming has been primitive, and land has been "used and abused for many centuries." The 25 million dollar agricultural program of the American mission was designed to reduce to a minimum the gap between the food produced and the food consumed in Greece.

Part of the funds were used the past year to procure 40,000 tons of fertilizer, and 16,000 tons of sulphur and copper sulphate for spraying vineyards and orchards. In addition, 8000 tons of other pesticides and insecticides were imported. To improve the quality of Greek crops, the mission brought in 2750 tons of certified seed wheat and other seeds. To modernize Greek farming large quantities of machinery and equipment, ranging from tractors to spare parts, were brought here. Greek production of vitally needed equipment is also being expanded with mission help.

Legumes to Rescue

Many millions of acres that have been used intensively to grow war and emergency food crops can be rehabilitated most efficiently by seeding them down to grasses and legumes. These crops are the keystone in the restoration and maintenance of our soils in a permanently productive state.

Siberia Planting Wheat in Stubble

LONDON (AP).—Collective farms of Siberia and northern Kazakhstan are planting winter wheat over thousands of hectares in accordance with the method proposed by Trofim Lysenko, president of the U. S. S. R. Academy of Agricultural Science, the Tass Agency reports.

Previously, winter wheat crops in Siberia invariably froze. Lysenko's experiments in sowing it in the stubble ofspring wheat proved successful. Wheat planted last autumn in stubble land over an area of 250 acres survived the winter and provided a good yield. In some sections it ran to more than three tons of grain per hectare (2.4 acres).

Let's Get Down To Earth

It's Planting Season For Tulips, Narcissus

THE GARDENER

By James H. Beattie

Darwin tulips in bloom provide a gorgeous spring display

TULIPS and narcissus are among the earliest and best of our early spring flowers, but unless the bulbs are planted within the near future the results may disappoint.

As a home yard flower the narcissus group is almost free from fault. (Botanically, daffodils and jonquils are narcissus). They spend the winter outdoors and the bulbs may be left in the same location for years. The plant withstands considerable neglect and it is often left to grow in clumps in out of the way corners of the yard.

It is easily smothered by high grass and weeds or by shrubbery and really fine flowers are produced only when the plant has a reasonable amount of care. Many make the mistake of cutting the tops before they die down about mid-summer. The after-blooming period is the time when the bulbs develop and store nutrients for the flower crop of the following spring.

About mid-summer the bulbs may be lifted and stored in a cool, well-ventilated place until planting time in autumn. Lifting and dividing are not required oftener than once every two or three years, but unless done every five or six years the plants become so crowded that poor blooms are produced.

Fertile Soil a Necessity

NARCISSUS will thrive on almost any fertile, well-drained soil, but it's well to avoid both heavy clays and light sands. For the limited space usually devoted to bulbs, it is easy to replace unfavorable soil with a few bushels of suitable material.

An abundance of organic matter, liberal fertilization and a sunny location are essential. Successful growers recommend the preliminary preparation of the planting site by mixing compost, dolomitic limestone, commercial fertilizer plus some extra superphosphate into the soil. This treatment before planting is usually followed by the annual application of a mixed fertilizer after the blooming period.

While 11 groups of narcissus are recognized, only 4 are of interest to the average person who is not a specialist on the subject. Only a few varieties need be selected for a fine showing of spring blooms.

Trumpet group—Robert Sydenham and Emperor.

Medium Trumpet group—Sir Watkin, Croesus.

Poetax Narcissus group—Cheerfulness, Orange Cup.

Poeticus Narcissus group—Ornatus, Recurvis.

Late September and early October are regarded as the best planting dates in this area. The bulbs are set from 4 to 6 inches apart depending on size. Planting depths depend on soil conditions. As a general rule, the top of the bulb should be covered with about 4 inches of mellow soil. They should not be covered with heavy, impervious earth as such will interfere with the emergence of the shoots.

If it is impossible to properly prepare the planting site, one should at least cover the bulbs with mellow soil and it is also an excellent plan to mulch the surface with compost. Narcissus bulbs are not usually injured by rodents.

Spring Displays

SHOWINESS of the tulip during spring creates a picture that is difficult to surpass. Fortunately almost any yard having a deep, well-drained, fertile soil and an abundance of sunshine can have a display of this beautiful flower. The tulip requires more care than the narcissus, largely because they must be protected from destruction by mice. The failure of tulips to appear in spring is nearly always due to the destruction of the bulbs by mice.

Tulips are similar to the narcissus in their cultural requirements. They too, demand a very fertile soil. The plant is a heavy feeder and needs an abundance of organic matter and commercial fertilizer. It is especially necessary that the plants be liberally fertilized at the end of the blooming season.

Many make the mistake of cutting the stems too long thereby robbing the plant of its foliage and impairing its ability to develop the bulbs and store nutrients for the flowers to be borne the following spring.

Foliage should be allowed to remain undisturbed until it dies down about mid-summer, after which the bulbs may be lifted and stored in a thin layer on a wire mesh bottom tray until planting time in autumn. Before planting, it is an excellent plan to have the bulbs examined and treated, if necessary, for insects and diseases.

Many Varieties Available

So many fine varieties of tulips are available that suggestions about sorts for planting are necessarily incomplete and intended only as a general guide. The ones we are naming are old favorites and highly satisfactory for planting under average conditions.

Cottage tulips — Inglescombe and Mrs. Moon, yellows. Grenadier, red. Avalanche, white.

Darwin's—Farncombe Sanders, William Pitt, City of Haarlem, reds. Pride of Haarlem, old rose. Bishop, purple. Zwanenburg, white. Clara Butt, pink. Allard Pierson, maroon.

Breeder's tulip—Louis XIV, bronze.

Moles and mice are responsible for a very large proportion of the disappointments in growing tulips. Moles make the burrows and the mice follow and destroy the bulbs. Poisoning and trapping of both moles and mice helps, but the safest plan is to prevent the pests from getting at the bulbs. This can be done by placing a barrier of sheet metal or wire netting completely around the tulip bed. Some use thin masonry walls for the same purpose. Whatever material is used it should extend a foot or more into the soil and a few inches above the surface to prevent entrance from this location.

Large tin cans with the tops cut out and perforated with small holes for drainage provide excellent insurance for bulbs against mouse injury. The cans are buried in the ground and the bulbs planted in them in exactly the same manner as in open beds. Large cans only should be used. The 5-gallon size is excellent but they must be thoroughly clean any very small quantities of oil or other materials are likely to be injurious to the bulbs.

Crushing Speeds Curin

To improve the curing of coarse-stemmed hay, some farmers use an implement known as a mower-crusher. This cuts the hay in the usual manner and then passes it through crushing rolls. These crack the stems and speed up the curing of the hay in the swath. After this the hay is raked and windrowed in the usual way, says the Department of Agriculture.

Visitors were told that the oil well long ago had gone dry. But museum officials have found an antiquated steam engine and pump. A continuous flow arrangement will be worked out with oil from a stock tank pouring back into the ground.

BACK TO SCHOOL THEY GO

Need for Expanded Plants, More Teachers, Better Pay Is Urgent as New Term Starts

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

AS STEPHEN LEE FISHER* and thousands of boys and girls start back to school this year, the District, like other communities, must ask itself the question:

"Can we afford to economize on education?

Teachers here and elsewhere are asking for pay raises to match the increased cost of living.

School boards whose budgets have not kept pace with sky-rocketing building costs must expand educational plants if every child is to have a seat in a classroom.

The first wave of war babies enrolled in the schools a year ago. Birth statistics show that the number will increase this year and continue to grow during the next five years.

The United States Office of Education estimates that throughout the Nation, enrollments in kindergartens and first grades will be nearly 300,000 above last year.

Additional Services Demanded

DISTRICT school officials expect 4500 more children in kindergartens and first grades when schools open tomorrow than they had a year ago. Total enrollment is expected to top last year's 91,983.

Parents increasingly are demanding additional school services. They want their children to attend schools equipped to teach music and art. They want them to have the advantages of large play fields, gymnasiums, auditoriums and of visual education. All of this costs money.

School boards, like those in the Washington area, that administer segregated school systems, will feel the pressure to equalize school programs and facilities. This means new buildings.

All of these factors point to another crisis year in education and the need for a solution to the problem of school financing.

School officials in the District and other communities say that false economies in school spending have caused the teacher shortage and have forced them to hire large numbers of unqualified teachers, particularly in the elementary grades. Overcrowded classes and part-time schooling have been another result.

They say there is an urgency in providing schools not found in the need for highways, bridges or other municipal construction.

Children Can't Wait

DISTRICT Board of Education President Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, in a letter to the Commissioners last year, declared:

"Growing children do not stand still to wait for inadequate budgets to catch up with them. Their school life may be over before the needed school facilities are ready."

Mrs. Doyle, who has been a member of the local board for 20 years and its president since 1935, said she has found that citizens in general are in sympathy with the expenditure of money for schools.

"They want a professional staff adequately trained and paid and good buildings well equipped.

"It is a trite expression," Mrs. Doyle said, "but still true. Good schools are the best investment for the future that a community can make."

Commissioners Control

DISTRICT residents with no say in the raising or spending of tax funds have not been able to express their opinion on school expenditures.

Controlling the budget are the Commissioners, appointed by the President and Congress. Both have committed the District to yearly balanced budgets with no borrowing for school construction.

The current school budget of $25,102,683 is $7,260,317 less than what school officials estimated as their need in the fiscal year ending next June.

The Commissioners have asked that estimates for the 1950 budget not include funds for new capital outlays.

They have warned that additional spending for schools will mean a local sales tax.

Last spring the Board of Education asked for pay raises for teachers equal to those granted Government employes and for sick leave for teachers. Both were denied, the first by Congress and the second by the Commissioners.

Falling Behind

STATISTICS compiled by the National Education Association show that the District is falling behind in salaries paid teachers. In a comparison of average salaries in the 20 largest cities in the country, the District ranks thirteenth, with two of the States, New York and New Jersey, known to have better salary schedules, not reporting.

The District scale ranges from $2500 to $4000 for teachers with BA degrees and from $3000 to $4500 for those with MA degrees. Washington teachers when ill must pay salaries of substitutes.

A further source of dissatisfaction among local teachers is an inequity in salary scales which gives teachers with master degrees who transfer from schools outside the city as much as $400 more a year than received by veteran Washington teachers. The school board asked for corrective legislation but, in the rush of adjournment, Congress failed to pass the measure.

Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning estimated that the total cost of the pay raise, sick leave and solution of the inequity would have cost the taxpayer $1,980,000 annually.

No $4500 Salaries

ACTUALLY, not a single teacher now in the public school system receives the maximum $4500 salary. When the present schedules went into effect in 1947, teachers were given a flat increase generally of $150 above the salary they then were receiving. The law provided for 15 annual increases of $100.

Teachers believe they should receive the $100 credits for each year they already have spent in the service.

Dr. Corning said that if full placement were granted, teachers would receive raises ranging from $100 to $1000, at a cost of two million dollars a year to the taxpayer. Neither he nor the Board of Education recommends this expenditure.

Last year Washington schools had 477 temporary teachers. All but 64 were in the white schools and 245 in the white elementary grades.

2 Teacher Sources

THE local school system depends upon its two teachers' colleges, Wilson and Miner, to supply teachers.

Wilson, the school for whites, last year graduated 60 students, 24 qualified to teach in elementary grades and 36 in secondary schools.

College President Walter E. Hager expects enrollments this year to hit prewar levels. Wilson will have a senior class of from 70 to 75 students, a junior class of 100, a sophomore class of 125 and from 175 to 180 freshmen.

Despite increased enrollments, Dr. Hager sees no relief in the shortage of elementary teachers.

Colleges are not graduating sufficient students now to fill vacancies created by retirements, much less make up the backlog of vacancies. Before the war, twice as many students prepared to teach in elementary grades as in high schools, he said.

The high school teacher has a little better social status than the elementary teacher and now that requirements to teach in elementary grades are the same as those for secondary schools, more students are showing an interest in secondary teaching, he said.

Status Quo Budget

THE District school system now is operating under what school officials call a status-quo budget. It barely enables them to meet current expenses and to build the schools needed to eliminate and prevent part-time schooling. It fails to provide for the replacement of worn-out buildings or for the purchase of sites for future schools.

The Board of Education last year requested $11,600,000 for new school construction and was granted $4,965,683.

A year ago Superintendent Corning asked for a 50-million-dollar Federal loan to give the District a first-class educational plant. Neither the Commissioners nor Congress indicated any interest in the plan.

Replacement Need

THE need for building replacements was dramatized last year by two events—a month-long strike by Negro students at Browne Junior High School, when they were assigned to attend classes in two out-of-date elementary school buildings, and the closing by order of the fire marshal and the office of the building inspector of auditoriums in four schools.

Browne Junior High School parents complained because their children were not attending schools equipped with cafeterias, gymnasiums, science laboratories or with shops for woodwork, sheetmetal, sewing and cooking.

The Negro students returned to classes in the Blow and Webb

*One Year Ago

STEPHEN LEE FISHER was just going on 5, and naturally wasn't too sophisticated, when the picture at left was made a year ago. That was when his mother registered him for kindergarten. But 12 rugged months can do a lot to mature a man, and it has been an eventful year, quite apart from Elementary Letter Blocks and Finger Painting I.

Stephen has grown 3 inches, gained 8 pounds and has lost his tonsils and two teeth. The family has moved from 1735 New Hampshire ave. nw. to a new apartment at 3371 23d st. se., which means Stephen will transfer from John Quincy Adams School to Stanton Elementary.

A lot of other young families have been moving to Southeast Washington, and Stanton will be so crowded that Stephen will be able to attend only half a day. But he'll be in the first grade, and a real scholar, with books and pencils and everything. Furthermore, he'll be 6 years old next Thursday, and a man of that age faces stern duty with the grin he's giving his mother in the picture above, just made.

Last year we gave Stephen a send-off in verse, and we're reprinting it today for the new crop of 5-year-olds just starting up the ladder which he once regarded with a bit of mistrust:

I'm really glad to go to school
(They say I'll like it fine)
But now I'm here and all dressed up
I miss some friends of mine.

I wish they'd let me bring my dog,
My trike, my truck, my skates.
It's when I think of them at home
I sort of hesitates.

I guess the teacher's pretty swell,
But Mother's not so bad,
And she'll be lonesome I am sure,
And that's why I am sad.

A person's got to go to school,
And life can't all be fun
But schools can't be as pleasant as
A sandbox in the sun.

A cricket in a can,
A hornet in a bottle, but
I've got to be a man.

I now I've got to go to school—
With all my books I'll strive
But gee, it wouldn't be so bad
To keep on being five.

Equal Facilities Fight Aggravates Crisis

Old Dominion's Got Troubles

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

FOR generations, the proud Old Dominion has built a reputation of calm, mature economic judgment, not easily swayed by cries of "crisis."

But today these cries have reached a deafening crescendo in the field of educational needs throughout the State, and unless Virginia produces one of its financial "miracles," informed observers predict, this is one time there will come the familiar answer, "There is no crisis."

Virginia, at the moment, still retains its proud claim of a debt-free State, and it has not enacted the sales tax abhorred by many Governors in recent years—but something is likely to "give" in the not distant future.

As in the rest of the Nation, rising costs in Virginia have turned normal educational needs into major problems. Virginia faces the same, familiar parade of obstacles—bulging schools in many areas, lack of teachers, lack of sufficient funds to maintain old schools and build new ones.

Some Special Problems

BUT Virginia has some special problems of its own.

Recent Federal Court action directing that Negro schools in three counties be placed on an equal level with white schools in buildings, equipment, instruction and courses, has brought a scramble of activity in many other counties for such equalization of facilities.

State expenditures for public education in the counties and cities of Virginia rose 218 per cent from the school year of 1936-37 to 1946-47, from $7,447,114.93 to $23,690,783.44, exclusive of retirement funds or funds for the State Department of Education.

Local funds spent by counties and cities in the same period increased 92.5 per cent, from $18,300,523.87 to $35,234,473.90.

The State points out that its percentage of increase in funds for schools has been far greater than the increase in expenditures of countries and cities.

Tax Sources Lag

COUNTIES and cities reply that their main source of tax funds—real estate and personal property taxes—has not increased anywhere near as much as the State's tax sources—income taxes of various kinds, taxes on gasoline, liquor, tobacco, etc. Therefore, say many of the localities, the State must make a far greater contribution to education.

The State's only source of loan-money to localities for regular school construction, the State literary fund which dates back to 1810, has "dried up" completely.

And only last Wednesday the State Supreme Court of Appeals ruled out as unconstitutional the legislation which would have put into this fund five million dollars of new money borrowed from the State retirement fund.

Per Capita Costs

TO ADD to the many-faceted problem of funds, some Virginia counties, in contrast to the bulging school population areas, have sharply decreasing populations—and decreasing numbers of students—resulting both in abnormally mounting per capita cost per pupil, and less local funds to pay the costs.

In an effort to aid this particular situation of impractical per capita costs and a decrease in educational effectiveness which often follows in efforts to cut these costs, and to improve school instruction in general, State Superintendent of Public Instruction G. Tyler Miller has attempted to promote regional schools to serve one or more cities and counties.

To attempt to bring this about, by reducing the number of small high schools, Miller is seeking to cut the number of high schools in the State by 500, to an estimated 263.

This issue, too, like the others, has its particular ramifications.

For one thing, it has added to the need for construction of larger schools in some areas—although once constructed they will be cheaper to operate. And it also encounters strong opposition from parents in many sections, on grounds that some pupils will have to travel greater distances to the regional schools.

And it also figures in the Negro-white equalization of school facilities' disputes—where regional high schools have generally been recommended, and opposed by many Negroes. The situation here is that with twice as many whites as Negroes in a given area, one accredited Negro regional school would draw Negroes from farther away than two accredited white regional schools, requiring more travel time for the Negro pupils.

The Greatest Concern

THOSE, then, are some of the broader problems on Virginia's elementary and secondary education scene. Plus, of course, such others as salaries insufficient to attract teachers, and unsatisfactory living conditions and working conditions to hold on the job the teachers that are hired.

"Some improvement," however, has been made in the teacher supply, despite these factors, says State Superintendent Miller, and the State's greatest concern must be school construction.

Officials say there has been no general construction program throughout the State since the days of the New Deal's Public Works Administration.

556,265 Enrolled

IN THE 1942-43 school year Virginia had a public school enrollment of 556,265. In 1946147 it was up to 565,074. While no figures are available for the 1947-48 term, or estimates for this year of school, greater enrollments are anticipated.

Last January Hugh L. Sulfridge, principal of Lane High School, Charlottesville, Va., made a study of school needs for the State and estimated that with funds available it would take "10 to 15 years to bring the State's school plant up to satisfactory standards."

The cost? For elementary and high schools in cities and counties, white and Negro, $257,650,000.

During 1946-47, as a basis of comparison, in the Virginia school expenditures of $58,925,257.34 from all sources, Federal, State, county and city funds, $4,962,186.08 was spent for capital outlay—buildings, land, equipment, school buses and alterations of old buildings.

At least 35 of Virginia's 100 counties, and one of its 26 cities, Bristol, apparently are convinced that their only way out of this financial dilemma is State aid of some kind.

In appeals to Gov. William M. Tuck, they have asked for a special session of the General Assembly, which most of them want to adopt some kind of a sales tax to provide school funds.

'No Cause for Complaint'

Maryland Has Come Far in Two Years

By Edward Ryan
Post Reporter

A YEAR AGO the talk among Maryland school officials was of vast postwar building needs. Now there are some new buildings open, others being planned.

DR. PULLEN

Dr. Thomas G. Pullen, Maryland's state superintendent of schools, pictures the situation this way:

"We're so much better off today than we hoped two years ago we would be that we have no cause for complaint."

Dr. Pullen said Maryland is now well supplied with high school teachers, and still has a shortage of elementary school teachers.

On the building side, he estimated that 50 million dollars worth of school construction projects have been placed under contract, and millions more will be under contract soon.

Last May the State Legislature authorized 80 million worth of bond issues to be raised locally, and Dr. Pullen said it was expected that authority for another 60 to 70 million in school bond issues will be asked early in 1949.

Signs of progress in dealing with the shortage of elementary teachers are also appearing.

MARYLAND counts heavily for its supply of new teachers on the four State-teaching-training institutions—at Towson, Frostburg, Salisbury, and Bowie. Enrollments in them are now running about twice what they were in wartime—and about half what they should be to meet teaching needs. The State board of education has recently ap-

Alexandria Attacks Its Space Problems

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

ALEXANDRIA last month started a four-year school building program designed to solve its space problems for 10 years. The program will add 142 classrooms, increasing the existing by more than half. It also includes a $500,000 gymnasium, construction of cafeterias and libraries in some schools, and general renovation of other buildings.

However, there are two "ifs" involved:

1. School needs were estimated from known birth rates in the city. A substantial population increase would throw the whole program off.

2. The City Council has appropriated less than half the money needed and has almost reached its bonded limit. No further funds will be available until the city revises its real estate assessments or redeems outstanding bonds.

The school board divided its needs into two groups—schools needed now, and those that will be needed by 1952. The City Council has appropriated the $2,837,500 requested for Group 1.

Cost of the program was estimated at six million dollars by the school board last winter. Bids received on the first school, however, showed these figures were 25 per cent too low. The school board decided to go as far with group 1 as it can and worry then about getting the rest of the money.

What the city can be sure of now, besides the Theodore H. Ficklin School now under construction in northeast Alexandria, is a new Negro high school and additions to George Mason, Maury, MacArthur and Mount Vernon Elementary Schools. The Ficklin School is expected to be ready next fall. Work on the others will start this year.

A Hectic Year for Beginners

First Grader Needs a Break

By Adelaide Kerr

Associated Press Newsfeature Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Watch your step, Mom and Dad, if Junior is starting to school for the first time this year.

What you do right now is going to make a lot of difference in how he likes school and how he gets along in it.

Experts say a lot of well-meaning parents actually turn their children away from school without realizing what they are doing. Here are some friendly tips on how you should behave, from Dr. S. Harcourt Peppard, acting head of the New York Bureau of Child Guidance of the New York Board of Education:

"Every child is a little fearful about going to school for the first time—even those who pretend not to be. The cure is for parents to take the attitude that school is a pleasant place and that going there is natural and part of the child's growing up. Keep this attiiude before him.

"Please, never use the school or the teacher as a threat. If you say to your child, as some parents do. 'Just wait till the teacher sees you do that!' he is likely to get the impression that school is a stern, strict place and will begin to dislike it before he sees it.

"Remember that education means more than book knowledge. At first, the child's learning to get along with his playmates is more important than learning his ABC's, because this sets the pattern of how he gets along with other people and what kind of a citizen he makes. So don't worry too much if Johnny does not lead his reading class at first, if he gets along well with his schoolmates.

Security at Home

"ENCOURAGE your child to tell you about school. But if he does not respond, don't press him. He may just be sitting there like a bump on a log in the beginning and so does not feel very proud of himself. If you press him to talk, it may make him very unhappy. So just be ready with a hot lunch when he comes home, and wait for developments. And don't forget that one of the most important assets to a child's school success is knowing that he is loved and secure at home."

Educators say that the way Junior's parents behave about school is more important than ever this year, for several reasons.

In the first place, the first big crop of war babies is starting to school. A lot of these moppets were born into topsy turvy family conditions. Some grew up without a father's companionship for the first few years. Others will never know anything more of their fathers than a photograph and medals.

Some grew to school age in grandpa's house. Others lived "doubled up" with another family in space scarcely large enough for one. So, many of them suffer from a sense of insecurity and have some psychological quirks that need to be ironed out.

Second, this year's beginners probably will make the biggest first grade class Uncle Sam ever sent to school. The United States Office of Education estimates that 2,618,000 youngsters will enter first grade public and private schools this year. That is 168,000 more than it estimated for 1947-48 and more than any year on its records. The war babies will be part of 28,308,000 youngsters expected to jam American public and private grade and high schools in 1948-49.

Makeshift Equipment

THIRD, the schools themselves in many places leave a lot to be desired. Hundreds have been outgrown like old shoes. Buildings are decrepit. Equipment is out of date. Classrooms are badly overcrowded and teachers overworked.

Surveys by the National Education Association in 1947 brought out some tack-sharp facts:

More than 790,000 youngsters in about 200 cities go to school in buildings erected in the last century. Fifty-four cities out of 220 reported half-day sessions chiefly in the lower grades because of overcrowding. Thousands of youngsters are going to school in quonset huts, trailers, churches, halls and other educational makeshifts.

Finally, there is the teacher shortage, which NEA experts estimate at about 100,000. As a result, some war babies will be taught by those who are not qualified to teach, but who are now sitting in teacher's seat because the superintendent had to hire some one.

So watch your step when Junior starts toward the little red schoolhouse this year and see that you don't put any stumbling blocks in his path yourself.

Jailed Nazi Leader Scoffs At Idea of Reeducation

By Don Doane

REGENSBURG, Germany, Sept. 11 (AP).—Can a veteran dyed-in-the-wool Nazi be reeducated to democracy?

Hopeful Americans have been trying to reeducate the 3500 Germans in this internment and labor camp for Nazis—and are optimistic that they have made some progress.

But "it can't be done," says Hans Fritzsche, once one of Hitler's top propagandists who is serving a nine-year labor sentence for his part in teaching Germans to be Nazis.

Originator and director of the reeducation program here is German-born Marold Greene, 24-year-old veteran of United States military and military intelligence service.

Library Used

INFORMATION is the base of Greene's reeducation program. He has helped build up a camp library of 5000 books—ranging from comics to Goethe—and stacks of magazines and newspapers. German newscasts and the United States State Department's "Voice of America" broadcasts are piped through the camp's loudspeaker system.

Prisoners elect their own representatives in the camp's interior administration. Increasing numbers of prisoners are taking part, but officials admit the response could be much better.

Fritzsche says all this is doing no good. He maintains the camp inmates are stronger Nazis now than two years ago.

"They are falling back into Nazism chiefly because they think they are being treated unjustly by being held here ever since the war without trial," he said. "Also, they read in the papers and hear from friends about the weakness and corruption of the present 'democratic' German government, and they decide it is worse than Nazism."

Atrocities Cited

ASKED what he—a veteran propagandist—would do if given the task of reeducation in his camp. Fritzsche smiled and said:

Well, of course, men of my age can't really be reeducated. But they can still learn something. They can and they must learn what mistakes were made and what crimes were committed by Nazism. This I consider it my duty to teach them, and I am trying to do it.

"Why most of these people in here don't even believe that four million Jews were murdered, and they claim that a lot of the other crimes charged to Nazism are just Allied propaganda. They regard the Nuernberg trials as a swindle.

"But I sat through that trial (Fritzsche was acquitted, only to be convicted later by a German denazification court) and I learned from the Nazis' own lips that these things are true. These inmates will believe me when I tell them such things, when they would not believe a non-Nazi.

"The thing I would do for these prisoners would be to provide them with complete records of the Nuernberg trials, so they could see for themselves."

More Teachers Aim of Drive At Ohio State

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 11.—Education officials believe that the United States will need a million new teachers within the next 16 years. Furthermore, according to estimates of the National Education Association, the country will need 10,000 elementary and 5000 high school principals, 5000 town and city superintendents, 2000 county superintendents and 1000 college presidents.

To meet this problem, a special committee of Ohio State University's College of Education inaugurated a campaign in December, 1946, aimed at recruiting new members to the sadly depleted ranks of the teaching profession. A special "College of Education" indoctrination day with high school seniors as honor guests, was a spring quarter campaign feature.

Another measure was the university's recent establishment of eighty-eight four-year tuition scholarships in elementary education, available to qualified students in every county of the State. The latest effort of the committee's teacher recruitment campaign was the recent publication of a promotional booklet entitled, "Look Into Teaching."

The pamphlet was designed by the students in the university's school of fine and applied arts, under the direction of Professor Manuel Barkan.

Equal Facilities Fight Highlights Virginia Crisis

Next regular session of the State Legislature is in 1950. It is generally conceded that no special session could be held before early 1949.

Sales Tax 'Last Resort'

GOVERNOR TUCK, like his predecessor, former Governor Darden, has vigorously opposed a State sales tax, "except as a last resort."

Last February, the Legislature passed Governor Tuck's own tax program, offered in opposition to a sales tax. It called for increasing taxes by 14 million dollars through raising State income taxes, corporation income taxes, public service corporation gross receipt taxes, and some license taxes.

All shapes and forms of sales taxes have been proposed for Virginia in recent years. The Moses School Study Commission in December, 1947, recommended a sales tax of 2 per cent, estimated to raise 23 million dollars a year, and other levies to raise about 12 million dollars more to help meet educational needs.

There have been proposals for a 3 per cent sales tax; proposals for taxes on only certain items, and proposals for sales taxes at the wholesale level only.

Counter-proposals to the sales tax include such varied suggestions as added taxes on gasoline, tobacco, liquor, and diverting funds from other uses, such as road funds.

In Emergency Only

IN COMMENT on the requests for a special session of the Legislature, Governor Tuck on August 18, told the commission on State and local revenues and expenditures that a special session should be called "only in response to real emergency conditions."

School needs in Virginia, he said, "may have been exaggerated," and the commission, created last winter but called to organize long before such a group would normally meet, was directed to probe the situation.

Earlier, Governor Tuck had expressed the view that the cries for a special session was an "organized, concerted campaign," and set about to investigate.

To each county and city which had submitted such a plea he sent a questionnaire, calling for names and address of persons who appeared before each governing body or school board in favor or opposition to a special session.

He asked whether public hearings had been held, whether the board vote was unanimous, and if not, names of those voting for a special session.

Called High-Handed

THIS questionnaire brought scattered reaction from several sections of the State, where some voices were raised challenging it as "high-handed."

While the Governor did not indicate who he was accusing of organizing a campaign for a special session, Robert F. Williams, director of the Virginia Education Association, denied emphatically that his group had anythng to do with the resolutions sent to Tuck.

Several divisions of the VEA last year called for a sales tax for school needs, but the VEA recently has refrained from public comment on the issue.

Governor Tuck has stated on previous occasions that he believes the school construction problem is one for the localities themselves to solve.

In a letter to Delegate Robert Whitehead, who has proposed a special session in January, 1949, to pass a wholesale level sales tax raising 40 million dollars and expiring in June, 1950, Tuck said that real estate tax rates for Virginia's counties were less than half of those for the Nation as a whole.

'Nothing Right'

ONE view of county attitude on this was given by Robert Lane Anderson, newly elected mayor of Marion, Va., and editor of the Smyth County News, speaking at an educational conference last month.

In "ability to pay for school needs," he said, "Smyth County ranked just in the middle of the 100 Virginia counties last year . . .

"Two weeks ago the State Board of Education received a letter from parents of 225 children attending the Allison Gay Junior High School, which includes the first to tenth grades. In 1942 the schoolhouse there burned down, and a temporary building was built to last two to three years—and is still occupied.

"The parents told the State school board," said Anderson, "they will not send their children to school if they must go to school in that building. It has everything wrong with it and nothing right, they said."

Four months earlier, said Anderson, the man who had been chairman of the county school board for 12 years resigned, saying "he was tired of being caught in the middle between the ever-increasing demands of school patrons and the unwillingness of the taxing authorities, both local and State, to furnish the means to meet the demands . . .

"Close on his heels, our superintendent resigned."

Cost of Modernizing

CURRENT budget of the county, said Anderson, is $773,000. "Of that," he said, "$553,000 will be expended on school operations, or 70 per cent." Of the $773,000 budget, he said, county residents pay $206,000 in direct taxes to the county, of which $106,000 goes to the schools.

Present assessed value of the school plant, he said, is six million dollars, with an estimate of three and one-half million dollars to build and modernize facilities. General tax levy in the country is $1.60 per hundred dollars valuation, he said, and the school tax levy $2.10.

"It would cost us $150,000 a year to modernize our schools," said Anderson, "and 70 per cent more on school and local levies to finance it over a 30-year period . . . We don't feel that is the answer."

Because of their far more closely knit political setup, and with far more power over local affairs, most cities in Virginia are in a better comparable position than the counties for raising funds for school construction—to which the State does not contribute.

Survey Under Way

MANY counties, in addition, face sharp divisions of opinions among their own population when it comes to such issues as selling bonds to raise construction funds. This is particularly acute where counties have sharply divided rural and urban populations which often cannot agree on either needs or school locations.

Presently under way in the State is the most intensive survey ever attempted of specific needs in every area, and a census of existing facilities.

"We must know that before we can do anything else," said State Superintendent Miller, who feels that the Sulfridge estimate of 257 million dollars "is too rough an estimate."

Superintendents of each locality are being asked by Miller to list "immediate to two-year needs, two to five-year needs, and five to 10-year needs."

Must Find Money

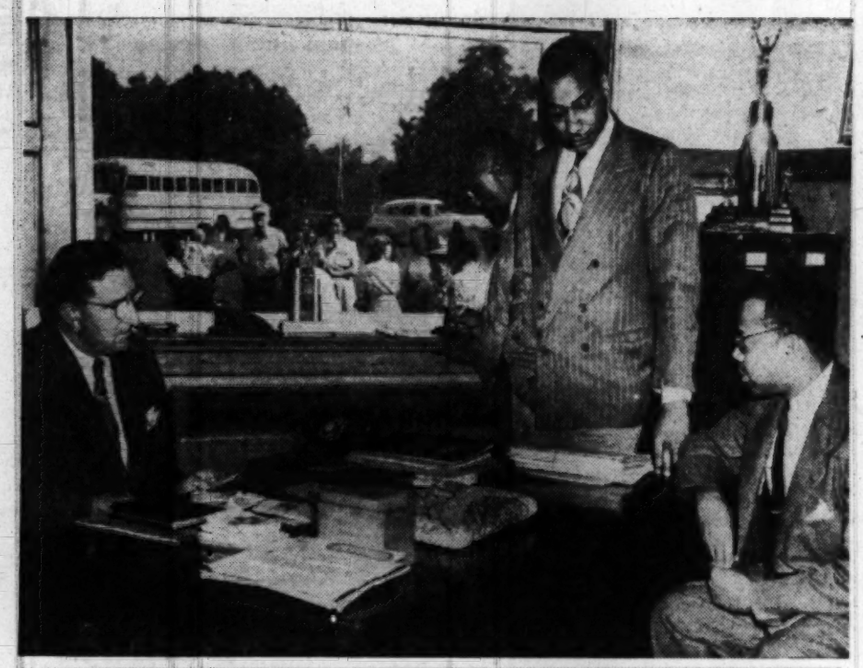
SAUNCH protaxers are convinced that the only logical report will be their own urgings. Their opponents are equally convinced the Old Dominion will never "shackle" itself with a sales tax—"once you get it, you've got it forever," they declare.

Another group feels there may be an effort to "duck" the issue by putting a sales tax proposal to a referendum.

But the educators, at least, agree. "We all know we've got to get money—and lots of it—somewhere," said one, "and when you touch people's pocketbooks—however you do it—you're going to hurt them."

Room for 4000 at A. C. U. N. Y.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Aug. 28.—Dr. Frederick A. Morse, president of the Associated Colleges of Upper New York, which operates Champlain College here, Sampson, College on Seneca Lake, and the Middletown Collegiate Center, has announced that there is space available in the three institutions for 4000 men and women students for the fall semester which begins September 8 at Champlain and September 15 at Sampson. The colleges teach the first two years of the regular four-year courses in liberal arts, business administration and preengineering and transfer the qualified students to degree-granting colleges and universities upon completion of the two years of study. After two years of operation, the emergency colleges have transferred 97 per cent of the qualified students to more than 250 institutions. Recently the University of the State of New York granted complete accreditation for all freshman and sophomore courses at A. C. U. N. Y.



IN THE UPPER PHOTO—T. Benton Gayle, school superintendent of King George County, is telling W. Lester Banks and Martin A. Martin (seated) that Virginia law requires segregation. Banks, executive secretary of the Virginia State Conference, and Martin, an attorney, had accompanied 10 students of the King George County Training School for Negros who sought admission to the white school last week. The students ahd refused to register at the Training School (shown immediately above) because they considered it unequal in facilities to the white high schol (right)

Beauvoir Conferences

Faculty members of Beauvoir Elementary School will meet at the school, in the Washington Cathedral Close, for a week of preterm conference beginning Monday. The school will open for the fall term on September 20.

Parker School Term

The Parker School of Personality Development, 1138 18th st. nw., announces that its September term will inaugurate classes in deportment, etiquette and correct speech for teen-agers. Mrs. Agnes McCall Parker, director, says the courses will consist of one lesson a week for six weeks.

Children's Studio Moves

Rose Robison Cowen's Children's Studios of Speech and Dramatic Arts is moving into new and larger quarters at 3815 Livingston st. nw. Mrs. Cowen is expanding her facilities into a children's fine arts center. Hazel Kenyon Markel, educational director for WTOP, will instruct a television class at the school.

Registration will begin September 15 and classes will start the first week in October.

320,000 Youths To Study Farming Held Not Enough

More than 320,000 American farm boys will enroll in high school vocational agriculture courses this fall, according to estimates by the Agriculture Education Service in the Office of Education, Federal Security Agency.

"Although this enrollment will approach the record of 333,000 vocational agriculture students in 1942, it still is not enough," said Dr. W. T. Spanton, chief of the Agricultural Education Service.

"The Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimates that 300,000 new farmers are needed each year to replace those who retire, die, or otherwise quit farming," he continued. "Since our enrollment figures include students in all four years of high school, it is apparent that fewer than 100,000 boys a year are graduating with comprehensive training in agriculture."

Approximately 8000 rural high schools offer courses in vocational agriculture.

Survey Due On Schools In December

ABOUT the middle of December, Dr. George D. Strayer, a retired professor of education from Columbia University, will submit to Congress a comprehensive report on the state of District school buildings.

The report will name schools that no longer are fit for use, list building that can be rehabilitated and suggest areas where new schools are needed.

Dr. Strayer will estimate the cost and suggest a method of financing a first class educational plant for the District.

To make the study, Dr. Strayer and his staff during the summer months have been probing every corner of the District's 170 school buildings.

Card for Each

A REPORT card has been prepared for each building. Elementary schools have been scored on 145 different points, junior high schools on 156, and senior high schools on 152.

Major points considered were sites, building construction, service systems, classrooms, special activity rooms, general service and administration rooms.

Each major division was broken down, with scores given for such points as temperature control, drinking fountains, bicycle storage and color schemes. A perfect building can make a score of 1000.

One elementary building scored only 250 and will be ticketed for abandonment, Dr. Strayer said. He described it as an outmoded elementary building that lacked even play space.

"We scored it only because it had four walls and floors," Dr. Strayer said.

Part of Plan

THE STUDY of school buildings is part of a $100,000 survey of schools authorized by Congress. When completed next March it will appraise every phase of public education—curriculum, financial structure, personnel policies and administration.

Dr. Strayer, who has conducted some 80 similar school surveys, said that Washington's school buildings range from excellent down to very bad. Their average is about that of every other city.

The 71-year-old school investigator has 20 experts helping him in the survey. All are prominent educators.

His chief deputy in the study of buildings is Frank W. Hart, professor of educational administration at the University of California.

Desk Space Is the Problem

Montgomery Educators Have Fingers Crossed

By Roger Farquhar
Post Reporter

MONTGOMERY COUNTY educators expect an increased enrollment of 2400 tomorrow. They can find room for that many somehow. But if more show up, officials will be hard put to find classroom space.

"The biggest problem facing us this school year is that of finding space for the children," says Dr. Edwin W. Broome, veteran county schools superintendent.

Dr. Broome

Approved last year was a two-million-dollar school construction bond issue and again this year a three-million-dollar issue for new classrooms was approved.

Officials say approximately one half the five million has been spent and the rest of it is committed. By school opening tomorrow 51 more classrooms than were available in September, 1947, will be ready for occupancy and within a few weeks 18 more will have been completed.

A brief respite from classes will be given an estimated 350 students expected to enroll in the new Flower Ave. Elementary School, Takoma Park. The building with its 10 classrooms is to be ready soon but until it is pupils will stay at home. Registration at that school is set for September 16 and 17.

Plenty of Teachers

ONLY two teacher vacancies existed last week and they will be filled by tomorrow when the approximately 800 school marms begin classes in the 44 white and 20 Negro schools.

One reason advanced for the absence of a teacher problem is the relatively high teacher and principal salary average of $3800. Starting pay without a degree is $2200, with a bachelor's degree, $2500 and with a master's, $2700. Annual increments are provided up to a top of $4000, $4800 and $5300 respectively.

Dr. Broome joined the system in 1906 when there were about 4000 pupils and 100 teachers.

In 1909 he became assistant superintendent and was appointed superintendent in 1917.

Much of the active work in running the school system has been delegated to his new assistant, E. M. Douglass, who has been with the county since 1925 and who before his elevation was principal of Montgomery-Blair High School.

RECENTLY an indignant parent group has been protesting "too many frills" in the Montgomery curriculum and not enough emphasis on reading, writing, arithmetic and spelling.

Calling itself the Parent League for Curriculum Improvement, the group is currently circulating a petition demanding drastic revisions in the curriculum leading to more emphasis on fundamental subjects and less on things like art, music, home economics and physical education.

The Board of Education this week made its first formal reply to the group led by John H. Hiser, Bethesda Theater owner, and said the parents' complaints were unfounded.

Friends of the school system, including the County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, contend that present school ills are traceable mostly to overcrowding.

35 Pupils Per Room

ASSISTANT Superintendent Douglass reported recently that an average of 35 pupils per classroom in county schools is anticipated.

Both Douglass and Broome say that by Christmas some double shifts may be necessary.

Several months ago Negro leaders complained that Negro school standards are below those of the white schools in the segregated system.

In answer, school officials point to a long range Negro school building program which calls for three or four consolidated elementary schools, a new junior high school and a new high school.

"The consolidated program for Negroes will meet all problems arising in connection with equal facilities," Douglass stated this week.

In a pre-budget adoption dispute this year, school and county government officials disagreed strongly on the amount of money needed to finance schools for the coming year. Requested school funds were cut $611,000 and educators were finally given $2,818,000 in county funds for 1948-49. An additional $1,300,000 is expected from the State.

9 New Classrooms Built—Others on Way

Arlington to Register 13,000

TUTHILL CAMPBELL MacPHERSON STAHL JOY

New school board sees next six years as "crucial"

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

MORE THAN a year ago a pent-up wave of school reform struck Arlington County schools.

Behind it were parents, educators and otherwise detached citizens sore at the adjective, "hillbilly" often flung at the county school system.

In May, 1947, they flocked to a special referendum and voted to end Virginia's traditional method of selecting school boards—by appointment.

Last November they thronged to the polls to vote for the first elected school board in Arlington history. By overwhelming pluralities they rejected the four appointed school board members running again.

Instead, voters named five members, nominated in a caucus of many Arlington city groups—who had pledged themselves to a vigorous program of school reform.

These five, who today run Arlington's schools, are: Chairman Barnard Joy, Agriculture Department official; vice chairman, Mrs. Edmund Campbell, a teacher and mother; Colin MacPherson, Arlington builder; O. Glenn Stahl, official in the Federal Security Administration, and Curtis Tuthill, an assistant professor at George Washington University.

The Arlington school problems they faced since they took office January 1 "are small compared to those of the future," Chairman Joy says.

He and other board members feel "the next six years are the crucial ones"—when the "war babies" grow out of diapers and begin thronging Arlington schools.

347 Classrooms

THE board expects an enrollment of about 13,000 public school students when classes begin Tuesday, September 14. There are about 347 classrooms in Arlington elementary, junior high and high schools to take care of them.

But by the 1949-50 school year, according to the census, there will be 14,780 students requiring 393 classrooms; by 1950-51, 16,000 students needing 484 rooms.

And by 1953-54, a total of 20,470 pupils are expected to avalanche into Arlington schools. They'll need 659 classrooms, a figure nearly double the present number.

Several school additions already are completed to handle a small portion of the new load. The Stonewall Jackson elementary school has six additional rooms. Woodlawn School had three more, plus a new auditorium-playroom.

These additions were paid for out of a $1,776,000 bond issue for elementary school improvement voted in May, 1947.

With what remains of that bond issue—plus what can be obtained in the future—the board plans to build a new elementary school in the Dominion Hills section, one in Glencarlyn, one in North Fairlington, one to replace the present Hume School on Arlington Ridge rd., and one in the north-central section of the county to relieve overcrowding at the John Marshall and Robert E. Lee schools.

But board members admit the $1,776,000 won't go far at today's building costs. To complete their elementary school construction plans—and to expand overcrowded junior and senior high school facilities—the board is asking for another bond issue.

Bond Issue Planned

NEXT Tuesday at 8 p. m., in Thomas Jefferson Junior High School, 816 S. Fillmore st., the school board will hold a public meeting to set the amount of a new bond. It is expected to be about four million dollars. Whatever the amount, it will be submitted to Arlington voters at the polls, November 2, for approval or rejection.

Arlington today has 33 schools for the white and Negro children—24 white and 3 Negro elementary; 4 white junior highs, and 1 white and 1 Negro high school.

Although Arlington school officials have not as yet determined exactly what new schools will be built under the projected bond issue, they have pointed to the need for a new junior high, more Negro senior high school classrooms and more elementary classroom space.

According to Board Chairman Joy, the problem of locating teachers is not as tough a one as finding classrooms. Arlington is "in a better position than the average American school" in that respect, Joy feels.

Last year Arlington public schools had about 350 teachers. This 1948-49 school year there will be about 390. Their salary range, although below the District's, is above the national average, with a range of from $2400 for starting teachers with bachelor's degrees to a $4200 top for teachers with master's degrees.

Arlington's teacher problem is not acute because (1) this pay tops the national average, and (2) because many teachers locate in or near Washington anyway to take advantage of university facilities for postgraduate work, Joy says.

Two Separate Shifts

HOW will Arlington schools operate this 1948-49 year with their 13,000 pupils and admittedly overcrowded classrooms?

As one expedient, the board is continuing half-day sessions in first and second grades. These students will study in two separate shifts, one running from 9 a. m. to 12 noon, the other from 12:45 p. m. to 3:30 p. m.

The board had hoped to eliminate the half-day sessions this fall. But when its recommended budget came before the Arlington County Board last April, that group chopped it from the requested $1,975,000—to a lump sum allocation of $1,750,000.

Several days later the board announced that the "severe" cut would make full-day sessions impossible—there was no money available under the cut budget to pay for classroom conversion and construction of temporary units to make it possible.

As another method of curtailing overcrowding in schools this year, the board has just announced a rigid system of school districts affecting first-grade students.

These boundaries, the first formal ones ever set up in the system, will help redistribute pupil load and take some strain off of the most overcrowded schools, the board hopes.

New Positions

TO coordinate its educational program in the schools, the board has created several new positions this year.

They include a director of elementary school instruction, a school music supervisor, a supervisor of supplementary teaching materials such as audio-visual aids; a speech consultant and an arithmetic consultant.

As if the Arlington School Board were not saddled with enough problems, it still faces a court test of its legality in office.

The suit was brought last December by members of the old appointed school board, which called the elected body "unconstitutional" and its election illegal.

The suit was rejected by Arlington Circuit Court in January. Old board members, headed by Member Harry W. Porter, an attorney, appealed the case to the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

Attorneys for the elected board now are preparing their answer to the appeal. It is estimated the case will be heard in Richmond in the November term of court.

But the five members of the elected Arlington school board aren't worrying now about the outcome. They have other problems.

Work-Study Program Offered at Bridgeport

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 11.—The University of Bridgeport is establishing a co-operative work-study program between the university and Bridgeport business and industry. The co-ordinator of the program will make an extensive survey of Bridgeport this fall to determine how the program can best be worked out. It begins for business and engineering students in February, on a voluntary basis.

Course on World Issues Planned for Ozarks

Clarksville, Ark., Sept. 11.—The College of the Ozarks will inaugurate a course this fall designed to acquaint the student body with the great issues which face the world today, Dr. Wiley Lin Hurie, president, announced this week. All members of the freshman, sophomore and junior classes will attend the sessions of this course and are eligible to receive one hour of college credit each quarter.

On Tuesdays and Thursdays throughout the academic year the student body will meet in the chapel on the campus for the course, and an examination will be given at the end of each quarter.

150 College Girls Train In 'Social Responsibility'

By Raymond Horton

PENN YAN, N. Y., Sept. 11 (AP).—Nearly 150 college girls have embarked here on a pioneer education project.

They are members of the freshmen class at Keuka College, a Baptist college for women.

Their class is the first to begin Keuka's program of social responsibility—a program college officials say is unique in world education.

President Katherine Gillette Blyley and the college's 42 faculty members hope that at the end of four years on the campus fronting Keuka Lake graduates will be ready for active participation as "responsible citizens of a dynamic world society."

Other colleges have offered courses on world outlook, but Keuka administrators say the whole college course will be geared to teaching social responsibility.

Began With Test

THE freshmen class began the four-year course with the social responsibility test. The test is aimed at determining the weakness and strength of each student in knowledge and attitudes.

The two-hour test is to measure knowledge of contemporary affairs, including an understanding of their implications, and relation to a democratic society. Each student will write a paper on "My Life Aims."

At the end of the junior year a comprehensive examination will determine how students have progressed in the program.

President Blyley says the course is "frankly experimental," and there is no set curriculum. Courses will be added as the need is determined.

Summertime, Too

KEUAK'S field period—tested by seven years' experience—will be integrated with the program. Under this plan students spend six weeks each winter and at least two summer periods working on jobs in line with their academic training.

One field period must be spent in community service with welfare agencies or other community enterprises. The student will be required to make a report on how the organization fits into the social plan.

Extracurricular activities will be bent toward the main goal. Students will direct and participate in all campus projects for first-hand experience of a democratic community in action.

Foreign contacts are to be encouraged by attendance at international conferences and exchange scholarships.

Graduation will not mean the end of the program. Questionnaires will be sent periodically to alumnae on their progress in community life.

Three Job Offers to a Man

Troy, N. J., Sept. 11.—A recently completed personnel survey at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute shows that the average R. P. I. graduate last June received 3.3 job offers. Ninety per cent of the graduates were veterans.

Heavy Rolls Seen In Prince Georges

By Phillip J. Austenssen
Post Reporter

PRINCE GEORGES County school officials are struggling to meet the needs of the heaviest enrollment in the history of the county, complicated by difficulty in obtaining enough buses to transport the students.

SHUGART

School officials report that 22,129 children were in school opening day as against 20,541 last year. These figures do not include 10 schools which had not reported on their enrollment. It is estimated that between 23,500 and 24,000 children will be enrolled by the time classes get into full swing this week.

One problem is a need for additional teachers. The teacher requirements for the expected enrollment had been met to within four elementary teachers when school opened Wednesday but an additional 10 or 12 elementary teachers probably will be needed. The county now has 790 teachers.

The enrollment problem has been complicated this year by the District of Columbia rule requiring non-resident pupils to pay tuition. This has resulted in approximately 600 high school students returning to county schools and badly overcrowding the high schools in areas adjacent to Washington, particularly Mount Rainier Hyattsville and Bladensburg. Elementary schools are affected to a lesser extent, but overcrowding also has resulted.

Transport Tight

NEXT most vital problem to overcrowding is transportation. The county has eight school buses on order, four of which have been on order more than a year.

School officials hope to have a workable emergency bus schedule compiled by tomorrow which will provide transportation, but admit they are having a tough time. A number of complaints have been received that buses have not been adequate for the children.

Chief problem is in the white schools, where most of the increase has been reported. The Negro enrollment has increased from 3227 to 3334, while white schools have increased more than 1600. The county has not had the problems in segregation that other school systems have had, since equal accommodations are afforded Negroes and whites. Of the six additional constructed this past year, four were for Negro students. Also a new high school is being constructed for Negro students at Fairmount Heights. A long range program for consolidation of Negro elementary schools into modern buildings is in the planning stage.

G. Gardner Shugart, superintendent of county schools, has made an earnest effort to meet the needs of the Negro students and has been complimented by Negro educators and leaders for his work.

Landover School

A NEW elementary school for Landover Hills which was scheduled to be finished in time for the opening of school was not completed on time and probably will open the middle of the week, the children meantime, enjoying an enforced vacation. Lakeland Senior High for Negroes also has been forced to extend the vacation for its students while sanitary connections are being made by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission. It is expected to open for classes tomorrow. The capacity of the school was doubled by an addition and the connection to the sanitary commission system was included for the entire school building in the same building project.

Additions also have been constructed for Laurel High School, Fairmount Heights Elementary School, Douglas High School at Upper Marlboro and the Oxen Hill Senior-Junior High School, the latter three being for Negroes.

A new high school at Upper Marlboro, to be named the Frederick Sasscer High School, is scheduled to be completed about December 1, and a new high school at Oxen Hill is expected to be completed in the spring. The new vocational training center, to be the nucleus for a new senior high school, is under construction at Bladensburg and bids soon are to be asked for a new senior-junior high building at Fairmount Heights for Negro pupils. Plans also are being prepared for new senior high schools in the Hyattsville and Suitland areas. Land has been bought off Queens Chapel rd. on the old Heurich tract for the Hyattsville school and on Silver Hill rd. between Suitland rd. and Marlboro pike for the Suitland building.

Bonds totaling two million dollars have been sold in each of the last two years and equal amounts are expected to be asked for the next two years when the General Assembly meets in January with possibly an even greater amount being necessary if the building boom in the county continues.

New Quarters

THE board of education has moved into its new $152,000 office building in the rear of the courthouse at Upper Marlboro and with additional space at their disposal, school officials hope to be able to meet the impact of the tremendous increases with even more efficient effort. The board formerly was cramped into a small space at their disposal, school officials hope to be able to meet the impact of the tremendous increases with even more efficient effort. The board formerly was cramped into a small space in the courthouse with hardly elbow room for its workers.

The Prince Georges County Commissioners are aware of the tremendous sums expected to be needed for financing school needs in the county in the next few years and are studying the situation with an eye to effecting such economies as possible in order not to upset the financial structure of the county. Bonds now are not as easy to sell as in the past at the low rates of interest and added interest rates will add to the cost of the construction programs. Approximately 10 million dollars is needed to meet school needs.

The situation in the schools precludes any possibility that kindergarten classes may be started any time within the next several years, officials said. Every effort is being strained to meet the demand for classroom space for children required to be given service by law and kindergartens are luxuries that cannot be hoped for within several years, possibly not sooner than 10 years.

Superintendent Shugart is a native of Harpers Ferry, W. Va., and attended elementary and high schools there. He attended West Virginia University and later was graduated from the University of Maryland, where he also received his master's degree. He taught in Pittsylvania County, Va., Harford and Cecil counties, Md., before coming to Upper Marlboro as principal of the high school in 1930. In February, 1940 he was named assistant superintendent and upon retirement of Superintendent Nichols Orem, sr., in October, 1943, was named superintendent. He is married and has two children.

There're So Many Ways To Skin Through College

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 (AP).—Did you know there are more than 17 quadrillion ways to earn an A. B. degree?

There are 17,178,652,187,317,210 ways, according to a college counsellor who has figured it. He doesn't say at what hour he arrived at such a figure.

And among the 1031 institutions granting degrees in the United States, no two agree on academic requirements—not even church related denominational colleges.

These are among the strange sidelights on higher education recited by Col. Clarence E. Lovejoy in "Lovejoy's Complete Guide to American Colleges and Universities," just published (Simon and Schuster).

Colonel Lovejoy, formerly alumni secretary at Columbia University and a public relations officer in the European Theater during World War II, is now a college counsellor.

He points out there is a Yale scholarship for a Princeton student at Princeton, founded in 1931 by the gift of Charles G. Paulding, Yale '89.

Not All for Gridders

NOT all college scholarships are for football stars. Frail, fragile youngsters have not been forgotten by benefactors. The Will Rogers Foundation scholarships are for physically handicapped youngsters. The Henry Nelson Pierce scholarship at Princeton goes to applicants "not of normal physical strength."

There's a scholarship at Sarah Lawrence College for a Navajo Indian. The University of Michigan has scholarships awarded to Indians recommended by the Secretary of the Interior, among other grants for the higher education of American Redskins.

Some colleges and some college scholarship donors don't believe college men and women should drink or smoke.

schools after contracts were let for the new Kelly-Miller Junior High School. This building, one of 14 now under construction in the city, will be ready for occupancy next September.

There is no money and little hope for replacements for the four buildings, portions of which have been condemned, until the school system builds enough schools to take care of the war babies.

A Look at 1952

A STUDY of school populations and birth statistics compiled by Associate School Superintendents Carl F. Hansen and A. Kiger Savoy indicates that by 1952 enrollments in the elementary schools will have increased 27,286 above last year's total of 54,501.

The two school officers estimate that 758 additional teachers will be needed.

The studies indicate that large numbers of these children will be living in newly developed sections of the city, particularly in the far Northeast and Southeast beyond the Anacostia River.

Five of the white schools that serve the area were on part-time programs last year. They are the Congress Heights, Patterson, Beers, Kimball and Kenilworth. A sixth school, the Stanton, will be added this year. A year ago 910 white elementary students were on double-shift programs. This year there will be 1600.

Half-Days Feared

ADDITIONS are now under construction to the Kimball and the Beers schools, but they will not be completed until next year.

In the current budget, Congress granted funds for beginning of construction for a replacement for the Stanton School and a new 24-room building to relieve the Congress Heights and Patterson schools.

Neither will be ready for at least two years and school officials fear that by that time all grades in the three schools may be on half-day schedules. At present only students through the fourth grade are having their education curtailed.

Eleven Negro elementary schools on part-time programs last year will continue on short schedules. They are the Bruce, Morse, Lanston, Cook, Crummell, Douglass-Simmons, Walker, Jones Birney, Garfield and Payne.

Six new Negro schools or additions to schools are under construction and are expected to eliminate present double-shift programs, but not to meet anticipated overcrowding.

Four Suits Brought

REPLACEMENTS are badly needed for two of the city's three Negro high schools and population warrants construction of a fourth. Armstrong and Dunbar are occupied above capacity and Cardozo this year will have three shifts so that the school with a capacity of 1040 students can accommodate 1825.

Last year the Board of Education was sued four times by Negro parents who claimed their children were not receiving educational opportunities equal to those granted white children. In three of the cases, the court ruled equality of education is available, but appeals are pending. The fourth case has not yet come to trial.

The course is designed to give to students a practical understanding of arbitration in the fields of commerce, labor and international trade. Joseph S. Murphy, national panel director of the American Arbitration Association, has been named professor of arbitration methods at St. Peter's. He is also educational director for the 30 national offices of the association.

Maryland Voices Few Complaints

proved an extensive program for doubling capacity of the four colleges to a total of 3000 students.

Maryland school officials generally attribute important results to the State's increased postwar pay standard ranging from $2200 to $3800.

1. More youngsters in high school are turning toward a teaching career.
2. A higher percentage of teachers are sticking to their jobs.
1. Some teachers who had abandoned the profession are returning to it. Baltimore and many counties pay higher than the State scale.

State financial aid to public schools is being given at twice the rate it was before last year. The State is now footing about 40 per cent of the annual 48-million-dollar bill for operating expenses of public school education in the counties and Baltimore. Dr. Pullen believes the percentage will go closer to 50 per cent soon.

School officials generally credited Maryland's sales tax with being a major factor for improvement in the schools, even though the tax is not earmarked for schools. Without the sales tax, it is contended, the revenue would not have been on hand to help the schools.

Officials said that equalizing of school facilities for white and Negro students in Maryland's dual school system shows up in the policy of a single salary schedule with equal pay for equal training and experience, and no differentiation on the basis of race, sex, or marital status.

It shows up in the fact that many of the new building projects are for Negro schools. And it has shown up, officials said, in expressions of confidence from leaders of Negro communities that real efforts are being made to meet the school needs of their children.

Baltimore an Exception

DR. PULLEN'S picture of progress in school improvement over the State as a whole was borne out in detail by school officials in Baltimore and in individual counties.

One important exception was the school building program in Baltimore. There much work has been done on paper, none on the ground.

With about 28 million dollars on hand for school construction, no project has yet been placed under contract. One project, far along on the drafting boards, calls for a big addition to crowded Benjamin Franklin Junior High School in South Baltimore, and it may be offered for bids within a month. Four others are on the drafting boards, 10 more in the premilinary planning stage, and at present prices those projects will just about eat up the available money, officials believe.

To help in future school planning, Fischer said that the Baltimore school administration is setting up a punch-card file of all school-age and preschool-age children in Baltimore. From that officials expect to be able to tell not only what school populations are at any time, but to forecast the rate, direction and shifts of school populations from one area to another.

Probational Teachers

FISCHER said the city this year is hiring 150 probational teachers who have college degrees but no professional teacher training. They will be broken into the elementary system under guidance of experienced teachers. The latter will be relieved of classes. Each experienced teacher will keep watch over three or four trainees. The trainees will serve what is already a normal two-year probation. They will also take summer school courses. After two years, officials hope to have most of the trainees ready for regular teacher certificates. Fifty more probationary teachers are to be hired this way in February and another 200 next fall.

Teachers Staying

IN Calvert County, Superintendent Harry R. Hughes said enrollments are up about 200 pupils over last year to a total close to 2800 pupils. Two teaching jobs are unfilled. He said the county scale is $100 more than the State standard, and "I think there is no doubt that the scale is keeping teachers in the system."

Calvert County has three schools under construction—a new $419,000 county high school near Prince Frederick, with a capacity of 550 students, to be ready in two to three months—and two new Negro elementary schools, at Appeal and Island Creek, each with four rooms, and each replacing three out-of-date schools. Two other schools have been converted from one to two-room schools in recent months.

A four-room addition for the Negro High School near Prince Frederick is also being planned, plus a nine-room Negro elementary school near Sunderland that will replace four one-room schools. The building program totals about $800,000. One immediate result when it is finished will be the end of half-time schooling for some 400 pupils.

One Vacancy

IN Charles County Superintendent F. B. Gwynn, at La Plata, reports enrollments are up about 250 over last year's 4450. There is one teaching vacancy, but, said Gwynn, "I'm not worried about it—the situation is a lot better than last year."

On the construction side, the central county high school in La Plata is being about doubled in size, at a cost of some $560,000, with the older half to be used for junior high and elementary grades. Two Negro county high schools are also being enlarged at a cost of about $240,000.

10 Teachers Short

IN Anne Arundel County enrollments are up about 600 pupils to a total around 17,000 and another 1500 increase is expected next year, according to Superintendent David S. Jenkins. The county is short about ten elementary teachers.

In construction, a $1,700,000 addition to the Negro junior-senior high school in Annapolis is expected to be ready before January 1. Another major project is a new junior high school, and an industrial arts and vocational school at Glen Burnie, to be ready in about three weeks.

On the drafting board is a new junior-senior high for Odenton, near Fort Meade. There are other smaller projects in the works. Altogether the county has about $5,500,000 in school projects under contract, and $1,500,000 to be contracted. At least three million dollars more will be needed to pay for schools now seen to be necessary.

Tell Children the Truth About Russia, Says NEA

AMERICAN schools should teach that war—even against communism—is not inevitable, the National Education Association warns.

The association published a report by its committee on international relations on a two-year survey of what American schools are doing to promote world-mindedness.

The committee, headed by Ben M. Cherrington, director of the Social Science Foundation at the University of Denver, found that the schools are doing much good work in the right direction, but added:

"School programs of education for international understanding tend to lack central focus and coordination.

"Such programs tend to be superficial and out of date, for they are too largely concerned with mere descriptions of the world and its peoples as they were before 1939."

Some major conclusions of the report:

UNITED NATIONS—"Youth must be taught to understand the United Nations, to support the principles of international organizations embodied in the U. N. Charter, and to support the efforts of international organizations. They must also be educated to see the weakness in such organizations and to work for remedying their defects."

RUSSIA—"The Soviet system which we call communism is not the only form in which authoritarianism exists today, for there are absolute monarchies and dictatorships throughout the world. It has been entirely possible for democratic states to exist harmoniously with non-democratic states. However, if the ideology of any state requires attack upon the very existence of another state, such aggressiveness is a serious menace to the peace."

Fairfax Has 11,000 Students In Space Built for 9000

WHEN Fairfax County schools opened last Tuesday, 11,000 students crowded into classrooms built for 9000.

Some found their classes meeting in Quonset huts, on stages, in libraries and in partitioned auditoriums. At least one principal runs her school from the corridor to make room for classes in her office.

Superintendent of Schools W. T. Woodson makes no bones about the fact that lack of classroom space has created a "critical situation."

The county's troubles stem from the fact that it is passing through a stage of phenomenal growth and that its only source of school building funds has been cut off for nearly a year.

Population has shot up from 40,000 in 1940 to an estimated 110,000 today. In that period only six new schools were built. One of those was a replacement. Several additions were built, but the county still has only 27 white and 10 Negro schools spread out over its 417 square miles.

Fund Goes Dry

UNTIL last January, the school board had been carrying forward an ambitious building program. Then the State Literary Fund, its only source of funds, dried up.

The county has not a penny for new schools now, and sees no prospect of finding any this year.

The school board, the county supervisors and a citizens group called the school emergency committee have all urged the levy of a sales tax. Governor Tuck, however, has been cold to requests of nearly half the counties in the State that he call a special session of the General Assembly for this purpose.

To meet present needs and to accommodate children from homes now under construction, the school board estimates it needs $7,500,000 to build 10 new schools and 16 additions.

It is expected that school population will increase by 1000 a year for several years. An extra 500 students will be added in 1950 when the impact of a new eighth grade is felt.

Seek Bond Issue

THE school board has finally decided that a county bond issue is the only answer. But that would yield no money for several months even if it passed a referendum vote.

Some doubt that so large a bond issue would be voted, because it would have to be repaid by higher taxes from the voters unless State aid is forthcoming.

Woodson put it the other way around last week: "If the people want adequate school facilities badly enough, they'll have to pay for them."

The other big problem confronting Woodson is finding enough teachers and keeping them. Able to offer only $2000 a year to start and a maximum of $3100 to teachers with master's degrees, Woodson has to add about 30 new teachers to his staff each year in addition to keeping those he has. He has hired two more than his budget allowed this year in an effort to keep down the student load per teacher.

Woodson has been county superintendent since 1929. He graduated from William and Mary in 1916, and was principal of schools in different parts of the State before coming to Fairfax as supervisor of schools in 1924.

On Full Shifts

NONE of the schools has yet been forced to go on half-day shifts, although this was narrowly averted in Falls Church, where the Oak Street School was ready just in time.

This is due partly to the impossible transportation problem involved, and partly to Woodson's belief that, all things considered, a child gets more from a full school day under crowded conditions than he would in half a day.

When the building program gets started, three of the new schools will be for Negroes. Two of the six schools built since 1940 were also for Negroes. Negro schools are not up to white schools physically, Woodson said, but he felt the instruction was equally good.

The last one-room Negro school closed last year as part of the county's policy to consolidate where possible to relieve teachers from handling seven grades at once.

Fairfax has no Negro high school, but it helps maintain a regional high school in Manassas which Woodson said is "equal to and in some respects superior" to the county's white high schools.

Alexandria to Add 142 Classrooms

Also in Group 1, but with a lower priority, are an 18-room school at Parkfairfax to replace the temporary six-room building, renovation of the Lyles-Crouch and Parker-Gray Negro Schools, and a new cafeteria and library for Jefferson School.

Plan for Group II

IN Group II and scheduled for construction some time in the next four years are a second high school in western Alexandria, another elementary school in the Parkfairfax-Beverley Hills section, a 35-room elementary school in southern Alexandria to replace the obsolete Washington and Lee Schools. Money has not yet been appropriated for these buildings.

The city's school population, now about 7000, shows an increase of only 1600 in the last 10 years. But a survey made last year indicated elementary school enrollment would double in five years.

First graders and half of the second grade classes are now on half day schedules for lack of space. A new eighth grade added this year will throw 350 more students into the system in 1952 when its impact first will be felt.

Existing facilities to handle this load consist of 12 schools, of which one is temporary and several are antiquated.

On Job 15 Years

THE man who will be most closely connected with carrying out this building program is T. C. Williams, 52-year-old superintendent of schools.

Williams has held his present job 15 years. Before that, he was school superintendent in Chesterfield County for 12 years. He holds a degree in civil engineering from Virginia Military Institute and a master's degree in education from George Washington University.

The building program will not only provide more classrooms. It will go a long way toward equalizing the facilities available to white and Negro students.

Negro teachers in Alexandria receive the same pay as white teachers, but Negro students admittedly do not have equal facilities. Of the three Negro schools, one, Seminary, teaches four primary grades in one room and still has outdoor toilets.

Parker-Gray is an accredited high school. But Superintendent Williams admits it can't be compared with the white high school.

The new school will have all the facilities of a modern high school. When it is completed, Seminary School will close down and send its students to the renovated Parker-Gray and Lyles-Crouch Schools.

Alexandria has not been threatened with lawsuits, as have some counties, by Negro groups dissatisfied with school facilities offered them. And Williams doesn't expect one.

"We're doing everything we can," he said, "to put the two school systems on an equal basis."

One to 25 Ratio

THE city has 272 teachers, about one to 25 students, and every position was filled on opening day Wednesday. This may be accounted for partly by the fact that Alexandria pays the highest minimum ($2400 and the second highest maximum ($3375) of any city in the State. Teachers with masters' degrees receive $200 a year extra.

These scales, though high by Virginia standards, suffer in comparison with salaries paid in Washington and nearby Maryland.

The facts that Alexandria is a city and, geographically, a small one seem to put her in a better position than the surrounding counties to solve school shortages. As a city, Alexandria can issue bonds at the wish of the city council without a referendum. As a small city (7½ square miles compared with Fairfax County's 417), Alexandria is rapidly approaching the saturation point in population and doesn't have to worry about building another school every time a tract is subdivided for development.

Army Fights New 'Battle' In Germany

By Fred M. Hechinger

Second of Two Articles

BUEDINGEN, Germany, (via air mail).—Every minute, day and night, the army of occupation is fighting the "Battle of Information." It is an operation which is not among the traditions of military establishments, but the United States Army here by now seems firmly convinced that the orientation of troops is a vital responsibility.

Twice every month a selected group of 70 officers and enlisted men arrive in this picturesque little town near Frankfurt to attend the Troop Information and Education Staff School for a period of two weeks. When they leave, they are expected to act as discussion leaders and informal instructors in their units.

Present Army directive assigns at least one noncommissioned officer to every company to take charge of the orientation program. About three-fourths of these have by now gone through the staff school; the others are expected to graduate in the near future.

Bulletin Important

A DAY at the school convinced me that a serious and intelligent effort is being made to provide this occupation army with the basic tools of knowledge.

Perhaps even more important than the actual instruction here is the publication of the Troop Information and Education Bulletin. Once every week a new issue goes out to all units. Maj. James A. Klein, officer-in-charge of the publication, utilizes all the best principles of commercial magazine production to make the pamphlets lively, interesting and well-illustrated.

"Formerly we used to go in for such series as 'Know Your Army,'" the officer explained, "but we realized that those topics were too dull. So we now try to make the bulletin an almost unlimited source of orientation."

Recent issues discussed such vital topics as "Money and Inflation," the background of various European countries, the history and technique of Soviet communism. Every soldier who arrives in the theater gets a complete series of past bulletins which explain the mission of the occupation, the history of Germany and the scope of our responsibilities. A special issue on "The People Versus Nazism" tells the story of Hitlerism as outlined by Justice Jackson at the Nuremberg trials.

"Prejudice" is the title of an effective on bigotry, using well-written text amusing comic strip pictures. It is an effort at popular education which, somewhat more civilianized, might well be adopted by public schools all over the United States.

58 Civilian Educators

MUCH of the teaching in the classrooms of the staff school revolves around the bulletin. Instructor candidates are trained in the use of this material and in methods of presentation. Lieut. Col. Thomas M. Tarpley, commanding officer of the school, has instructed his teachers to run the establishment as an educational institution rather than a routine Army post. He utilizes the experience of 58 civilian educators all over the zone in order to make the short, two-week course as intensive as possible.

The lecture topics range from the various problems of the occupation to a basic knowledge of American history and the mission of the United Nations. The core of the course is presented in the form of practice talks by students themselves.

In a small seminar group an Air Force sergeant told the story of United States participation in various occupations of the past. The class was attentive and contributed intelligently to the discussion. Soldiers of all ranks and varying color acted as a harmonious group.

After the hour I asked the sergeant what his civilian background had been. By profession he was a bartender. His educational career had ended after the second year of high school. An additional check revealed that few of the future discussion leaders had completed secondary education. The blunt fact is that the majority of the enlisted men of our current occupation army are below the minimum education requirements.

Best Not Good Enough

IN THE past I have strongly criticized the Army's orientation effort in occupied territories. While I am satisfied that Troop Information and Education is at present doing its best under the limiting directives of the Army and Congress, I am aware that the currest best is not good enough. Improvements, however, cannot be inaugurated in this theater; they must now be supported by recognition in Washington.

Army education officers agree that a two-week course for instructors is insufficient. One expert put the minimum requirement at eight weeks; other estimates ranged up to a year,

Most serious, however, is the method of selection. Company commanders are asked to furnish suitable men; but it is both a human and a military temptation not to part with favorite sons. This handicap cannot be overcome until Troop Information and Education branch is authorized to go down to individual units and select qualified candidates.

There is every indication that the I. & E. branch is doing as much as can possibly be expected with the funds and personnel available now. The occupation army is understaffed, and it is difficult to deprive one branch of its support in favor of another without impairing overall efficiency.

But the orientation job is of critical importance. It is unrealistic to spend money on the Voice of America and not to give maximum backing to the khaki-clad voice abroad. That voice is visible as well as audible. In fact, it is inescapable everywhere—at the street corner, in the restaurant and in the German home.

A Two-Front War

THIS is not a plea for the use of "intellectuals" or diplomaed highbrows. Nor is it a call for political commissars.

What must be realized is that we are fighting a two-front orientation war: against 15 years of Nazi indoctrination and against a skillfully and professionally conducted campaign of the Soviet totalitarianism. To be victorious we have to muster not propaganda, but hard-boiled facts.

The I. & E. Bulletin and the Staff School are admirably suited to become the backbone of that orientation battle. Great strides have been made. But nothing is more fatal than to underestimate one's opponent. Both Goebbels and his Russian counterpart would shrug off the threat of an orientation program carried by tenth-graders.

The August 22 issue of the I. & E. Bulletin printed a letter from Corpl. James A. Adams, stationed in Hoechst, Germany. While complimenting the contents of the bulletins, the soldier feels that they are not properly presented by the discussion leaders, who "do not discuss the subjects with the group enough. They only tell what they have read from the bulletin . . ."

Teaching is the most difficult job in the world—and the most essential. If it takes eight weeks of basic training to make an army rifleman, at least as much time should be granted to the making of education personnel. Here in Buedingen the Army has created plan and institution for such training. It now needs to be given the priorities on personnel and funds. Otherwise we shall continue to lose the Battle of Information.

Atomic Economics Course

Exploratory research into the probable economic aspects of the utilization of atomic energy is a new graduate program this year at the school of social sciences and public affairs of the American University. Financed by a grant from the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, it will be directed by Prof. Joseph E. Loftus of the university's teaching institute of economics. Since its inception, this institute has concentrated its research activities around a central economic issue of the year. Institute officials feel that the question of atomic energy utilization may develop into the most challenging economic issue for many years to come.

Marine School to Enroll 175

O'Connor, jr., secretary of the academy. The four-year college course leads to the degree of bachelor of marine science and a license as third officer in the merchant marine.

Hear Pearl Buck

MORE than 7000 teachers are expected to attend the eighty-first annual convention of the Maryland State Teachers Association, which will be held at the Fifth Regiment Armory, Baltimore, October 7, 8 and 9. The convention theme is "Education for One World."

At the first general session, October 7, Pearl S. Buck, nationally known writer and lecturer, will speak on the topic, "America Looks At Asia." Dr. Otto S. Kraushaar, the new president of Goucher College, will address the second meeting on "Educating for International Understanding." Dr. Kraushaar formerly was professor of philosophy at Smith College. John W. Vandercook, news analyst, explorer and author, will answer the question, "Is the Marshall Plan Working?" Vandercook spent the summer in Europe.

Old Goodman Disk Gets Bats Going

it is. There's one word in there that doesn't belong there. I have taken it out and it sings much better this way:

Border to border and shore to shore
More people are smoking than ever before.

The word that had to be dropped is, I'm afraid, the brand name of the cigarette. I'm sorry about this, R. J. Reynolds, but that word wrecks the meter.

Bats for Goodman

JUST one small story which has only a vague relationship with independent stations. One station—and I don't know which one—persists in playing an old 12-inch record by Benny Goodman of "More Than You Know." Well, there's a summer cottage near here whose chimney is infested with bats, and the man who lives there says this old Benny Goodman record has a startling effect on the bats. They come out of the chimney and swoop around the living room every time the record is played. The bats won't budge for another record, just "More Than You Know." The man has tried other recordings of "More Than You Know," but the bats pay no attention. They insist on Goodman.

The man has reached the conclusion it has something to do with radar. Bats, he points out, are supposed to have their own private radar system which keeps them from bumping into things. Goodman's clarinet—right here the man starts waving his arms around excitedly—probably has struck the one note which upsets the radar system, makes the bats think walls are closing in all around them, drives them into wild, radarless flight.

"If we can just put this thing on a scientific basis," he babbles, "just think of the effect on national security. That clarinet could drive the guided missiles right back to Moscow." Last time I saw the man he was thinking of making a short trip to the Pentagon.

The New Juke Box

IN THE 10 years I've been coming to this lovely beach, Fire Island hasn't changed much except in one respect which out here assumes unusual importance. I refer to the jukeboxes. The juke boxes of 10 years ago, imposing and wonderfully complicated in their day, were horse and buggy contraptions next to the staggering mechanisms that operate here now. The old ones used to play whatever they pleased, regardless of what number you punched; sometimes, when they felt tired, they stopped playing entirely and just glared at the customers.

The new jobs are more docile, but have, I feel, less character. They digest your nickel, make electronic calculations, never make mistakes, never break down, and do everything but stir the martinis. This evidence of progress stops abruptly at the machine or mechanistic level. When you come to make your selections, you find among others, "Love Thy Neighbor," an old Bing Crosby record I used to play in high school; "Mississippi Mud," a tune I first heard when I was in knee pants, and "Sunrise Boogie," which used to be known as "Sunrise Serenade." (Well, they've brought the tempo up to date, anyhow.)

The composers appear to have lagged behind the machine. Or perhaps with such agile machinery, composers aren't needed any more. The jukebox of the future, I predict, won't play melodies at all, just do card tricks with the Andrews Sisters records. Keep six of them in the air at once and catch them in their teeth, probably.

Why Sanders Napped

Hollywood (AP).—Actor George Sanders always napped between scenes during the early weeks of production on "The Fan." But after the picture reached the halfway mark he seemed wide awake. This puzzled others in the cast, and finally someone asked him to explain.

Sanders said he and his brother, Actor Tom Conway, had just sold their $10,000 telescope. Stargazing had kept the brothers up most of the nights before they gave up their instrument.

Sanders and Conway built the telescope themselves. Sanders was a mechanical engineer before he became an actor, and he is known as something of a mathematical wizard. He writes mystery stories, too.

At the Bridge Table

Match Point Competition Is Slated for Wednesday

By Marian H. Barre

MEMBERS of the Washington Bridge League will compete for master point awards in the match to be held Wednesday beginning at 8 p. m. at Hotel Roosevelt. This is the third game of the 1948-'49 series which started September 1. Principal change in rules governing the contests was the executive committee's vote to split the master point quota between two monthly pair contests, one on each first Wednesday, the other on the third. In team-of-four games on alternate weeks the winners will receive rating points; as will the duo sections in play concurrently. The same procedure will be followed in months containing five Wednesdays.

Other spots where master points may be garnered this week include the Walker Club, Arlington, on September 17 at 7:45 p. m.; and Euclid Studios on Saturday at 1 p. m.

THE big news in the Federal Bridge League is the removal of restrictions on team formation—under current regulations a captain may secure four senior masters, or four "lifers," if he were fortunate enough to find them! These new laws go into effect tomorrow when the team season starts at 2600 16th st.; an open meeting has been called for 7:45 p. m. to iron out some minor details, with play following immediately afterward.

Under the able chairmanship of Mrs. Dora Schwartz the Woman's Auxiliary of the Washington Bridge League is proceeding with full steam ahead to make the coming benefit for Children's Hospital an outstanding success.

Saturday, September 25 is the date chosen, the place is the Federal League quarters at 2600 16th st.; main event is the two-session duplicate for the charity cup, now held by Mrs. Marianne Boschan and Mrs. Sybil Newlands. In addition there will be one-round games both afternoon and evening, as well as a special section for rubber bridge players. Tickets may be secured by calling Mrs. Schwartz at Randolph 7170, or through any member of the auxiliary.

The Agriculture Bridge Club, now meeting each Tuesday evening at Euclid Studios, will continue to hold its monthly master point contests as matinee sessions each first Saturday. Winners on September 4 were Mrs. Mildred Linderman and Mrs. J. G. Seabourne, north-south; Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Rosson, in the other position, Mrs. Schwartz and Charles Lyons, J. G. Stone and John Moore, were runners-up.

NOTED WITH REGRET—that a first-time tourney at Old Point Comfort, Fort Monroe, Va., on September 24, 25, and 26, conflicts with the Auxiliary Benefit for Children's Hospital. Had it been scheduled one week later, the Hampton Roads event would have drawn a large District delegation, as close ties exist between Washington and the Virginia Peninsula ACBL unit. Central New Jersey championships, also on 24 to 26, in Trenton, attract more New York and Philadelphia players.

After a summer recess the Buckingham Club will reopen Tuesday evening, continuing weekly duplicate games under the direction of Mrs. Edna Evans.

Master point winners at Arlington Farms Club on September 3 were Mrs. Edward St. John and Mrs. Helen Richter, Mrs. Bess Noland and Mrs. Russell Denham; with Mrs. Alma Byrne-Lynn Carrier, Mrs. Edna Evans-Ralph Spritzer, runners-up.

First rating-point team match at the Washington Bridge League went to the former collegiate foursome of Steinbach, McGhee, Harris, and Ashton. Carrier and H. Mayer, Mesdames Hamlin and Henninger, led the pair sections in play concurrently.

The new international bridge laws go into effect on the first of October . . . and the revised Culbertson System becomes official simultaneously. With his usual sense of timing Ely Culbertson called his first teachers' convention in seven years; 135 professional pedagogues met in New York at the Barbizon-Plaza on August 27, 28, 29.

Stiff Breeze's What Wismer Will Need thing—be it ever so little—about telecasting.

Basic Courses

ALL A. U. students aspiring to a B. S. degree must take basic college courses in sciences, history, English, etc., before they begin to specialize.

Hubbel has small patience with the youngsters who come to him saying they "don't see what a course in history or English has to do with being an announcer." If they cannot be made to see that an announcer, in order to ad lib intelligently at the opening of Congress, must know something about government and know how to prowl profitably through a library, Hubbel regards them as very dim potentials for the radio and TV major.

Since the courses are given at junior, senior and graduate level, special students wishing to take the courses are required to have had some college training. The courses, to be given at night in once-a-week sessions of 2 hours and 20 minutes each, are open to outside students, but only after Hubbel has passed on their qualifications. (He will be available for consultation every weekday afternoon from 4 to 7 at 1901 F st. nw, until classes begin on September 23.)

For full details on the courses, call Woodley 6800, Extension 28, or write to the university.

IF HARRY WISMER is on hand for the Redskins' football games this season, it'll be with the help of a good tail wind. Wismer is scheduled to do TV coverage of the games for WMAL-TV beginning next Sunday, along with the regular radio coverage which he does with Jim Gibbons.

But both he and Gibbons will be shuttling all over the country on Saturdays to do radio coverage of the college-game-of-the-week for the Army, and they may be hard put to get back to D. C. on Sundays.

Gibbons may prove a good luck piece in this case; he's never missed a broadcast at WMAL in the six years he's been there, and trusts this frantic schedule won't break his record now.

Besides his morning show and evening sports show on radio, Gibbons does several TV shows. "Cartoon-a-Quiz," a sports show with a cartoon gimmick, is telecast Thursdays at 7:30 p. m. over WMAL-TV, and Gibbons does the Wednesday night wrestling coverage for them. Come the end of the month, he'll be doing boxing on Mondays for WMAL-TV.

YOU'VE heard of people being happy clear down to their toes. News that CBS television shows had the highest audience pull of any TV shows in New York made the CBS publicity man happy clear down to the finger he uses to make his typographical errors. Bragging about the matter in a press handout, he writes "this information . . . revels that CBS-TV programs . . . garner an average rating of 18.9."

WTTG will continue to carry the sixty-seventh annual tennis championships from Forest Hills through next Sunday. They begin at 2 p. m. every day and run till 6. It will be omitted today, however, in favor of the baseball game.

"Candid Mike" kids a model into thinking she's getting a screen test tonight at 8 over WMAL-TV. "Private Life of Don Juan," English film starring Douglas Fairbanks, sr., and Merle Oberon, is scheduled for 10 p. m. on that station.

Arnold Fine returns to WTTG Wednesday night at 7:30 with a longer (20 minute) show. Local night club acts will be featured again this season.

Walter Kiernan visits a school of modeling tomorrow night at 7:30 over WMAL-TV.

TELEQUERIES

I've heard of "mike fright" on radio and now I understand they use the expression "ike fright" on television. What does that mean? G. K. S.

"Ike" is an engineer's nickname for iconoscope, the kind of tube used in most of the early TV cameras, and still used in some. So "ike fright" is camera fright, and it's painful, whatever you call it.

Ann Sheridan in Lead

Twentieth Century-Fox has signed Ann Sheridan for the lead feminine role in "I Was a Male War Bride," which will be photographed on location in England and Germany.

Will Movie Herald Poll Tap 5 Youngsters for Oblivion?

By Richard L. Coe

POLLS COME, polls go, but one of the most interesting is always the showmen's choices for "Stars of Tomorrow."

This tally, taken by the Motion Picture Herald, has its eye on the future, but its reasoning is from the apparent past. Its voters are the exhibitors, who know more about movies, alas, than the most idealistic of reviewers. What the independent and circuit bookers say reflects how the ticket-buyers will spend their money.

Leading the pack of newcomers this year is Metro's 15-year-old Jane Powell, whom you're now seeing in "A Date with Judy" and whose next is "Luxury Liner." Metro (which used to boast "More Stars than There Are in Heaven"—remember?) seems to have a sound future, for of the ten stars showmen view most promising, three are in the M-G-M stable.

In second place is Cyd Charisse, then come, in this order, Ann Blyth, Celeste Holm, Robert Ryan, Angela Lansbury, Jean Peters, Mona Freeman, Eleanor Parker and Doris Day. Some certainly aren't newcomers to the theater world—the Misses Holm and Lansbury—and only one's a male, Ryan, who's been around a good deal, in the theater and elsewhere.

Dates From 1941

UNFORTUNATELY, the magazine's poll dates only from 1941, but even at that its results are interesting. That year the showmen picked, as "Stars of Tomorrow," Laraine Day, Rita Hayworth, Ruth Hussey,

NANCY KELLY JACKIE COOPER

Robert Preston, Ronald Reagan, John Payne, Jeffrey Lynn, Ann Rutherford, Dennis Morgan and Jackie Cooper.

The second year the future favorites were Van Heflin, Eddie Bracken, Jane Wyman, John Carroll, Alan Ladd, Lynn Bari, Nancy Kelly, Donna Reed, Betty Hutton and Teresa Wright.

In 1943 those tapped were William Bendix, Philip Dorn, Susan Peters, Donald O'Connor, Anne Baxter, Van Johnson, Gene Kelly, Diana Barrymore, Gig Young and Alexis Smith.

The fourth year you found these names: Sonny Tufts, James Craig, Gloria DeHaven, Roddy McDowall, June Alyson, Barry Fitzgerald, Marsha Hunt, Sydney Greenstreet, Turhan Bey and Helmut Dantine.

In 1945 it was Dane Clark, Jeanne Crain, Keenan Wynn, Peggy Ann Garner, Cornel Wilde, Tom Drake, Lon McCallister, Diana Lynne, Marilyn Maxwell and William Eythe.

The sixth year brought the names of Joan Leslie, Butch Jenkins, Zachary Scott, Don DeFore, Mark Stevens, Eve Arden, Lizabeth Scott, Dan Duryea, Yvonne DeCarlo and Robert Mitchum.

Last year's poll selected Evelyn Keyes, Billy De Wolfe, Peter Lawford, Janis Paige, Elizabeth Taylor, Claude Jarman, jr., Janet Blair, Macdonald Carey, Gail Russell and Richard Conte.

Most Made Good

WHAT'S happened to all those future stars you know as well as I. In a general sense, they proved sound choices, for most of them remain active. Some have dropped by the wayside, which was to be expected, and such veterans as Fitzgerald, Greenstreet and Miss Arden have enlarged their original cult of live-theater fans a thousand-fold.

But of all the showmen's ten "Stars of Tomorrow," a more jaundiced observer imagines that in 10 years' time at least five will have slipped into the forgotten; since there are nine girls, it's likely five of them will be domesticated by then.

Lansbury and Ryan

AND of the remaining five, perhaps the showmen will pardon a less box office-concious observer to make a prediction: the most established of them will be Angela Lansbury and Robert Ryan.

Why? Because I think those two are more nearly actors than the rest. Miss Holm, if she so desires, could still be shining, but she's a trifle unpredictable, and Miss Day, whose only film I missed—"Romance on the High Seas"—seems to have solid zing with all who know.

But Miss Lansbury, though young, has shown sound versatility, from "Gaslight" to "State of the Union." What's more, she's got theater in her blood; her mother is Moyna MacGill, an able British actress whom you may recall from the counter scene of "The Clock," and her great-uncle was Robert Mantell, the Shakespearean star who trouped the globe for 60 years. Quite apart from relying on looks, she has intelligence and exceptional knowledge of the theater and its allied arts. Yes, I think Angela's a star of the 1960's and I hope marriage won't tame her.

Seasoned Hand

RYAN, proven an able player in "Crossfire," "The Woman on the Beach" and "Berlin Express," is a mature fellow (in his thirties) who's had enough knocking around to be able to handle a career with a shrewd hand. He weathered the depression by working as a sandhog, seaman, salesman, miner, WPA laborer, photographer's model and bootleggers' bodyguard. His college training got him the job of dramatic coach in a girls' school and that took him to Billy Rose's celebrated production, "Clash by Night." That Clifford Odets drama didn't last long, but its clashes live on in theatrical history.

Yes, this annual sweepstakes of the Motion Picture Herald does give you food for thought.

After Dark

Yvette Chauvire and Roger Ritz, stars of the Paris Opera Corps de Ballet, are shown here in typical interpretive poses as they rehearse for performance. The famed ballet company will appear in Constitution Hall on October 6 and 7 during the first American tour ever undertaken by the troupe

Radio Class Now Has a Tinge of TV

By Sonia Stein

IT'S A SIGN of the times and all that, I suppose.

Last year American University was offering a B. S. degree with a major in radio, and had one course (optional) in television.

This year the major reads "radio and television;" all of the courses incorporate television into their subject matter. What used to be radio writing is now radio and television writing; radio production has become radio and television production, etc.

Gordon Hubbel, radio and television director for the university, says that turning out graduates with radio training but not television would not be keeping abreast of the times.

Must Study Radio

STUDENTS at A. U. must study radio along with television. No matter how much TV may rely on the techniques of motion picture production, stage production or good old vaudeville, it is still an offshoot of radio and is in the hands of the radio industry.

Most TV personnel is radio trained (most television stations are operated in conjunction with radio stations for that matter) and Hubbel feels that the "people best able to make out in television will have radio training, too."

Hubbel is determined to have his students learn from thoroughly qualified instructors. The courses are conducted by people actively engaged in radio and television work, the Federal Communications Commission or the National Association of Broadcasters.

Sample talent on Hubbel's staff: Hazel Kenyon Markel, WTOP director of public affairs, who also runs an annual short-term summer school at Wilson Teachers College in educational radio; J. Allen Brown, assistant director of broadcast advertising for NAB; Harold Stepler, chief announcer for WMAL and WMAL-TV; Van Beuren deVries, writer and producer for WMAL-TV; Eric Saxl, senior attorney for the FCC; Larry Beckerman, writer and producer for WTOP, and John MacKercher, production manager of WMAL.

Guest lecturers from New York's busy TV factories will be brought down when possible.

A Trifle Cynical

HUBBEL claims he always has been and still is as cynical as the next guy about being able to train people to take a place in any industry.

"You can't teach people to write or act but you can teach them the peculiar requirements of the profession," Hubbel says.

The scarcity of trained personnel for TV means that college training in the field may count for more than it does in some other professions. The newspaper editor can afford to look with jaundiced eye on a would-be reporter clutching a journalism degree in his hot hand, because he can always find experienced men. The station manager of a new TV station is often groping in the dark himself, and will be overjoyed to see prospective employes who know some-

SHADOWS cast by coming events take the shape of concerts—concerts by the National Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra, ballet companies, and varied solo artists.

Full details on the National Symphony season are not yet available, but they promise variety in conducting, repertoire, and soloists. Howard Hanson, Walter Hendl, Louis Potter and Georges Enesco are named as guest conductors for the year, with Hans Kindler and Howard Mitchell continuing as conductor and associate.

MISS TOLSON

Rudolf Firkusny, Blanche Thebom, Fritz Kreisler, Erica Morini, Artur Rubinstein, Helen Traubel, Salvatore Baccaloni, Isaac Stern, and many more will appear with the orchestra. We must wait for further word from the symphony office before we can judge what the year will bring in the way of program content. But there is good reason to hope that the Gershwin Memorial, announced earlier, will be killed, Deo gratias! If it happens, it will be due to no decision on the part of the management but a fortuitous booking by Constitution Hall itself.

Brilliant Series

DORSEY CONCERTS, reduced to two series this year, glitter with accustomed brilliance. One series includes Lily Pons, Jussi Bjorling, Vladimir Horowitz, Jascha Heifetz and Robert Casadesus. The other contains Ginette Neveu, whose violin playing has won some of the most impressive comments we have heard in a decade, together with Patrice Munsel, Ezio Pinza, the First Piano Quartet, Artur Rubinstein, and James Melton. Special events will include the Don Cossack chorus.

Patrick Hayes returns with a piano series built of Rudolf Serkin, Guiomar Novaes, and Artur Schnabel. To these he adds Burl Ives, Robert Merrill and the RCA-Victor show, Robert Shaw's Chorale with chamber orchestra, and the New York Philharmonic Orchestra under Bruno Walter. An event of particular interest is his announcement that the French National Orchestra will appear under Charles Munch, recently appointed to succeed Serge Koussevitsky next season as conductor of the Boston Symphony.

The Snow Concert Bureau again houses tickets for the Philadelphia Orchestra's concerts, with William Kapell, Nathan Milstein, Byron Janis, Zino Francescatti, Benno Moiseiwitch, and Gregor Piatigorsky on the solo line, Eugene Ormandy and Alexander Hilsberg running the conducting show. In addition, Snow's sells tickets for Hayes events, the Washington Choral Society, Barber Shop Quartet shebangs, and the Paris Opera Ballet, a specialty already attracting buyers.

SO MUCH for Constitution Hall and its large-scale concerts. We have always maintained that much of the best music and performance in town occurs outside the walls of that exclusive establishment. Richard Bales, responsible for the comings and goings of the musical to the National Gallery, is starting off his 1948-49 proceedings in auspicious fashion.

Nell Tangeman's concert tonight will be followed by a piano recital by Margaret Tolson, whose program is, as customarily, a superb example of what pianists today ought to play but seldom do or can. Following that, Bales has arranged a six weeks' festival of music by Mozart, than whom there simply is no whoomer, when .. comes to unceasing spontaneity of musical effulgence.

Three orchestral programs, entailing six symphonies, a chamber program, a piano recital, and a vocal ensemble, will do much to raise Mozart's name to that level of public recognition which Washington's larger ensemble seems determined to deny it. Further note of

'Indies' Dredge Up Some Rare Items

By John Crosby

RESUMING this column in the wake of talented guest writers is a risky business—so risky, in fact, that several of my two-faced friends have thoughtfully suggested that I remain on a sort of permanent vacation, simply digging up new guests from time to time. I have indignantly rejected this suggestion on the ground that literature would suffer severely from the absence of so many writers engaged in such a frivolous occupation as the writing of radio columns. To all my guests goes my heartfelt thanks. I'll take the damned thing back now.

I have devoted much of this vacation to listening to independent stations. This activity may seem on the surface a ridiculous way for a radio columnist to spend his vacation but it isn't necessarily.

To the independents I'm indebted for a number of rare items for my collection. It was an independent, or indie, as Variety refers to them, which introduced me to a song called "Three Cent Stomp." It now resides in my stomp collection next to "Boola Boola Blues." "Three Cent Stomp" hasn't much in the line of melody but with a title like that you don't need a melody.

They Like Baseball

INDEPENDENT stations in New York and, I suppose, elsewhere are obsessed at the moment with baseball. Consequently, I listened to more baseball than my wife considered strictly necessary, picking up rare flowers of language and intellect along the way. The choicest find I owe to Ted Husing. Speaking of a Dodger-Cub game, Husing was overheard to remark, not once but several times: "One half of the game is one third gone."

This bit of mathematics I haven't worked out yet. One half of the ball game, the way I figure it, would be four and a half innings, and if you can get a third of that, Husing, you're a better physicist than I am.

Another quaint custom among the indies is the replaying of condensed ball games—or reconstructing them, as the man says—hours after they have been played and won or lost. It's a form of masochism indulged by Dodger fans who listen to the Bums drop a double-header to the Cubs in the afternoon, and then, for some darn reason, feel compelled to hear it all over again at night. Inning by inning the announcer reconstructs the sordid affair, assisted by a sound-effects man who dubs in the crack of bat, the roar of crowd.

Singing Commercials

THERE is a lot of unsung talent on the independent stations. Dinah Shore and Frank Sinatra used to sing duets in blissful obscurity over WNEW in New York. Arthur Godfrey was just an early-morning disk jockey in Washington not so many years ago and Henry Morgan used to talk nonsense over a local independent at 10 in the morning. New York's independents boast announcers, singers and even—bless us all—comedians who sound just as good and a lot fresher than some of the 30-point Hooper entertainers.

The singing commercial blossoms on the independent more flagrantly than anywhere else. One has distressed me all summer because it doesn't scan properly. There's something the matter with this singing commercial and, after lying awake a good many nights, I've finally figured out what

How Quick Promoters Turn A Fast Buck in Hollywood

By Howard C. Heyn

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 11 (AP).—Be a movie producer; Make big money! No investment required!

It happened during the war. That's one reason why independent moviemakers are having a tough time today. Banks are growing wary. The established independents are suffering along with the fast buck boys.

Some independent producers are talented and respected men who make good pictures. Some can finance a million-dollar film with $100,000 or less.

But the lads who never lay out any cash of their own (even when they have it) are far more fascinating. They're not really producers at all. They're promoters. They'd do just as well in cheese, or Persian rugs.

Talk is the promoter's sole tool. The only thing he won't talk about is how he puts together an entire picture deal, right up to the point where the cameras are ready to roll, without exchanging a single dollar or signing a single document.

First Opening

LET'S say the promoter meets a screen writer at a cocktail party. He never identifies himself as a promoter, of course. He's a man-about-Hollywood, a sharp dresser, a table hopper. He says he knows where he can get money to produce a picture when he finds a good script and a suitable star.

The writer always has a script, perhaps it already has made the rounds of studios.

Usually he knows a star who likes the story—because it's entirely different from anything he has ever done.

The writer figures this is his chance to unload. He gives the promoter a 90-day option on the script, on speculation. The promoter takes the script to a director, preferably one who has been having front office trouble and wants to make pictures his own way. The director is interested but suggests certain revisions.

Back to the writer goes the promoter. He offers the writer five per cent of the film's anticipated earnings to fix up the story.

Assume that the star's regular fee is $50,000 a picture. He's free at the moment, and agrees to defer $40,000 of his salary in exchange for a 10 per cent share of profits. His $10,000 in cash will come from the production budget.

Director, Too

ON the same basis, the director defers $15,000 of his usual $20,000 salary, for a five per cent cut. The promoter asks the director to break down the script (figure the cost per scene) so that he can draw up a budget. He may even give the director another one or two per cent to do this.

The point to remember at this stage is that good directors and writers do get into such deals. Since they put up no money, what can they lose? Percentage is the key to the whole scheme.

Our shoestring operator now sets up his budget—say $500,000. Then he goes to a small releasing company which distributes independent pictures. He shows what he has—star, script, director and budget. The company agrees to distribute his picture in return for, say, 35 cents of every dollar taken in at the boxoffice.

Armed with release, star, script and director, the promoter goes to the bank. He can borrow 50 per cent of his budget if and when he puts up the other 50 per cent. This is where the rich backer comes in.

The star's press agent has now spread the word, and all these preparations look impressive to a

'Mrs. America' Really Stirs Up a Fuss

By Saul Pett

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 (AP).—The tenth annual fuss to select the country's most beautiful wife comes up Sunday.

You may not be holding your breath, but the sponsors are. The "Mrs. America" contest has shown a great capacity for producing unscheduled twists, along with a lot of curves.

This year about 40 regional winners from all over the country will be competing for the title and $5000 in cash prizes. The site for the finals this time has been moved to Asbury Park, N. J., pointing up the event's rivalry with the "Miss America" contest annually held in nearby Atlantic City. But the "Mrs. America" contest has grown accustomed to changes, sometimes sudden changes.

She Had to Leave

ONCE, between the semifinals in August and the finals in November, a finalist discovered she had to drop out; she was pregnant. Another entry was nervous about having her picture taken and it developed she had a husband of 15 years standing.

See MRS., Page 10, Column 3.

Mrs. Jean Gammon of Caribou, Me., left, is ready, as soon as she serves her titular lord and master, for the Mrs. America contest finals being held today in Asbury Park, N. J. At right is Mrs. Edward Chamberlain of Cleveland, who won the title in 1938, the contest's first year

Film Writer Says Taxes May Reform the Movies

By Cynthia Lowry

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 (AP).—"Motion pictures are more complicated than apartment house plumbing," said a golden-haired lady. She lit a cigarette and proceeded to hack off the hand that has fed her for 34 years.

FRANCES MARION

"When Hollywood tracked the word 'colossal' to its lair, pictures lost their significance . . . Now it's in the era of messages, of art; the intellectuals have taken over and films aren't simple and direct any longer . . . The poor people who write for the films! Film writers are like Penelope—knitting their stories all day just to have somebody unravel their work by night . . ."

The speaker was no $1500-a-week hack, back in New York with a dropped option and a foreclosure notice on the second swimming pool. It was Frances Marion, importantly identified with the industry for more years than most women will admit having birthdays. With some disappointment but without rancor, she has deliberately put Hollywood behind her.

Some New Careers

PAST the first fine flush of youth, well heeled, good looking, Miss Marion is launched on a number of new careers. Her first historical novel, "Westward the Dream," has just been published; she has just finished a three-act play in collaboration with Anita Loos for fall production on Broadway. She has started a second play with Miss Loos, is well into the second novel of a proposed trilogy—and is going to get into television writing as soon as possible.

Miss Marion hit the films first when she was a youngster, in 1914, when D. W. Griffith bought her scenario for an early Mary Pickford film. After that she wrote almost all the Pickford scripts. In the intervening years she has written some 325 movies, directed and produced many others.

Television, she said, is "now where motion pictures were when sound came—"you couldn't walk through a studio without hearing everybody trying for pear-shaped tones."

Hooray for Taxes

HIGH taxes, Miss Marion feels, is the best thing that has happened to Hollywood in years.

"People have to pay such high taxes that money doesn't mean as much as it did when you could keep most of it," she said. "In the long run, I think it means that we may get back to some good films, good writing, and it may take away the fear of not holding a big job. Big money meant that anybody would take any insult, any humiliation—anything—to keep it coming in."

Laughton's Ten Best

By The Associated Press

WANT TO KNOW a distinguished actor's opinion of the 10 best films of all time? Charles Laughton, in selecting his 10 favorites, picks only one of his own pictures, "Ruggles of Red Gap." His reason: "Because of that unbeatable team—Leo McCarey and Abraham Lincoln." Remember Charlie's delivery of the Gettysburg address? Here are his other choices:

"The Gold Rush" and "The Kid." "Chaplin is our greatest living actor."

"It Happened One Night," because "it brought us Colbert and Gable as a team."

"The 39 Steps." "Hitchcock is the modern master of melodrama."

"Best Years of Our Lives." "It has something important to say about the moment."

"Vaudeville," because "Emil Jannings opened a new field in picture making; great camera work of Karl Freund."

"Great Expectations." "First time the screen captured the true spirit of a literary classic."

"Smiling Lieutenant," because of "the art of Ernst Lubitsch and Maurice Chevalier."

"Broken Blossoms," because of "the terrifying scene of Lillian Gish locked in the closet."

Mrs. America Contest Was Begun in 1938

five children but no marriage license; she was a common law wife. In still another case, a husband had to be persuaded to hold off divorce proceedings so his wife could remain in the contest. He did, but she didn't win.

But the biggest snafu that ever developed in the contest centered around the pretty head of Mrs. Janis Pollock of Columbus, Ohio, in 1946. This, the sponsors called their worst headache. English translation: It was the most publicity they ever got.

Mrs. Pollock, a beautiful, 24-year-old mother of four children, won the contest but had to turn down the crown and the $2500 prize money. The winner was obligated to make a 20-week national modeling tour. This, Mr. Pollock would have none of. He insisted she stay home and take care of the children. She did and Mrs. Fredda Asker, Anderson, S. C., who had placed second, was crowned.

Began in 1938

THE contest was started in 1938 as an attraction at Palisades (N. J.) Amusement Park by a publicity man, Burt Nevins, who got the idea from his young bride. From 1938 to 1943 it was a production conducted at and for the park. In 1944 there was no contest "because of the war" and the next year national commercial sponsors began to take it over.

In its time the contest has compiled some interesting statistics. Its oldest contestant was a 69-year-old woman from Newark, N. J., who had two grown children and one grandchild. The contestant with the most children was a Detroit woman who had six.

In 10 years, the lightest Mrs. America has been Mrs. Edward Chamberlain of Cleveland, Ohio, who won in 1938. Her statistics: Age, 19; weight, 114; height, 5, 3½; waist, 23; bust, 34½.

The biggest winner was Mrs. Peggy Diehl of Tucson, Ariz. Her statistics: Age, 18; weight, 140; height, 5, 9; waist, 25; bust, 37.

How to Turn A Fast Buck In Hollywood

vacationing businessman who would just as soon risk some of his money as pay income tax on it.

There really are such tycoons. Sometimes they willingly face losing money for the sake of society contacts, or to learn the business.

Time to Sign

WHEN the capitalist puts up his $250,000 it's time to sign papers. Articles of incorporation are filed. Studio space is leased. The bank loan is completed. The rest of the cast and crew is assembled.

The promoter assigns a healthy cut of the profits, maybe 20 per cent, to the backer. He already has given away 20 per cent, to writer, director and star.

But here's the gimmick: These are shares of the net profits. First to come out of the gross receipts is the 35 cents per dollar due the releasing company.

The promoter, however, isn't interested in the earnings. He gets, as producer, five per cent of the budget in salary. He controls the budget, so whatever he can save is also his. He will realize at least $25,000 even if nobody ever goes to see his picture in a theater.

That's why he accepted an unattractive release. The script has been kicking around Hollywood for a year, with no takers. The star is essaying a role he never tried before. The director will have to work too fast to take any pains. He'll shoot the picture in about 20 days.

The result, cinematically, is a question mark. It may turn out to be an entertaining little program picture. It may prove less than passable. In either event, don't expect the promoter to care. He's already working on a new deal.

Story of Pennsylvania Dramatized

Dramatizing the history and traditions of the Keystone State and its contributions to the Nation, David O. Selznick has completed "Pennsylvania," a short subject to be used as a special feature of "Pennsylvania Week," a State-wide celebration starting September 26 and lasting until October 2.

Gov. James H. Duff recently selected Selznick, among others, as an outstanding son of Pennsylvania and requested him to produce the film. Selznick was born in Pittsburgh. Selznick both appears in the film and narrates it.

"Pennsylvania," written and directed by Cecil Barker, assistant to the producer, will be shown in all motion picture theaters in the State during the week prior to the celebration.

Tangeman Singing Tonight at Gallery

MUSIC for the week is found in a single program, that of Nell Tangeman's solo recital this evening at 8 at the National Gallery of Art.

It is unlikely that the whole concert season, which may be said to open with this event, will produce any finer selection of music than Miss Tangeman lists. With the assistance of Robert Cornman as accompanist, she groups songs of Berlioz, Mahler, Theodore Chanler, and Milhaud, with an aria from Stravinsky's "Oedipus Rex" thrown in. Tangeman has appeared twice in Washington with the Cathedral Choral Society in Bach's B Minor Mass and was also heard last year at the National Gallery.

TANGEMAN

There, in concert with the choir of the National Presbyterian Church under Theodore Schaefer, she sang Aaron Copland's "In the Beginning," which she had sung earlier in the year in that church. Miss Tangeman has sung both the Copland and the Stravinsky in New York, under Robert Shaw and Leonard Bernstein, respectively. She will appear later this year with the National Symphony Orchestra in Mahler's "Das Lied von der Erde."

FOR other music, we are reminded that organ recitals are played thrice weekly at the Washington Chapel of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, by Wade Stephens, organist of the church, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, at 8 p. m.

The United States Soldiers' Home Military Band continues its Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evening concerts at 6 p. m., under Franklin B. Charles.

Announcements which promise much music later in the year come from various societies. The Washington Choral Society resumes rehearsals Tuesday evening at 8. Place: Central High School, 13th and Clifton sts Director, Louis Potter. Registration and auditions for new members at 7:30. Repertoire for season: Messiah, Creation, a modern work, and Beethoven's Choral Fantasy, the latter to be performed with the National Symphony Orchestra.

The Cathedral Choral Society starts its season Monday evening at 8. Place: St. Alban's Parish Hall, Massachusetts and Wisconsin aves. Director: Paul Callaway. Auditions for new members at 7:30. Repertoire for season: Mozart Mass in C Minor, and Bach's St. Matthew Passion.

The National Lutheran Chorus rehearses Mondays also, beginning at 8 p. m. Place: Luther Place Memorial Church, 14th and N sts. nw. Director: R. E. Snesrud. Auditions starting tomorrow evening at 7. Repertoire includes a cappella Christmas program to be sung in Washington and Baltimore.

THE AMERICAN GUILD OF ORGANISTS schedules its first meeting for tomorrow evening at the home of Mrs. George Fraser, 3831 McKinley st. Deen Robert Ruckman sends word of a garden party, summary of summer affairs, and plans for the approaching season.

The group with the longest title, the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America, announces a second annual Harvest of Harmony for Constitution Hall, Friday, October 22. The local chapter totals 500, with a national enrollment of 25,000.

The Sligo Chapter of the Federated Music Clubs will hold its annual audition October 24. This year's contest is open to pianists 25 years old or under. A recognized sonata or concerto is required, with a $100 prize and a possible orchestral engagement in addition to a recital.

Details of the audition can be obtained from Mrs. Ivory Allen, president of the Sligo Federated Music Clubs, 717 Kennebec ave., Takoma Park, Md. P. H.

Matter of Taste, Not Quantity

these programs will be announced before the festival begins on the 26th of this month.

Phillips on Schedule

SOON the Phillips Gallery will open its Sunday afternoon and Monday evening doors to concertgoers. Other organizations, music clubs, church choirs, and similar related associations will undoubtedly present their programs to a waiting public.

Evidence of this comes from the Rybier Music Club, which announces a piano recital by Claudette Sorel, to be played in the Washington Club, Monday, November 1. The Arts Club, embassies, schools, and even business houses all contribute to the musical year. Good planning on the part of all these agencies will assure the entire community of well-rehearsed performances of appropriately chosen programs in every field.

The problem is not one of quantity but of taste. Before the first note of the new season is fired, we beseech every performer, young and old, amateur and professional, to pause and think of the effect his music should have on the listener—to recall the number of times a given work he has elected to display in public has been heard by that same audience—to think for a moment of the great music lying unheard from year to year, or ruined by improper presentation.

Such deliberate consideration would do much for the quality of our coming concerts.

The Washington Philatelist

Plate Numbers Problem Getting Bigger at Agency

By William M. Stuart

THE problem of supplying collectors with plate numbers has become one of first importance at the Philatelic Agency. The large number of new commemoratives has added to the burden and it is necessary to keep in stock thousands of dollars worth of sheets in order to meet the demand. The agency rules must be enforced in order to insure a just distribution of all plate numbers issued—patrons are required to purchase 50 stamps each from the ½-cent to 3-cent values inclusive, 20 stamps each from the 4-cent to 10-cent inclusive, 10 stamps each from the 11-cent to 50-cent inclusive and blocks of four each from the $1 to the $5 inclusive.

The agency cannot possibly fill position orders when less than full sheets are requested, therefore, in view of the difficulty in obtaining position sheets it is sometimes impossible to fill orders promptly. The agency made an attempt to have certain postoffices handle the rest of the sheets with plate numbers removed, in accordance with regulations, but this was unsatisfactory. There are collectors who sometimes obtain plate numbers at postoffices, which is satisfactory in an emergency.

THE 3-cent commemorative stamp for the Fort Kearney Centennial to be released September 22 at Minden, Nebr., will be purple.

The number of covers canceled on the first day sale of the 3-cent Oregon Territory stamp, August 14, was 365,898. Stamps sold totaled 826,750, valued at $24,802.50.

There were 362,170 covers canceled on August 25, the first day sale of the 3-cent Harlan Fiske Stone and the 724,022 stamps sold amounted to $21,720.66.

The Capital Precancel Club will meet tomorrow evening at the home of Rolston Lyon, 217 Rittenhouse st. nw., at 8 o'clock. Maj. C. C. Fisher will give a report of the convention of the Precancel Stamp Society, Inc., held recently in Los Angeles, Calif., which he attended.

The Postoffice Department has authorized the use of special canceling machine dies bearing the slogan, "Remember—Only You Can Prevent Forest Fires." The dies include a design depicting a charred tree stump. The cancellation will be used at the following offices in October: Columbia, S. C.; New York, N. Y.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Baltimore, Md.; Washington, D. C.; Atlanta, Ga.; Memphis, Tenn.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Cleveland, Ohio; Boston, Mass., and Brooklyn, N. Y.

Collectors may obtain cancellations by sending prepaid self-addressed envelopes under cover to the postmaster at any of the above-named offices with the request that the cancellation be applied. The cancellation collector is increasing in number and cancellations of many varieties are eagerely sought.

AT THE Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., Tuesday evening an auction was held, President Ellery Denison officiating as auctioneer. Manager Casey again calls for more material and members are invited to hand in material as early as possible. There was an extra busy activity in the new issue field and the bourse members were all well supplied. There will be another meeting on Tuesday evening at Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw.

Popular Records

'Satch' Out On a New 12-Inch Set

NEW YORK, Aug. 28 (U.P.).—The original Mr. Jazz, Louis Armstrong, is featured in a three-record, 12-inch album by Victor titled "Louis Armstrong All Stars." The six numbers were recorded at a Town Hall concert in New York last year given by a six-piece group led by the maestro. A genuine collector's item, the sides include "Rockin' Chair," "Ain't Misbehavin'," "St. James Infirmary" and "Save It Pretty Mama."

Duke Ellington, the imaginative jazz pianist and composer, has a new Columbia collection of original instrument numbers, "Mood Ellington." In "New York City Blues" Ellington gives an impression of the sophistication of the Big Town. "The Clothed Woman" is a highly stylized piece that describes the ennui of the conformist. "Lady of the Lavender Mist" is a dreamy, mysterious number.

NEW SINGLES: Two of Claude Thornhill's standard orchestra favorites are played in languorous rhythm, "La Paloma" and "Arab Dance" (Columbia) . . . Another popular orchestra version of the classics that is particularly good is Paul Weston's "Clair de Lune" on two sides of a 10-inch record (Capitol) . . .

A rowdy good time is had at "The Chowder Social," with Benny Lee singing in front of Cyril Stapleton's band (London) . . . Eddie Heywood's original boogie piano is outstanding on "The Way You Look Tonight" and "The Moon Was Yellow" (Victor) . . .

A thumping ballad that promises to become obnoxiously popular is Art Lund's "Hair of Gold, Eyes of Blue" (M-G-M) . . . That funny man, Arthur Godfrey, gets off some of his cleverest, though slightly risque, dialogue in "Turkish Delight" (Columbia) . . .

Other good new releases: Johnny Mercer's "Louisville Lou" (Capitol) . . . "En Tampa," by Miguelito Valdes' orchestra (Musicraft) . . . The Jesters' "Hawatha's Mittens" (Apollo) . . . "Serenade in Blue," sung by Ray Eberle (Signature) . . . "Competition Blues," with Grace Smith (National) . . . Leo Guarnieri's quintet on "Gliss in the Dark" (M-G-M) . . . "Every Time," sung by Jean Sablon (Victor).—DAVID C. WHITNEY.

Stokowski to Hold Baton on Tour of N. Y. Philharmonic

Prior to its regular New York season, the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra will make a two-week tour, sponsored by Columbia Records, starting September 20, which will take it as far West as Wisconsin and to cities in New England. The entire tour of 14 concerts will be conducted by Leopold Stokowski.

Columbia will also sponsor the orchestra's spring tour, scheduled to begin April 18, 1949, during which Stokowski will share conducting honors with Bruno Walter, the orchestra's musical adviser.

The orchestra's fall tour opens in Syracuse on September 20 and closes in Portland, Me., on October 3. Other concerts will be played in the following cities: Cleveland (September 21), Detroit (September 22), Chicago (September 23 and 24), Madison (September 25), Milwaukee (September 26), East Lansing (September 27), Columbus (September 28), Buffalo (September 29), Utica (September 30), Rochester (October 1) and Boston (October 2). The Milwaukee and Portland concerts will be matinees and the rest will be in the evening.

Our Players Ice Cold, Conductor Declares

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Our orchestra players are "ice cold," they play from the top, or the brains, while in Holland they are "emotional" and play "from the heart," says Frieder Weissmann.

Conductor of many RCA-Victor releases, and regularly of the Scranton Symphony, German-born Weissman has just returned from three weeks with the big Hilversum (Radio Avro) Orchestra. Bernstein, Monteux and Munch were also guest conductors this summer, and Weissmann will return for three months next year.

"Technically and individually American orchestras are superior," he says, "but the music-making in Holland is better."

'Tiefland' First for Fall

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—"Opera '48," a cooperative venture, with Siegfried Landau as music director and Albert Felmar as stage director, will begin the season with Eugen d'Albert's "Tiefland" at the Joan of Arc Theater September 30.

The Record Player

Sibelius 2d Fair as Done By Ormandy

By Paul Hume

SIBELIUS: Symphony No. 2. Philadelphia Orchestra under Ormandy Columbia 759. $7.25.

HUME

Any conductor recording this score competes with one of the great recordings of Koussevitsky and the Boston Symphony. Ormandy is not the man for that kind of rivalry. His forte in conducting is precisely in the opposite direction. The Siebelius second is a long, tortuous work for a conductor unless he has the miraculous gift of keeping rather invertebrate phrases alive. Ormandy, by a series of unwarranted retards, does just the opposite, so that the climax of the symphony is finally achieved by default rather than by building up to it.

Philadelphia tone is as sumptuous as Boston's, but suffers from being fused into one single hunk of gorgeousness rather than sorted out into the bright choirs for which the composer wrote.

Charpentier: Depuis le jour; also: Offenbach: Elle a fui, la tourterelle. Nadine Conner, soprano, with Metropolitan Opera Orchestra under Max Rudolf. Columbia 72540-D. $1.25.

Miss Conner has the voice for Louise's aria, but she sounds as if she had no idea of the meaning of the words. Phrase after phrase comes out with no true feeling. It is one of the most literal, uninspired accounts of Louise's rapturous outburst in memory. Quite the contrary is true of her voicing of Antonia's touching song from the final act of Offenbach's comic tragedy.

Here Conner is at home, and her voice expresses the meaning of the text with simple ease. Why do not singers today work for the last shade of nuance rather than for the most obvious applause-getting devices?

PHILLIPS: Skyscraper Fantasy; also: Curzon: March of the Bowmen. Concert orchestra under Charles Williams. Columbia 72527-D. $1.25.

Music by Muzak. Well played and recorded. If you like this with your meals, here's your dinner disc.

Corelli-Pinelli: Suite for strings. Philadelphia Orchestra under Ormandy. Columbia 12836-D. $1.25.

It sounds superb. Philadelphia strings are among the world's most famous. The music of classic elegance, well played. Final measures are too drawn out and inflated for us, but otherwise this is a great record.

Sullivan: Iolanthe Overture. Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra, under Sargent. Columbia 72526-D. $1.25.

Top G & S, sung a few weeks ago at the Sylvan Theater, may have left you wanting some souvenir of Iolanthe. Here's the overture played to perfection by a great orchestra. Unusual treat for G & S'ers.

FIELD: Nocturnes in E Major and Minor. Denis Mathews, pianist. Columbia 72525-D. $1.25.

The nocturnes of John Field preceded those of Chopin both in point of time and style. These two charming examples are wonderfully articulated by Denis Mathews, a young British pianist of real substance. The major key work is known to many Washingtonians as the "Midi" Rondo of the John Field suite, often heard over radio stations using records. It is a rollicking page, neatly contrasted in the piece in minor. A fine piano single of unusually graceful music.

Crosby Classics: Bing Crosby with orchestra of Lennie Hayton and Jimmie Grier. Columbia 762. $4.90.

If you like Crosby like I like Crosby, this set will fill a soft spot in your heart. For 20 years the Bingle has been singing these things with superb timing, and an easy style no one else quite touches. Plenty of the long-haired singers I generally review could learn volumes about diction, timing, and subtle inflection from this toupeed master.

Set includes "Sweet Georgia Brown," "Let's Put Out the Lights," "Temptation," "Ghost of a Chance," "Moonstruck," "Did You Ever See a Dream," "Black Moonlight," "I've Got to Pass Your House." Just about perfect in every way.

"Pulqueria," lithograph by Prentiss Taylor, currently on exhibition at the U. S. National Museum of the Smithsonian Institution

Pan American Union Show

A. U. Looks South of the Border

By Jane Watson Crane

AMONG artists and art students in Latin America the spirit of inquiry has risen, as it has in this country. In some countries below the border academic training prevails unchallenged in the art schools, many of them government-supported. In others, the workshop idea of experimentation in the creative arts is beginning to gain ground. Artists are trying to blaze new trails for themselves, just as they are here. Among the young particularly one encounters a natural healthy curiosity to find out what the other fellow is doing. Except through occasional art publications which move between countries, there is no satisfactory way to find out.

The group which has been teaching and working in the art department of American University here in Washington has dedicated itself far more than most to experimentation. Some of the results of their inquiries into the nature of painting and its elements, especially color and design, are seen in a show assembled at the Pan American Union. Later the university is contemplating sending a small display of these paintings to Latin American countries, under the auspices of the Pan American Union. If this is accomplished, it will mark a new type of exchange, less formal than any which has prevailed in the past. As we understand it, the show is viewed not as an end but a beginning, aimed not only to stimulate groups in Latin America to follow suit, but also other groups in this country.

Often Shown Here

WITH the exception of Tworkov, who came to Washington to teach this summer at American University for the first time, painters represented are frequent exhibitors in the Capital. Some began with academic training, as did Leo Steppat in Vienna, and William Calfee in this country. Sarah Baker studied in Paris, and Robert Gates at the Phillips. Lazzari made his start in Italy, where at one time he drew portraits for publications, at another made a study of Renaissance murals. The two youngest, John Galloway and Joe Summerford, owe their development principally to the university, where they held classes of their own for the first time this summer.

Since the basis for most of the painting is intellectual as well as intuitive, it is bound to have a limited audience. But because work of this nature is confronted with apathy, often with downright opposition, in this country, does not necessarily mean that the response will be similar elsewhere. Our guess is that the nonrepresentational character of most of the paintings will be less of a hurdle in Latin American countries than it is in the United States. We should imagine that the exhibit would be mainly of interest in universities and art schools, where there is concern for painting for its own sake.

Throughout, the handling of color is a dominant characteristic, from Robert Gates' imaginative "Fireflies" to John Galloway's "The Child's Holiday." The sharp-eyed will find in the latter's "Expectant Figures" more than a bow to Portinari, and within the group evidences of allegiance to similar ideas and methods.

ALMOST all the galleries in Washington have remained open through the summer, but there there have been relatively few new shows. This month the fall programs begin.

The Whyte Gallery is starting with a display of summer work by Washington artists, opening tomorrow. Among exhibitors will be Herman Maril, Edward Rosenfeld, Alice Acheson, Carl Nyquist, Jack Perlmutter, Jack Lewis, and John Galloway. At Barnet-Arden Gallery there is a one-man show of paintings by Frank H. Alston, jr.

Gallery Notes

National Due To Open Art Show Sept. 19

FRANCIS HENRY TAYLOR, director of New York's August Metropolitan Museum of Art, has written a book called "The Taste of Angels," to be published by the Atlantic Monthly Press, Little, Brown & Co., September 22.

On September 19 the National Gallery of Art in Washington will open an exhibition of American Graphic Art from the eighteenth century to the present day. Sources will be its own collections and those of the Library of Congress.

Lithographs by Prentiss Taylor will be shown in the graphic arts division of the Smithsonian until October 3.

Although Prentiss Taylor has recently devoted a good part of his time to painting, and by no means considers himself exclusively a print-maker, it is in the latter medium that his reputation is most firmly rooted. His black-and-whites cannot be pigeonholed, but in the main they do fall into certain categories. At one time he was particularly preoccupied with the vestiges of nineteenth-century elegance standing up, sometimes rather forlornly, against the rapidly advancing encroachments of industrialism. He has done prints of old churches and buildings in the South and New England.

A Mexican trip evoked another series. In later work he has essayed more abstract themes. But invariably his moods and ideas are brought forth in forms that are at least in some part representational. He is always a careful composer, with a well-developed sense of design.

Since 1923 the graphic arts division has been presenting one-man and group shows by contemporary print-makers, the great majority being Americans. This year, in addition to Prestiss Taylor, shows during 1948-49 will include work by Boris Margo, Dox Thrash, Adja Yunkers, Leslie Cope, Minna Citron, and Irving Amen.

Entries for the 13th Annual National Ceramics Exhibition, to be held at the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts in November, are due in regional center beginning September 16. Prizes totaling $2575 have been offered in pottery, ceramic sculpture, and enamels. The show, as previous years, will be circulated to various art museums in the country.

Helen Hittson, Los Angeles originator of "Ace Drivers," stopped by traffic light, jots down license number of well-driven car ahead to reward driver.

Police check license files for name of driver who will be rewarded for "Alert, Courteous and Expert" driving.

Seeking only to reward individual driver, Los Angeles secretary starts nationwide campaign for safe driving

WHEN HELEN HITTSON, of Los Angeles, Calif., decided to reward an alert, courteous and expert driver, she didn't know what she was starting.

The comely brunette, secretary to an architect, drives 30 miles to and from work and has often been irked and aggravated by the lack of common courtesy on the part of many drivers.

One recent afternoon, however, she saw one driver who was so expert, so courteous, that she jotted down the license number of the car. Inquiry disclosed that the driver was Mrs. Yvonne Pessano, of Burbank.

Miss Hittson wrote Mrs. Pessano a congratulatory letter in which she said: "Courteous drivers should be rewarded. I am enclosing a check for $10 as a token of thanks."

Ten dollar check is reward.

The local paper heard about the check and sent a reporter to investigate. When his story appeared, the news services picked it up. It was printed from coast to coast.

The idea caught on immediately. A Los Angeles group, calling itself, "Ace Drivers," (Alert, Courteous, Expert) was formed. Members watch for good drivers and reward them with cash.

Numerous other "Ace" groups have been formed throughout the country.

Helen Hittson only wanted to reward courtesy. Instead, she launched a popular safe-driving campaign. THE END.

Dwight Eisenhower

"Schools must construct a foundation of understanding"

A SHORT TIME AFTER he decided to replace his five-star khaki uniform with the more prosaic garb of the president of New York's Columbia University, Dwight D. Eisenhower, speaking to the assembled undergraduates on a campus in his native Kansas, observed that ". . . underlying all else, our schools must construct a foundation of understanding on which we may base wise individual and national decisions."

"Ike" chose Kansas State College at Manhattan, only 45 dusty miles from his home town of Abilene, to present his very definite position on the education of the nation's youth. Host for the occasion was a younger brother, Dr. Milton Stover Eisenhower, the president of the college.

As he spoke, General Eisenhower might well have flashed back four years earlier, to the summer of 1943, when he was instrumental in effecting Milton Eisenhower's decision to resign as associate director of the Office of War Information to head his Alma Mater. In response to a query at that time, the General had cabled from overseas: "Take it. A large part of the kind of peace achieved after this war rests on the principles laid down in America's schools."

Columbia's 13th president

The situation was reversed last summer when General Eisenhower accepted the presidency of Columbia. At that time, a reporter asked Milton Eisenhower if his brother had consulted him before making his decision. "I'm not going to say anything about that," the Kansas State College president smilingly replied. "But I'm happy about his appointment and his acceptance, and I have every reason to believe he'll make a great university president."

The late Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, General Eisenhower's illustrious predecessor at Columbia, expressed a similar opinion as he enthusiastically hailed the appointment. "It recognizes the now well-demonstrated fact that Columbia is much more than an institution of higher learning in the old-fashioned sense of those words," declared Dr. Butler. "Columbia is an institution of public service and world-wide influence. General Eisenhower's great ability and remarkable character in dealing with world problems are precisely what the world needs today in the administration of a great university."

General Eisenhower's family background is scholarly. His father spoke and wrote German fluently and was a student of other languages. The elder Eisenhower understood classical Greek well enough to read daily from his Greek New Testament.

Nor by training is the General exactly a novice in the field of education. Not by choice, he sat out World War I in this country instructing America's eager doughboys in matters military.

Although General Eisenhower readily admits he doesn't know a great deal about the technique of teaching, he has very definite ideas about education. He is far more concerned with aims than methods, the most important being a firm belief in freedom of thought. In fact, that is the keystone of his philosophy of education which he brings to Columbia on the eve of its 195th academic year.

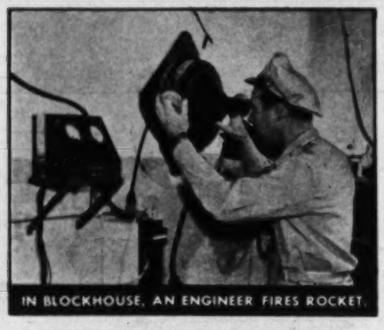
Crane on rocket platform at Army Ordnance Department's White Sands Proving Ground in New Mexico holds 14-ton German V-2 rocket before it is fired.



IN BLOCKHOUSE, AN ENGINEER FIRES ROCKET

V-2 Enemy Rockets Probe the Sky For Benefit of Science

BY FAITH TERRY

I SAW $100,000 GO UP in smoke and flame the other day—all in the interests of science.

The experiment was conducted at the White Sands Proving Ground in New Mexico where, since late in 1945, the U. S. Army, Navy, and Air Force and a group of civilian scientists have been studying conditions in the upper atmosphere by shooting off captured, German V-2 rockets.

The V-2s, easily the most impressive weapon developed by the enemy during World War II, were uncovered in a German cache shortly after V-E Day and now are serving the ends of peace.

In their efforts to determine conditions in the stratosphere, the ionsphere and the E Layer, White Sands workers are launching the 46-foot V-2s not for maximum range—as the Nazis did when aiming them at London—but for maximum altitude, sometimes as high as 114 miles straight up into the sky. Instead of packing them with lethal explosives, the engineers and scientists stuff them with instruments including cameras for photographing the earth.

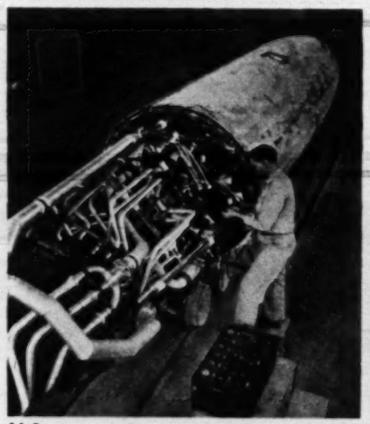
The cost of launching a V-2 is usually around $100,000, paid for by the participating scientific institutions and the government, which believes the expense is justified by experiments having peaceful as well as martial applications.

"When we learn enough about the upper atmosphere," I was told at White Sands, "we someday may be able to use guided missiles for mail deliveries and passenger flights."

Every "Shoot" is a Big Event

At White Sands, the V-2 launchings — called "shoots" — are big events. Everyone knows beforehand when a shoot is about to take place, and on Shoot Day the highway leading to the reservation is crowded with spectators, and the proving ground bristles with dignitaries. From those who have heard of the shoots, but who haven't attended them, the staff has received hundreds of letters, many requesting permission to book passage on a rocket.

"Perhaps they don't realize," a White Sands official told me, "that a rocket passenger would suffocate rapidly on the way up. But even if he could go up —how could he get down in one piece?"



V-2 comes in four parts: warhead, propulsion unit (above), fuel tanks and the tail.

Rocket is launched from concrete blockhouse; protective roof is 27 feet thick.

One Permanent Cost $15...the TONI only $2

Like the winsome Miller twins, you'll say your Toni Home Permanent is every bit as lovely as an expensive beauty-shop wave. But before trying Toni you'll want to know—

Will my hair take a TONI?

Of course. Toni waves any kind of hair that will take a permanent, including hair that is dyed, bleached or baby-fine.

Must I be handy with my hands?

Not at all. If you can roll your hair up on curlers, you can give yourself a Toni. It's as easy as that!

Will I go through that "frizzy-stage"?

Not with Toni. You'll have a frizz-free natural-looking wave right from the start. For Toni Creme Waving Lotion gently coaxes your hair into curls . . . leaves it soft as silk, with no kinkiness, no dried out brittleness, even on the first day.

How long will my TONI last?

Your Toni wave is guaranteed to last just as long as a $15 beauty shop permanent . . . or your money back.

Will my TONI wave be loose or tight?

With Toni, you can have just the amount of curl you want . . . from a loose, casual wave to a halo of soft ringlets. Just follow the simple directions for timing.

How much will I save with TONI?

The Toni Kit with plastic curlers costs only $2. You can use the plastic curlers again and again. So, for your second Toni Wave, all you need is the Toni Refill Kit. It costs only $1 . . . yet there's no finer permanent at any price!

Which is the TONI twin?

Pictured above are Ann and Jean Miller of Long Island, New York. Jean, the twin at the right, has the Toni. She says, "When Ann saw how beautifully my Toni Home Permanent turned out, she wished she had been the Toni twin. From now on, it's Toni for two at our house."

Ignited, the rocket leaves its platform slowly, eventually attains a speed of more than 3,500 miles an hour, sometimes climbs 100 miles into the air.

Peace is the aim at White Sands

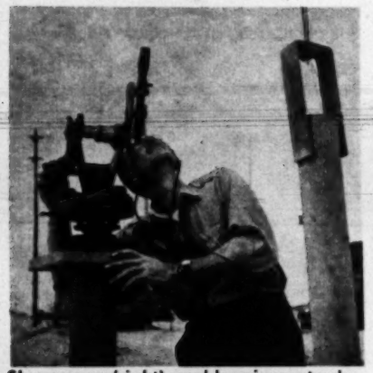
MY GRANDSTAND SEAT at the launching of a rocket was located more than a mile from the site of the shoot. But I'm glad it wasn't any closer.

Accompanied by Lt. Alex Szabo, White Sands photographic officer, I chose an observation station on a small grade in the desert as the spot from which to watch the shoot. From this point I could hear a voice from the control blockhouse nearby broadcasting news relayed from the launching platform. Finally the voice said "X minus one" which meant we had one minute to go. Then the voice began to tick off the remaining seconds . . . "Ten, nine, eight, seven, six, five, four, three, two, one . . . fire!"

For an instant, there seemed to be a pause. Then a spectacular and brilliant red flame suddenly shot from the rocket's tail, and the rocket began to rise very slowly—almost anti-climactically—into the sky. I felt a quick shock of disappointment which dissolved immediately when a tremendous roar of sound swept over the desert. It was the loudest and most terrifying noise I had ever heard, a blast of such power that it almost drove me to my knees. All I could think of, I remember, was how much I wanted that terrible noise to stop.

By this time, the V-2 was climbing fast—20 miles a minute—and in the few seconds it took me to recover from the effects of the blast it had shot so high that I could see it only by craning my neck so far back that it hurt. Then suddenly there was no rocket at all, just a spark of flame and a puff of smoke. In less than a minute, it had disappeared entirely and I never caught sight of it again.

When it was over I felt tired and weak. I looked down at my hands and found they were shaking. I showed them to Szabo who laughed. "That's nothing," he said, "my hands shake, too, and I've seen every one of these things go off except the first one."



Sky screen (right) enables viewer to determine if released rocket keeps course.

Radar vans at White Sands are "off-limits" to visitors who flock to the V-2 tests.

Telescope has been set up eight miles from the launching site to track the rockets.

Great American Adventures

Football Season

WITH THE FOOTBALL SEASON about to invade us, the nation's 20 million gridiron fans have begun to order their tickets, test their lungs, demoth their racoon coats and jazz up their cars for trips to the ball park.

In anticipation of two hectic months of pigskin thrills, PARADE assigned cartoonist Syd Hoff to preview the coming season in pen and ink sketches.

In Hoff's opinion, only half the action in a football game takes place on the playing field. Of much more interest to him is what goes on in the stands, on the bench, in the locker-room and in front of the television set down the street. His gridiron heroes aren't talented tailbacks at all but mistreated substitutes, crying coaches, nagging wives, frenzied—but frustrated—fans.

"Why didn't I marry a half-back — instead of a half-wit?"

"Before I pull the trigger, will someone say we'll do better in the second half?"

"Wilfred was the hero of the game, Mother — he blocked a kick!"

"I'm sorry, Mr. Sparks, you can't help tear down the goal-posts here."

"I'm afraid Czarslopski's been warming the bench too much." THE END.

American Mermaids

A look at the native beauties who starred in the London Olympics

ALTHOUGH THE 1948 OLYMPICS are gone and half-forgotten now, sports fans and admirers of feminine pulchritude are not likely to forget the show put on in London by America's mermaids. It was an eye-filling performance—in more ways than one.

Ever since the days of Annette Kellerman, U. S. women swimmers have ruled the waves, and the London games were no exception. Top individual stars, in performance and personality, were Vicki Draves, petite Los Angeles secretary, who won both diving events, and Ann Curtis, a stalwart blonde, our best free-style swimmer. Honors went also to statuesque Brenda Helser, pert young Patsy Elsener and attractive Zoe Ann Olsen.

Swimmer Brenda Helser, of Los Angeles, typifies skill, grace, good looks of American mermaids. In London, she lost free-style title to Ann Curtis but won with U.S. relay team.

Second best in high dive was pretty, 19-year-old Patsy Elsener, of San Francisco.

Double winner was Vicki Draves, who won highboard and springboard titles.

Top U. S. swimmer today is free-style champion Ann Curtis, another Olympic winner. Most women swimmers view their sport merely as an avocation. THE END.

Boneless Fried CHICKEN

Delightfully different and delicious—Boneless Fried Chicken with fluffy rice and sliced broiled-in-butter mushrooms, cauliflower with hot mayonnaise.

BY BETH MERRIMAN

FRIED CHICKEN you can cut with a fork! The trick is to remove all the bones before the chicken is cooked. And you'll be surprised to discover how easy it is to do this with a sharp knife and kitchen shears. Serve as pictured above. Begin the meal with chilled apple juice, and top it off with brick ice cream and coffee.

Boneless Fried Chicken

Have two frying chickens disjointed at market. Trim meat raw from bones with sharp, pointed knife, keeping pieces as large as possible (save bones and bony pieces for soup). Beat two eggs slightly; add two tablespoons water. Dip chicken pieces first in egg, then in one cup prepared pancake mix. Sauté slowly in fat in deep skillet, turning frequently, until golden brown on all sides and done. Drain on absorbent paper. Yield six to eight servings.

"Call the POLICE!"

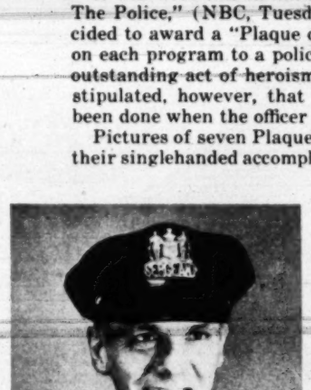
NETWORK RADIO PROGRAM HONORS NATION'S OUTSTANDING COPS FOR ACTS OF HEROISM

CRIME FIGHTING, despite the great scientific advances of the last 20 years, still remains a primitive affair for the nation's 500,000 law enforcement officers.

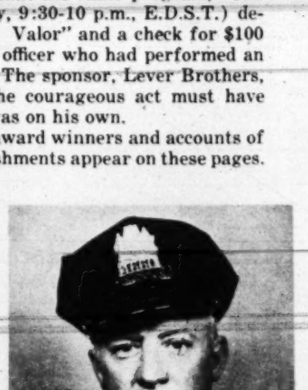
Not infrequently, a police officer has nothing more scientific than his hands, a nightstick and a revolver to enforce the law—often at great risk to his life.

It was with this in mind that the radio program, "Call The Police," (NBC, Tuesday, 9:30-10 p.m., E.D.S.T.) decided to award a "Plaque of Valor" and a check for $100 on each program to a police officer who had performed an outstanding act of heroism. The sponsor, Lever Brothers, stipulated, however, that the courageous act must have been done when the officer was on his own.

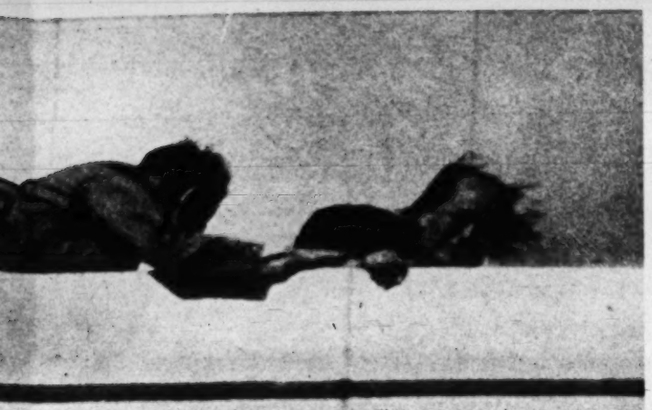
Pictures of seven Plaque award winners and accounts of their singlehanded accomplishments appear on these pages.



Cruising in Baltimore, Md., area where four taxicab holdups had been reported, Sergeant Joseph Davey saw a cab stop and its light blink out. As he approached the cab on foot two bandits opened fire; one shot ripped into Davey's chest. Davey emptied his gun into the back of the cab killing one and wounding the other gunman. Badly wounded, Davey required nine blood transfusions but returned to duty after a month.



Patrolman William E. Mohr, of the Philadelphia, Pa., police force, rushed into a blazing home to rescue a woman who was attempting to jump to safety from the second floor. While fire swirled about them, he calmed her, and firemen removed her by ladder. Mohr set off to find her husband, but stumbled headlong down a flaming stairway and suffered first and second degree burns. The husband was rescued.



ledge of the Appraiser's Building and heard her shout, "I'm going to jump," Breen and other policemen responded. With the help of a ladder, the Inspector climbed to the ledge from a lower floor. He crawled along, managed to force the woman's legs down. She was hauled to safety.

Patrolman Raymond Kurth, of Madison, Wisc., entered a hotel on a routine check one night and saw a man leaving. The clerk shouted that he'd been held up. Kurth gave chase, fired two shots over the head of the hold-up man who took refuge behind parked cars. By stealthy maneuvering, Kurth got his quarry silhouetted against street lights and warned him to surrender or be killed. The armed bandit meekly gave up.

While patrolling his Bridgeport, Conn., beat, Patrolman Albert Meehan saw two gunmen dragging a battered victim into an alley. Meehan's shout to stop was greeted by two wild shots. The cop returned the fire, hitting one of the gunmen, who continued firing, emptying his revolver at the policeman. Then he crumpled to the ground. Meehan's fire had killed him. The other gunman, who got away, was later caught.

A chase that started just outside Odessa, Mo., and wound up 45 miles away near Kansas City, resulted in the capture of five bandits and loot from 12 robberies. The pursuer was Trooper S. S. Abney, of the Missouri State Highway Patrol. Alerted to watch for bandits, he saw their car and began the chase. He finally caught up with them and rammed them off the road. Other police converged. The capture was made.

Seconds after he was ordered to the scene of a bank robbery, Motorcycle Officer Robert C. Maier of Los Angeles, Calif., saw the hold-up car careen around a corner and crash against a wall. Using the car as a barricade the bandits opened fire on pursuing police. Maier drove his 'cycle behind the crashed car, started shooting. When it was all over, two bandits had been wounded and one surrendered. THE END.

Parade of Progress

BY PETER DRYDEN

FOR THE NAMES OF MANUFACTURERS OF THE ITEMS DESCRIBED BELOW, SEND STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED ENVELOPE TO "PARADE OF PROGRESS," PARADE, 405 LEXINGTON AVENUE, NEW YORK, 17, N. Y.

FOR DAUGHTER, a handy little kit contains all materials needed to make an intriguing new doll. Two doll heads are included for variety and double pleasure. Fabrics are gay, bright cottons, and the doll faces are ready to be attached. Kit comes with step-by-step directions which make process simple for any child. The manufacturer suggests that mother can use the kit to make dolls for gifts, too.

UNIQUE NEW LAMP STAND lets you create your own table lamp and change its appearance at will. All you have to do is to place figurine, vase, flower bowl, planter, clock or any other desired object on the base, then add a shade to match. The stands are 24 inches high and are available in four different finishes. They come completely wired, are approved for safety and ready for use.

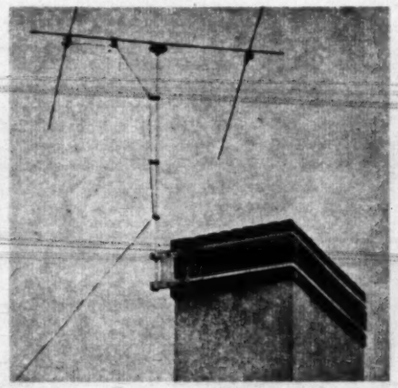
CAR TRAY that fits on front or back seat of any car is designed to make eating easier at roadside stands, drive-in restaurants and theaters. It minimizes food juggling, and you can have your drinks right with your meals. It prevents accidents with children, too. Stamped-aluminum tray attaches instantly, can be folded away when not in use.

Moisture-resistant electrical wire, other conveniences

FOR PIPE SMOKERS, the very latest in gadgets is a holster, made of saddle-stitched cowhide, which is designed to hold any pipe securely and keep the smoker's pockets free and clean. Like any gun holster, this pipe-holder slips conveniently onto trouser belt.

NEWEST ELECTRICAL WIRE has a rubber insulation that actually improves the more it is soaked in water. It is particularly suitable for underground lead-ins and for wiring damp basements and is expected to find wide application in homes, offices, factories and other buildings. The insulation's high moisture resistance not only increases wire's life but minimizes the danger of short circuits.

DRY MOP OF A NEW TYPE is said to combine broom action with dry mopping, sweeping as it dusts. It's made with long outer yarn strands and short inner yarn tufts, giving it a "vacuum action" which inhales and retains all dust and dirt particles as mop is lifted from floor, yet releases dust when the mop is shaken. Its padded construction also eliminates scratching or marring of surfaces.



SIMPLE SOLUTION to television antenna problems is this new chimney-mount antenna base. Installed in ten minutes with screw driver and pliers, it requires no drilling of roof or surrounding concrete or brick, thus eliminating common landlords' objection. It mounts neatly on any chimney or pole by means of straps—also can be screwed to the corner of building or to the end of a post.

NOW YOU CAN MAKE accurate tailor tacks with this new gadget which eliminates the worst chore of home-sewing. Just twist the knob to mark both sides of the garment in one operation. No sewing, and there are no stitches to cut or pull out. The tacker comes complete with chalk and is designed so that chalk colors are easy to change for various markings and for all colors of fabrics used.

UNUSUAL LOOKING, this server is said to be quite effective for cheese, cake and other foods. It combines the features of a keen-edged knife—with blade curved upward for cleaner, more accurate cutting—and a flattened, short fork that keeps food from splitting while it is being transferred to the plate. Use of this "combination knife and fork" also helps to cut down on washing chores.

Our aim is to give you more than you expect

Take General Electric refrigerators, for example. A new and more efficient mechanism gives 1/3 more food storage with no more floor space needed . . . A new television tube gives brighter pictures you can see without sitting in the dark . . . The new G-E Sealed Beam headlamp gives you 12% more light on the road. Constant improvements through research and engineering make General Electric products serve you faithfully, deliver more than you expect.

BLOW THE DIME OUT—one of hundreds of tricks perfected by cartoonist Bob Dunn of New York. Place a dime flat in bottom of tapering glass; place a quarter over it. Tell a friend to get dime out without touching it or glass. When he gives up, blow into the glass. This tips over quarter; dime pops out.

Introduction to PARLOR MAGIC

Most difficult-looking feats are generally easiest to perform

MAGIC AS IT WAS PRACTICED by masters like Thurston and Houdini, and the legerdemain of the parlor amateur, have always held a great fascination for the uninitiated.

In the early '20s, when Thurston's feats were standing audiences on their ears, one of his spectators at a matinee was Bob Dunn, today a popular cartoonist, but then a wide-eyed youngster, fascinated by what he saw.

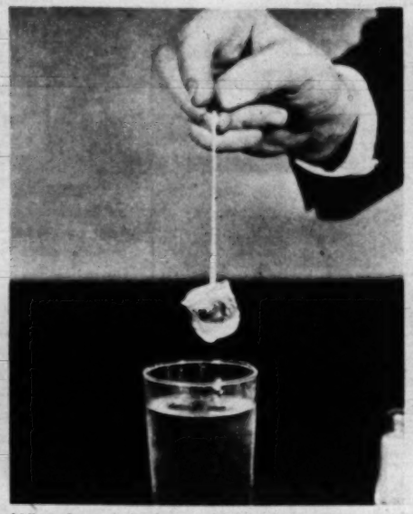
Bob secured a meeting backstage with Thurston, coaxed a trade secret from him and got the advice never to become a professional.

Bob heeded the advice, but his interest was so great that he set out to become one of the country's leading amateurs.

Over a period of the last 20 years, Dunn has explored his hobby thoroughly and is convinced that the hardest looking tricks are really the simplest. Here are a few from his book, "Magic For All," recently published by Citadel Press.

Tricks anyone can master . . .

LASSO THE ICE CUBE. Drop an ice cube into water-filled glass and hand your guest a small string lasso. Tell him to hook the ice cube.



When he admits he can't, lay the cord over the cube, sprinkle both with table salt. Wait until one freezes to the other. Gently lift out both.

THE SHIRT OFF YOUR BACK. Stooge (right) for trick prepares by draping shirt over shoulders, buttoning cuffs and upper buttons. With jacket and tie added he looks normally dressed. But when magician removes tie, unbuttons cuffs, he can pull the shirt right off stooge's back.

EAT THE CANDLE. Peel an apple, and carve it into shape of a candle. A small piece of walnut serves as a wick. The nut will burn when a match is applied. After you burn it for your audience, blow it out and eat it. It's delicious and amazing. But be sure the nut is cool. THE END.

A young grandmother, Gertrude Aiken (left) of Fremont, Mich., does capable woman-sized job at home and in factory.

At Gerber Baby Food plant, Mrs. Aiken has job of supervising all work done by women.

Woman Worker

Mrs. Gertrude Aiken, a Fremont, Michigan, grandmother, is one of 18,000,000 American women who work for a living

IN THE NEW DESIGN for living, modern woman has made a place for herself in business as well as in the home. As recently as July of this year, statistics show that of more than 61,000,000 employed Americans, nearly 18,000,000 are women. For every four working men, at least one woman is also on the job.

During the war, our women-folk did yeomen service in uniform and in overalls. And those who worked at home on the production front quite frequently had to raise their children and maintain their households at the same time.

Those women, and their daughters, are in peace production now. And their contributions toward turning the wheels of progress are indisputably manifold.

This is the story of one of those 18,000,000 women at work. It is about Mrs. Gertrude Aiken, a widow and grandmother from Fremont, Michigan. It is the story of a modern working-woman who gives new meaning to the phrase, "a woman-sized job."

Plant supervisors hold daily conference to eliminate some of the wrinkles in producing millions of cans of baby food. The Fremont factory turns out 38 products including, 19 strained, 16 chopped foods, and three cereals. Gertrude has been accepted by foremen as "one of the boys," and her suggestions, if practical, receive serious consideration.

Mrs. Aiken puts in a full day at Gerber's, starting at 7 every morning. Above, she looks in on plant warehouse.

Feature length moving picture is shown to the employees during their lunch hour periods Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

Gertrude Aiken likes work and does a man-sized job

MRS. GERTRUDE AIKEN demonstrates quite conclusively that a woman's "rightful place" can almost always be determined by herself.

Born in the mid-west, Gertrude was raised on a farm and learned early about long hours and hard work. Her high school education was interrupted when her mother became seriously ill, and the girl had to take care of her. Later, she married, set-up house and raised a family.

Today, having barely rounded the age when life is supposed to begin, Gertrude is already a widow and a grandmother. But don't picture her as one in black and weeping. Hardly. Gertrude is a working girl and a very optimistic young woman.

At the Gerber Baby Food plant in Fremont, she holds the responsible job of head "floor lady," supervising all the women workers there. At home, she has raised three children, keeps house, keeps horses, cans countless preserves, nurses a productive garden and finds time to hunt and fish.

Weighing a tipping 118 pounds and reaching an upright 5 feet and 2 inches, she stores a great deal of verve in her "little package." Her friends describe her as a "terrific girl with a tremendous amount of energy." Without boasting they also claim she "can do anything that needs to be done, from waxing floors to mowing the lawn and training horses, besides holding an important job."

She is still youthful looking and attractive, and her cheerful attitude reveals nothing of the personal grief she has known. A few years ago, her father, who lived with the family, died. Then, a year ago last December, her husband passed on. Theirs had been a simple but enduring love story. They met when they both were quite young, and were married when Gertrude was all of eighteen. Their three children were born in Fremont, and when they were grown, Gertrude went to work at the Gerber plant to help her husband pay the bills and assure further education for the children. Maxwell John, the eldest is 23 now and with the Forest Rangers in Oregon. Ulelah Joy, 21, is married and has a daughter two years old. The youngest, Lois, 19, lives with her mother and works at the local phone company.

It was a happy home. The children and the parents were deeply devoted to each other. Mr. Aiken's death was a shattering blow. The Gerber executives urged Gertrude to stay home and rest for as long as she liked, but the young widow had other ideas. She had got hold of herself and her family, and decided that work was the best prescription for all.

Has a Highly Regarded Place in Community Life

It turned out to be all of that and more. It gave Gertrude a measure of independence. And, with the Gerber plant employing about 1,000 of Fremont's 3,000 inhabitants, she achieved a highly regarded place in the community life.

Last year, Grandma Gertrude Aiken earned $2,500. Her expenses—running the house, clothes, entertainment, gifts for the children and Vicki Lynn, the granddaughter—takes a great part of her income. Yet she manages to save enough to plan improvements on the house. What started out as a hobby—keeping horses—may eventually turn into a paying proposition. Maintenance for the two mares, the gelding and the stallion colt cost $400 last year. But the sale of the Palamino colt brought in $500. When she retires she would like to raise colts and sell them for saddle horses. Meanwhile, she intends remaining on the job at Gerber's.

One thing Gertrude means to do often, is to go on hunting and fishing trips. Together, the Aikens did a lot of both. She'll keep that rendezvous always.

Grandma Aiken has a deep affection for horses. She rides skillfully and often. This particular Sunday afternoon, her sister Naomi joined her on fast ride to nearby lakes. Gertrude keeps own small stable.

Work supervisor, housekeeper, horse raiser, gardener—they're but few of her numerous occupations.

Ending her usually busy day and night, Mrs. Aiken writes letter to her son, Maxwell, a Forest Ranger.

In the evening, sister Naomi (at Mrs. Aiken's left) drops in with family for card game. Gertrude's daughter, Lois, is at mother's right. The young widow-grandmother is a successful hostess. THE END.

The 1948 waiter as posed by Sid Caesar of "Make Mine Manhattan" is a heartless fellow who holds out hand for tip while refusing table space.

SID CAESAR

HE LAMPOONS RISING COST OF LIVING IN UNIQUE SKIT

EVERYONE WHO HAS GONE OUT on a date in Manhattan recently will know just what Sid Caesar means when, in his inimitable style, he contrasts an evening in 1938 and one this year. Caesar, master of double-talk and crown prince of satire, won the season's Donaldson Award for the "best debut performance in a musical." The musical is "Make Mine Manhattan;" Caesar's hilarious but sword-edged skits carry the show. Among the best: his satirical take-off on an evening of "fun" in the city. The results: As many laughs as your funny bone can bear.

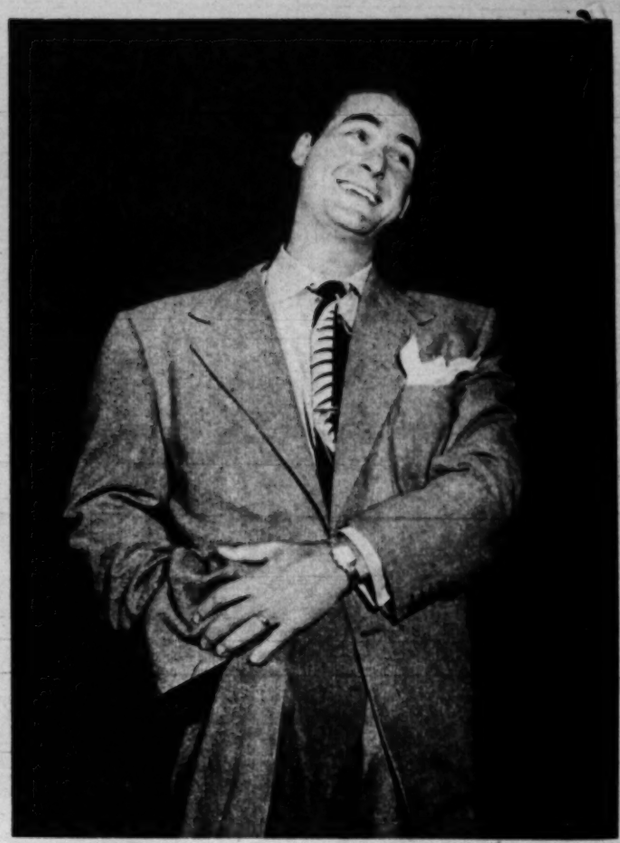
1938

IN THIS HAPPY YEAR, Caesar steps out with five dollars in his pocket. The cab driver is delirious with joy at a ten cent tip. Caesar is royally welcomed at Pierre's with special canapes and champagne on the house; the theater ticket-seller pleads with him to buy a 25-cent seat. At a Chinese restaurant, Caesar dances to Dorsey's band with plenty of room for whirling. When he takes his girl home, he still has change rattling in his trouser pocket.

Dialogue from "A Guy, A Gal A Date." Copyright Max Liebman and Sid Caesar.

"Hello, baby, I'm comin' down to get my steady, we'll do the town. I've got five dollars, and it's burning a hole in my pocket."

"Hey, there, taxi. 'Yes sir, step right in and I'll take you there.' Here we are, how much? 'Thank you. Some trip . . . a ten cent tip!' "



"Well, baby, here's your door; this was a night, everything's right. We hit the town and didn't we rock it, and I've still got change in my pocket!"

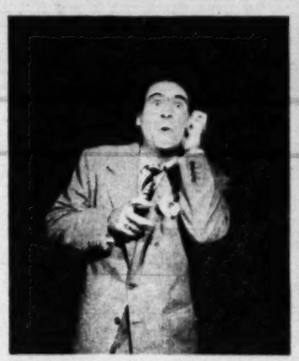
" 'Welcome, Monsieur, Pierre's is yours. Boy, bring the canapes—on ze house an' ze drinks in ze best crystal glasses. Nothin' too good!' "

" 'Step right up, immediate seats. Stage show, screen show and that ain't all: free dishes, bingo, lotto, bango, please buy tickets.' "

"In Chinese restaurant, nice booth for two; Tommy Dorsey playing, too. Gee, baby, I'm in a trance; what room—let's dance!"

1948

ALL IS DIFFERENT in 1948. When Caesar takes out his girl, cabs won't even stop for him. At Pierre's he gets a brush-off. He waits in line for hours at the theater, gets inside only to discover that the movie has just ended. At the Chinese restaurant, he gets no food, is pushed around in a space barely big enough for a mosquito. Finally, Caesar and his girl walk home; he has spent two months' pay, done nothing but struggle. His girl is mad at him. Thus the story of a guy and girl in Manhattan!



"Hello, baby, better hurry, we won't be able to get a table. I'm comin' down, comin' fast; got two months' pay, hope it lasts."

"Taxi, hey, wherever yer goin'... 'I'm not going that way.' Please, mister, please say yes! 'All right, git in. Gittin' soft, I guess.' "

"Gee, I'm all in. I'm tired, I'm hungry, got a pain in my chest. I need a rest. Spent a fortune and all I did was fight. What a night!" THE END.

" 'Sure, you're in Pierre's, but a one hour wait. Step back in line; who d'ya think you are? Your old table? That's a laugh. You wait!' "

" 'Get in line.' Where's the line? 'Don't ask; just keep walkin' till you find it.' What's playing? 'What's the difference? Pay up!' "

"Here's Foo Young Low—remember me? 'No booth, no table, not a chance . . . Wait four hours!' Let's dance . . . 'Git off my feet.' "

Sandbox on the mall is one of the main attractions at Boston's "Playland" for the children of shopping mothers. These two tots build castles in the sand while awaiting Mother's return from a store.

Check Your Children, Lady?

Boston's city-owned "Playland" cares for 5,000 kids every day

THE CITY OF BOSTON, always concerned with its young, has started something the reverberations of which, like those from the shot fired at Concord, may be heard around the world — a "park-your-child" service for mothers.

The service, called "Playland," is run from July to October with city backing and is located in a vale off Lafayette Mall in Boston Common, near the downtown shopping district. There, mothers shopward-bound may check their young and proceed unmolested and uninhibited.

That the children enjoy this service as much as their mothers is attested by the playground's record. In its short history, Boston's "Playland" has welcomed an average of 5,000 children a day — and seen but few tears. "And," says the playground's director, "we haven't lost a single child yet."

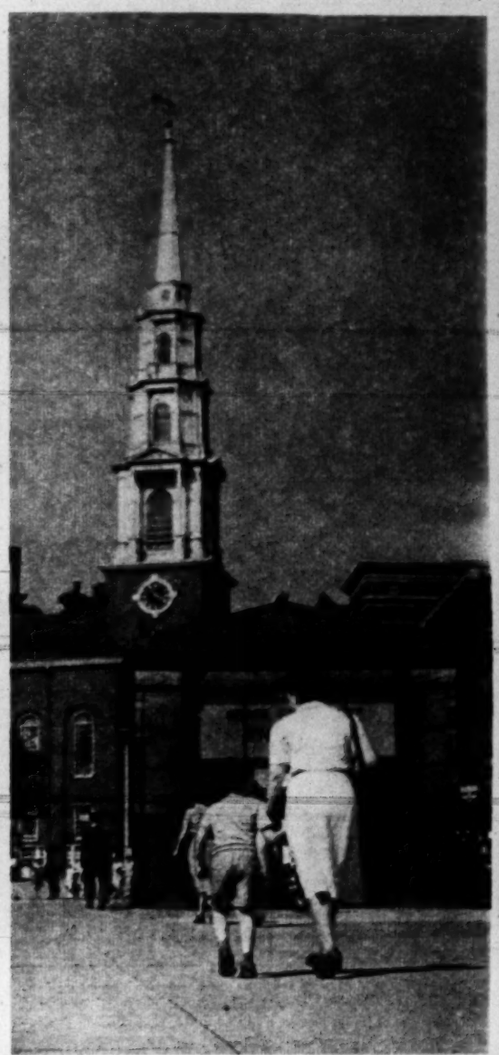
At gate to "Playland," children are greeted by Mrs. Alice McGee, director of park, who takes them over.

Romance begins. Young gallant shares ice cream stick with girl friend. Problem is to restrain their appetites.

While Mother shops, these youngsters play checkers. Most kids stay at park two hours, but some remain all day.

Short snooze on greensward follows lunch. "You'd be surprised," says Mrs. McGee, "how many want naps."

Story-telling hour is conducted by Mrs. McGee at tour. By the time she has finished tale, mothers usually arrive.



When Mother comes, small son leaves for home and supper. Both have benefited from park. THE END.

Modeling gives children opportunity to express selves in clay, also provides welcome chance to make a mess.

All the basic operations and processes of woodworking—everything from how to avoid warping to full directions for cutting each of the common joints. Wood turning—the different kinds, roughing, facing, sanding, and finishing; drilling, boring, mortising, spinning, polishing. Hundreds of repair jobs and new-construction projects, both inside and outside the home, are fully explained with diagrams and every fact you need to get the very best results. The new-construction work ranges from making a chair to reshingling a roof; from screening a porch to building a coal bin.

Making your own tables, chairs, benches, bookcases, cabinets, etc., is great fun and a real money-saving hobby. Step-by-step pictures show you every move in the use of tools and materials.

Here is practical information about every electrical job the home mechanic may undertake around the house or in the home workshop. Principles of electricity—volts, amperes, ohms. Tools, materials, and requirements of National Electrical Code. Complete, fully illustrated explanations of every step in various operations of general electrical work—splicing, soldering, taping, testing, etc. Installation of various signalling systems—bells, buzzers, and alarms. Wiring methods for power and lighting circuits. Complete projects for the home, such as BX wiring a room, and wiring a garage in conduit are made clear by diagram and photographs. Also, there are instructions for adjusting oil burners, refrigerators, pumps, etc.

Cut-away views make it easy to repair all household appliances—vacuum cleaners, irons, radios, fans, etc., etc.

Every practical fact about concrete, plastering, stucco, brick work, concrete-block and glass-block construction is made clear in this handbook. Every repair or new-construction project described can be accomplished by a man who never before has done masonry work. It describes all tools, and explains just how to use them. How to specify materials and estimate quantities. How to build forms; mix concrete, color it, make it watertight. Material charts. Types of construction. Various bonds. Working with concrete blocks. Kinds and sizes of glass blocks. Glass-block construction—full-mortar joints, set-in-wood construction, etc., etc. All facts in this great volume are fully and clearly explained.

Improve your property without special skill or expensive tools. Make your own repairs: do plastering, stuccoing, etc. Build a brick fireplace, a flagstone walk, concrete steps, etc., etc.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

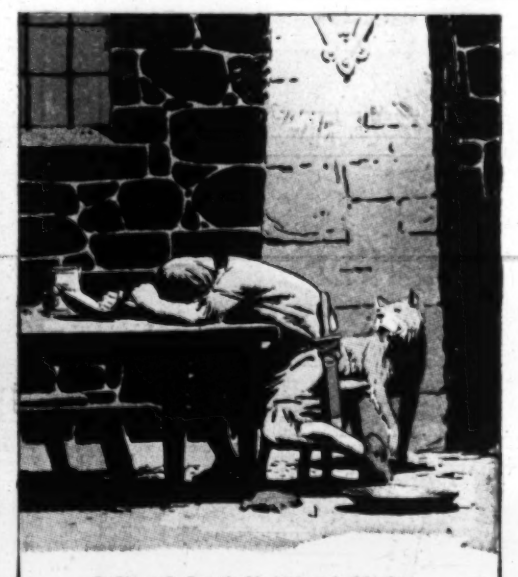
By Harold R. Foster

Synopsis: PRINCE VALIANT TAKES DRINK FOR DRINK WITH HIS GRIM HOSTS, FOR HE MUST APPEAR AS CRUDE AND BRUTAL AS THEY. THEN COMES THE TOAST TO KING ARTHUR AND VAL LEAPS TO HIS FEET, TANKARD RAISED HIGH. TOO LATE HE REALIZES HE HAS BETRAYED HIMSELF. HIS TERRIBLE COMPANIONS RISE IN OMINOUS SILENCE.

NOW THE PRESENCE OF DANGER CLEARS VAL'S NUMBED BRAIN. HE LAUGHS: "SO YOU WISH TO DRINK TO ARTHUR? THEN, COME, JOIN HIS OTHER MONGREL FOLLOWERS!"

HE STANDS, SWAYING, PRETENDING NOW TO BE VERY DRUNK. "SHAME ON YOU, DRINKING THE HEALTH OF OLD KING ARTHUR WHOM YOUR NOBLE FATHER HATES!"

"BUT I WILL FOLLOW THE GREAT KING TOURIEN AND HELP HIM RULE THE WORLD! ALREADY I HAVE PLANS!"



THEN HE FUMBLES FOR HIS BENCH, SITS DOWN HEAVILY AND FALLS ASLEEP ACROSS THE LITTERED BOARD.

THERE IS A LONG SILENCE AND VAL VENTURES A PEEK. THE THREE LIE SPRAWLED IN DRUNKEN BUT PEACEFUL SLUMBER. SO HE KNOWS THEIR SUSPICIONS ARE ALLAYED.

THE SMOKY TORCHES BURN OUT AND ONE BY ONE THE CANDLES SPUTTER AND DIE. ONLY THE HEAVY TREAD OF THE SENTRIES BREAKS THE STILLNESS. IN THIS DREAD FORTRESS DWELLS A SMALL, MAD KING WITH MAD AMBITIONS.
